1 DEAD, 1 DYING, 2 INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Delegates to Democratic Convention in Faneuil Hall Victims of a Fatal Head-on Motor Collision on Steep Hill

T. F. CALLAHAN IS KILLED

Ex-Senator Cassidy of Adams Bruised and Thomas P. Welch Mortally Hurt as Car Smashes into Robert Bennett's Machine

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 8.—In an automobile collision between Palmer and Wilbraham this afternoon, one man was killed, one fatally injured and two others slightly hurt. All four were delegates to the Democratic State Convention and were returning from Boston to their homes in Adams.

Thomas F. Callahan, proprietor of the Cheshire Inn in Cheshire was instantly killed.

Thomas P. Welch of Adams, proprietor of the Grey Lock Inn was terribly injured and may die.

Ex-Senator Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams, suffered contusions of the body and a bad scalp wound.

Frank C. Wietauper of Adams escaped with slight injuries.

Ex-Senator Cassidy placed Vahey in nomination at the convention and all four were Vahey delegates.

Children in the Crash.

Robert Bennett of South Natick was driving the car which collided with the delegates. In the car with him were two little girls who had asked for a ride about a mile back as they were on their way to the Palmer Fair. All three were thrown out of the auto but escaped with slight bruises.

The accident happened at 3 o'clock, about three miles outside of Palmer, on the slope of a long hill. Callahan was owner of the auto, and was acting as his own chauffeur. As the Callahan auto dashed down the hill it met Bennett's machine on the way up. The road is narrow at this place, but both drivers thought there was room to pass. Bennett asserts the Adams men did not turn out enough. Cassidy declares that Bennett did not turn out.

At any rate, the inner wheels of both machines interlocked. Callahan's machine swung around and darted off the road, bringing up with sickening force against a huge tree. Bennett's car slewed around but did not overturn.

Callahan fell between the car and the tree, and his head was crushed into a shapeless mass. Welch was hurled through the air and fell in a heap thirty feet away. Cassidy and Wietbauper were also thrown out into the road.

Rushed to a Hospital.

There were houses by the roadside, and the inmates carried the wounded men within doors. Medical assistance was summoned, and Medical Examiner J. P. Schneider was soon on the scene. He saw that Welch's condition was desperate, and he ordered an ambulance to take him to the Mercy Hospital, in Springfield. Cassidy was also sent to the hospital.

At the hospital to-night the statement was made that Welch's injuries were so severe that it is doubtful if he can survive.

Callahan was thirty-seven years old, and had spent nearly all his life in Cheshire. For several years he had been the proprietor of the Cheshire Inn. He was prominent locally and a member of the Elks. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Callahan, two brothers, Patrick and John, and two sisters, Mary and Ella.

Thomas P. Welch is forty-eight years old and lives in Adams. He is prominent in Democratic politics in Western Massachusetts and a now a member of the Adams Board of Selectmen.

Bennett's Story of Wreck.

Bennett, who lives at No. 60 Pleasant street, South Natick, was the only one who gave a detailed story of the crash. He dictated the following statement:

"I came to Springfield in my car and put it in a garage because some repairs were needed. This afternoon I left the garage at just 1:30 o'clock. I had gone but a short distance beyond North Wilbrahm, when I overtook two small girls walking by the side of the road. They asked me if they might ride to the Palmer

Cardinal Vannutelli Welcomed to Boston

Here is Cardinal Vannutelli as he looked on his first visit to Boston. Photograph taken especially for the American as the prelate left the train at Back Bay.

Great Gathering of Clergy and Laity at a Notable Banquet to Papal Legate in the Hotel Somerset.

STANDING in the great banquet hall of the Hotel Somerset last night in his robe of cardinal red, and surrounded by 600 business and professional men representative of the Catholic laity, Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli, Bishop of Palestrina, and personal representative of Pope Pius X to the Eucharistic Congress combined a greeting with a warning.

The message of the Cardinal to New England and the young American nation was to keep the faith and to be warned by the history of the nations of Europe. Material prosperity, Cardinal Vannutelli said, is a wonderful thing. Much more wonderful, he said, is simple, abiding faith in Almighty God and respect for His commandments.

Seated at the banquet table and assembled in honor of the distinguished prelate, were men of eminence in Church and State, the progressive Archbishop of Boston, the Governor of the Commonwealth, the Mayor of the city.

"Be warned! Be warned by the lesson of Europe!" said the Cardinal. "The present is full of great material prosperity for you. Be assured that it is almost full of ever-present dangers. Keep the faith, my brethren, even if you lose the whole world."

Here is the Cardinal's speech, delivered in Italian, as translated by Archbishop O'Connell:

I congratulate you Catholic men of Boston upon your present prosperous position. Of this I had knowledge before I came to Boston. To-night's impressions confirmed what I had already known. While I congratulate you on this prosperity, however, let me warn you of the dangers of the future. Let me remind you that your great growth came by sacrifice, by the sacrifice of your ancestors. What was Boston one hundred years ago? What is it to-day? Last week in speaking to me your great American Cardinal Gibbons said,

"I want you to go to oBston, for Boston is the first Catholic see in all America." (Lour and prolonged applause.)

I have come and I have seen and I congratulate you again and again upon your grand condition. But remember, it is only in the spirit of sacrifice and by standing to the faith that we can go on and prosper. We of old Europe can learn much from you of young America. If there could only prevail in Europe some of the American character and life, what a good thing it would be for the church! Yes, America has much to teach to Europe to-day.

If God is every day crowning your efforts and the sacrifices of your fathers it is, it must be that Almighty God wants you to use those gifts for his honor and glory, for the honor of the Holy See and the salvation of the souls of your people.

[Archbishop O'Connell paused here a moment in his work of translation and then said, with a smile of embarrassment: "eModesty forbids me to repeat to you the sanguinuous things His Eminence has said about your Archbishop. (Loud applause). I thank him for what he has said and I thank you all for your kind expressions.]

I cannot tell you how much I am moved by the phesence of the Catholic men of Boston here. Unless you men keep the faith you will have reproduced here the sad consequences that have come about in the Old World. Look all around Europe to-day. Alas! What has happened? The story is too long to tell you now, but be warned by the lesson. The present is full of prosperity. It is also full of danger. Let each of us promise in our heart of hearts as a treaty to Almighty God to keep the faith, if we lose all the world. Your good Catholic faith is the best thing you have in Boston. aMy God bless you all, your families, this city of which you are all so proud, this country and this State.

HOME RULE LEAD IN COMMONS SECURE, SAYS REDMOND

Confident That Prime Minister Will Keep Pledge to Aid Long-Sought Measure.

"WE WILL DO OUR DUTY"

Declares Government Would Be Responsible in Event of a Crisis.

JOHN E. REDMOND, member of the British Parliament, in America as an envoy with Daniel Boyle and Joseph Devlin in the interest of the Irish cause, declared in an exclusive interview yesterday with a Boston Sunday American reporter that there is no question but that there will be an early passage of a Home Rule bill for Ireland, and that if any attempt is made by the Liberal Party to halt such a movement it will bring down upon it the relentless hostility of the Irish Party.

The three envoys, accompanied by Mrs. Redmond, reached Boston yesterday and spent the day in sight-seeing. They were received by Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald and Archbishop O'Connell.

The Irish representative will address a mass meeting this evening in Symphony Hall. It is expected that it will be a very large gathering. The situation in Ireland will be explained thoroughly by the distinguished visitors.

In his talk with a representative of this newspaper Mr. Redmond said:

Have Substantial Majority.

"I have said, in one of my recent speeches that there is now a substantial majority in the House of Commons in favor of granting Ireland Home Rule.

"We have 125 clear majority in the House of Commons in favor of granting Ireland her own national self-government. This majority has been tested many times and found to be a steadfast and certain force in Parliament.

"I will say to you now that I do not fear any backdown or retreat from the pledge made by the Prime Minister, but you may depend upon it, if any such action be proposed, the Irish party will give no heed to it for a moment. And if a crisis be forced the responsibility will rest upon the government and not upon us. We will do our duty toward Ireland which sends us to represent her.

"In the event of a crisis the Irish party would be compelled to take up an attitude of relentless hostility towards the Liberal Party. And no one knows better than the Liberal leaders themselves what this would mean. It would mean the destruction of Asquith; it would mean the indefinite postponement of Welsh disestablishment; it would mean the postponement also for a generation of all the reforms which the Scotch representatives have been advocating for years. Therefore, the Liberal leaders will take plenty of time to consider and to count carefully the cost before they force us into open opposition.

Sees Victory for Measure.

"With the Irish party separated from and in opposition to the ministry we should have an election in January.

"Knowing as I do the state of public opinion that prevails in England, Scotland and Wales, I feel confident we would materially increase our present majority.

There is no question in my mind of the early passage of an Irish Home Rule bill. Not the slightest, as soon as we have destroyed the present sweeping veto of the House of Lords. This will be done unquestionably, as the English, Scotch and Welsh masses and the leaders are as determined foes of the House of Lords as we are ourselves.

"The British people thoroughly understand now what we mean by Home Rule by this time. Their public speakers and the British press have enlightened them upon it thoroughly in the past ten years, or farther back, since Gladstone took up the cause. It is a simple proposition. There are now twenty-eight Parliaments in the British empire. Ireland wants the twenty-ninth."

The Irish envoys, John E. Redmond, M. P.; Joseph Devlin, M. P., and Daniel Boyle, M. P., were allowed little rest during their first day in Boston, and when they sought their bed chambers last night they realized that they had been kept busy. "Saturday will be a quiet day," they were told by the committee of welcome. "Just a few formal calls and that's all." The few calls were stretched into many, but withal the visitors had a most pleasant day.

Mr. Redmond has been in Boston several times and so has Joseph Devlin, but Mr. Boyle, member of Parliament from Mayor Predicts That Boston Will Give the Candidate 20,000 Plurality, and Other Leaders Are Equally Optimistic.

THE Committee of Four named in the Democratic State convention to select a candidate for Governor has decided on Charles S. Hamlin.

Eugene N. Foss and James H. Vahey, Mr. Hamlin's rivals for the nomination in the convention which broke up in Faneuil Hall with a riot, when the bulk of the real delegates had gone home, are both of them not only anxious to have Mr. Hamlin run, but will stump the State for him.

Mr. Vahey and Mr. Foss are anxious to save the Democracy from the perils threatened as a result of the convention. Both of them have been able to forget their own ambitions and their recent disappointments, to remember only the party which has honored them.

CHAIRMAN MACLEOD, FOSS MAN, OPENS THE WAY FOR A CHOICE

The Committee of Four met yesterday at the Hotel Bellevue and the Boston Tavern. While the committeemen meant to take the public into their confidence at what the committeemen thought might be the right time, they desired for the present to get rid of newspaper reporters. So, early in the forenoon, they moved from Bellevue street to the Tavern. They put the reporters to a lot of trouble.

The committee, which is made up of Chairman Fred J. Macleod of the State Committee, Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the City Committee, Major Robert J. Crowley of Lowell and the Hon. William P. Hayes, former Mayor of Springfield, had hardly got down to business in the Tavern when Senator Macleod proposed the name of Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River to be the fifth member of the committee. The original four had been empowered in the convention to name a fifth man if they believed it to be necessary.

Dr. Coughlin is the Massachusetts member of the Democratic National Committee. He was a Hamlin delegate to the State Convention.

Chairman Macleod was a Foss man in the State convention and before it.

"I suppose I may as well explain this suggestion," Mr. Macleod said, for each of the three other faces in Room 11, at the Tavern had amazement written all over it, "and I will. It comes originally from Mr. Foss himself."

Fifth Man is Not Needed.

Before this there had been some suggestion of former Mayor Josiah Quincy. This was merely a suggestion. It was quickly passed over.

The suggestion of Dr. Coughlin's name, and Chairman Macleod's explanation, led to a general discussion of Mr. Hamlin in the committee room. There seemed to be so much friendly sentiment there that it was decided to be altogether unnecessary to have any fifth man on the committee. It was decided to get along without a fifth member.

Hamlin for Governor, however, was not talked about right away. That came later. A number of possible candidates was suggested. Somebody had some fault or other to find with almost all of them. Colonel Gaston was mentioned, but no vote was taken on Colonel Gaston's name. Not much was said about him in the committee room. It was said by somebody, however, that Colonel Gaston's contracts with the other financiers with whom he is interested in a score of matters would not permit of his being a candidate this year.

When Dr. Coughlin's name was suggested and Chairman Macleod had explained the source of the suggestion, Chairman Maynard of the City Committee grabbed his hat and went off to City Hall. There he saw Mayor Fitzgerald. When Maynard came back to the Tavern it was to suggest that Daniel T. O'Connell of Ward 20, brother of Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, and onetime secretary to the Mayor, would make a splendid young man for fifth committeeman. The O'Connell organization in Ward 20 was nobby for James H. Vahey in the State Convention.

Coughlin and O'Connell.

It was decided at about this time that the committee would get along with four members. Pleasant things were said about Dr. Coughlin and pleasant things were said about "Dan" O'Connell, but it was decided to get along without the fifth man.

As the day wore on the name of Mr. Hamlin was put forward. There was only one Hamlin man in the room. That is, only one man who had been identified with the Hamlin cause in the State Convention. This was Major Crowley of Lowell, who served on the staff of Governor William L. Douglas. Major Crowley was not Ge man who first suggested Mr. Hamlin yesterday. He was pleased to hear it mentioned.

Chairman Maynard of the City Committee did not throw his hat in the air at the suggestion of Hamlin, but so far as could be learned last night he said nothing disparaging and nothing unreasonable. Later in the day Chairman Maynard let his political friend and mentor, Mayor Fitzgerald, know whither things were drifting.

Fitzgerald and Lomasney were given to understand that Chairman Macleod seemed to be in the way of going over. It was said that Senator Macleod, an attorney of standing and a resident of Cambridge, with any number of high-minded and influential friends, was beginning to understand that his reputation for political sagacity and sprightliness was going to be either helped or hampered by the work of this committee.

Leaders of the present regime in city politics appeared to be downcast last night, as a rule, but they had nothing to say. If it has got to be Hamlin they will take him and make a pleasant face over it.

At the very outset it had to be found out what James H. Vahey thought about it, and how Frederick W. Mansfield would take it. Senator Vahey, it was said, appeared to be delighted to take still another chance to show himself a big man. He is represented as having taken the Hamlin proposition to his heart with unmistakable ardor, as a splendid way in which to encourage the supporters of Democracy and dismay its opponents.

Equally big and noble is said to have been the attitude of Fred Mansfield, temporary nominee for Governor. No public man in Massachusetts stands so well with organized labor as Charles S. Hamlin, unless it be Mr. Vahey. Hamlin is famous as the arbitrator of wage disputes. He is said to have been personally responsible for the increase in wages of not less than 6,000 Massachusetts wage-earners.

Mr. Mansfield is the legislative counsel of the State Branch, American Federation of Labor. Mr. Mansfield let everybody know that he is ready to keep his part of the contract and step aside for any candidate upon whom the Committee of Four has agreed. He did not conceal the fact that it will be especially pleasing to him if that man happens to be the Hon. Charles Sumner Hamlin.

Mr. Mansfield is the best political friend, and a warm personal friend, of the Hon. James H. Vahey. When Senator Vahey and Mr. Mansfield had both expressed their satisfaction with the Hamlin proposition, and when Senator Macleod had let

A THUMBNAIL BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF THE HON. CHARLES SUMNER HAMLIN

Charles Sumner Hamlin was born in Boston, August 30, 1861.

He is a direct descendant of Major Ephraim Hamlin of Westford, Mass., who led a regiment in the Revolutionary War, and is a relative of the late Hannibal Hamlin, Vice-President of the United States under Abraham Lincoln.

Charles S. Hamlin was graduated from Harvard in the class of 1883, and from Harvard Law School in 1886.

He was admitted to the Suffolk bar the same year, and entered at once in active practice in Boston. A few years later he formed a partnership with Marcus Morton, now a Superior Court Justice.

Mr. Hamlin has always been a student of economics, especially as concerns the tariff.

In 1892 he contested with William A. Gaston for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and was defeated.

Grover Cleveland appointed him Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in his second administration.

Since the close of the Cleveland administration he has been known as one of the foremost lawyers of the country.

HAMLIN CHOICE FOR THE GOVERNORSHIP

it be known that Mr. Foss was asking him to pick a fifth man for the committee who had been closely identified with the Hamlin campaign, there was nothing left but to get the consent of Mr. Hamlin.

Every effort was made, late in the afternoon and early in the evening, to reach Mr. Hamlin at Mattapoisett, but the fish seemed to be biting pretty well down in Buzzard's Bay, and to every inquiry the answer came back that the former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury was still "out fishing."

Some of the most influential men in the Democratic party in Massachusetts will endeavor to get in touch with Mr. Hamlin to-day. More of them will try to reach him tomorrow. He is not likely to be very much surprised by what Mr. Foss and Mr. Vahey have done, to reunite the Democracy and to foil those who got up the Faneuil Hall riot. He will be asked—and those close to him say that he cannot be asked in vain—to approach the situation in the same spirit.

For Democrats the members of the Committee of Four appeared to be acting yesterday with considerable stealth. The reason for this became apparent last night when it was learned how delicate was the situation they were facing. They had to get the consent or assent of three men. They had first to get the consent of Mr. Hamlin. Then they had to have the assent of James H. Vahey, [illegible] one, at least, of them represented, and finally the approval of Mr. Mansfield, honorary candidate. It seemed to be well understood where Congressman Foss stood.

The committeemen felt called upon to say absolutely nothing to the political [illegible] beyond what was said in this careful statement, given to the press at [illegible] o'clock in the afternoon and printed exclusively in late editions of the Boston American.

Statement by the Committee.

The undersigned committee, appointed by the Democratic State Convention, met at 10 o'clock to-day and continued in session until 4 o'clock this afternoon, with the exception of a brief recess at noon.

The question of selecting a fifth member of the committee was considered, but the views of the four members of the committee were so much in accord at this stage that it was not deemed necessary to select a fifth member at present.

The nomination for Governor has not been offered or proposed to any man whatsoever, either by the committee or any member, or by any person authorized by the committee or any member.

Various names were suggested and considered, but no final action was taken. The committee hopes, however, to be able to bring about, within a short time, a result that will be generally satisfactory to the party.

No public statement from the committee will be authentic except one signed by all its members.

(Signed)
FRED F. MACLEOD, Chairman.
WILLIAM P. HAYES, Secretary.
JOSEPH A. MAYNARD.
ROBERT J. CROWLEY,
Boston, Oct. 8, 1910. Committee.

The committee adjourned subject to the call of the Chair.

When the Committee broke up at 4 o'clock Senator Hayes had no other duty immediately before him than to present the situation to Senator Vahey. It is supposed to have been the task of Major Crowley to get in touch with Mr. Hamlin.

Chairman MacCleod, of the State Committee, who seems to be in the way of snatching victory out of humiliating defeat, was the first of the four to get away from the Tavern. The Chairman didn't wait to say good-bye. He got away from the Tavern at 3:55 o'clock. Efforts to reach him last night at his home in Cambridge were unavailing. There was a train for Buzzard's Bay at 4:25 and there were some Democrats who expressed the opinion last night that the Chairman might have gone down there.

Demand for Direct Primaries.

How Senator Vahey feels about it all is believed to be indicated by this paragraph from the statement which he sent last night to the Sunday newspapers:

"In regard to the nomination for the head of the ticket, I am in a position, without accepting any domination, to assure the party and the public that committee is making good progress toward securing a candidate in every way satisfactory."

Senator Vahey takes occasion in his statement, printed elsewhere in this newspaper in full, to point out that the [illegible] of last Friday morning emphasizes anew the great Massachusetts demand for direct nominations and the State-wide primary. The convention system, he says, is "utterly undemocratic and ought to be abolished."

> STRONG APPROVAL OF CHOICE OF HAMLIN, BY JOHN R. THAYER
> "It would have been the proper thing to have given Mr. Hamlin the unanimous nomination at the convention. It would be a good thing to nominate Mr. Hamlin now.—Statement by John R. Thayer.

In this connection this is not a bad place to say that Charles S. Hamlin has for several days been telling his friends that Massachusetts is sorely in need of direct nominations and must have them. Whether or not the deplorable Democratic situation is ironed out, as now seems likely, Mr. Hamlin will be found from this time on in the van of those who are fighting for the direct primary. He has said so in unmistakable terms.

Arthur M. Huddell, business agent of the Boston Central Labor Union, said yesterday to some of his friends that the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, which opens its annual convention to-morrow at Worcester, might take steps towards putting a Labor ticket in the field. It is altogether unlikely that organized labor will take this step if its representatives at Worcester can count positively to-morrow on the nomination of Mr. Hamlin.

"Boston By 20,000," Says Mayor.

Mr. Mansfield had "nothing to say" last night. "It seems to me," he said, "that the situation cannot be remedied by any more talk at this time." Mayor Fitzgerald expressed the opinion yesterday that the "outlook for victory is as bright as ever." The Mayor expressed his willingness to wager a suit of clothes that the Democratic nominee for Governor will carry Boston by 20,000 votes.

The Committee of Four meets here to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Chairman Macleod will designate the place. The nomination of Mr. Mansfield must be filed at the office of the Secretary of State before 5 o'clock. Contrary to report, Mr. Mansfield need not wait until the 17th before he can withdraw. They say at the State House that there will be no disposition there to "raise legal technicalities or construe the law to the disadvantage of the nominee of the Democracy."

MISS AMY BERNHARDY THREATENED IN ITALY BY 'BLACK HAND'

Former Smith College Instructor Exposed Methods of Society by Vigorous Letters.

MISS AMY ALLEMAND BERNHARDY, formerly instructor in Italian literature at Smith College, and possessing a wide acquaintance in society and Government circles through her splendid work on behalf of Italian immigrants, is in grave danger from the notorious Black Hand organization through articles she has written in Italian journals exposing the nefarious band.

An account of Miss Bernardy's articles, of the threats made against her and of the active efforts of the Italian police to keep her from harm, are recounted in a cable letter yesterday from the Marquis de Castellane, special correspondent of the Boston Sunday American at Paris.

Miss Bernardy was appointed instructor in Italian literature at Smith seven years ago. She held that post up to one and one-half years ago, when she returned to Italy to pursue her investigations there.

Approved by Queen.

What she did there and the results it caused are thus described in the Marquis de Castellane's cable letter:

"Fired by the atrocities of the Black Hand in America, Miss Bernardy determined to crush it in its cradle. With the object of awakening Italian sentiment against this society of murderers, Miss Bernardy has written a series of powerful articles throwing the bright American light athwart the path of the Black Hand. The articles are being published in the Giornale d'Italia and are making a national sensation not only because of what they reveal but because of their exquisite style. They have attracted the attention and have won the approval of Queen Margherita.

"The Italian police are keeping a particularly sharp lookout lest evil should befall the courageous American girl. Their work is no sinecure anyhow and they feel relieved when they learn that Miss Bernardy has announced that her holidays are over and that she will return soon to America."

Honored By College.

Miss Bernardy is the daughter of Honorable and Mrs. S. Bernardy. She is a native of Florence and is thirty years old. She holds the degree of Doctor of Literature from the University of Florence.

Since coming to this country she has interested herself in most practical manner in the immigrant question, especially in regard to Italians. She not only lectured extensively, but went among immigrants, secured remedy of many abuses practised on them and won the hearty approval of Government officials.

Dying Law Clerk's Devotion to Duty Saved Court Case

Paralyzed and Unable to Speak or Write, Gave Message on Alphabet Blocks.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Thomas J. Purdy, a law clerk, who died in his home at White Plains last Wednesday, left behind him a record for devotion to duty which has scarcely a parallel.

Mr. Purdy was managing clerk for William Herman Black, former commissioner of accounts and now a lawyer with offices in Broadway. Last July Mr. Black went abroad, leaving the business in Mr. Purdy's charge. Mr. Black had been retained in a case before the United States Court that was to be heard this month.

Mr. Purdy was sticken with paralysis. His condition was so serious that he could not speak or use his right arm. But in spite of his sufferings his greatest worry seemed to be lest Mr. Black return too late to argue the federal case.

Shortly before the day set for the hearing Mr. Purdy by signal made his attendant understand that he wanted to convey a message. A pencil was tied to his left hand, but he could not write anything. A friend finally obtained an alphabet of block of leters and by a slow, painful process the sick man was able to spell out his message. It was a communication addressed to the United States court asking an extension of time until Mr. Black returned from abroad. The apepal was granted. Mr. Purdy died two days later.

FAXON, FUGITIVE TELLER, CAPTURED

Man Who Left $7,000 Shortage in Roxbury Bank, Arrested in Nevada.

The widespread claim of the police, that the bank thief never escapes, now become an American maxim, seemed last night to be clinched with another proof when owrd came all the way from Goldfield, Nev., that Harold B. Faxon was under arrest there.

Faxon in 1903 was, and for some years had been, the teller of the People's National Bank, at No. 114 Dudley street, Roxbury. He lived in Quincy, where he was known as a quiet man of intellectual tastes and an enthusiastic yachtsman. He was born in Quincy, of one of its leading families, and when he went away, leaving a shortage of $7,000 to be discovered immediately following his disappearance, was only thirty-two years old.

When Faxon went away from Boston the president of the bank was S. B. Hopkins, now dead. H. A. Rhodes, of Braintree, was the cashier. Of the young teller's immediate family his mother, a sister, and two brothers are still living at Quincy.

Dispatches from GoGldfield gave no particulars of the life that Faxon has led since leaving New England, and no hint of his wanderings, but the police declares that his arrest is further testimony to the fact that the bank thief never escapes.

Mrs. Ricker Gives Gems of Wisdom About Love, Politics and Prayer

"Equal Rights," Platform of Candidate for Governor of New Hampshire.

EQUAL rights for all is the platform outlined by Mrs. Marilla Ricker, candidate for Governor of New Hampshire. Mrs. Ricker is at present in Boston on her way from California to her home in Dover. She denounces Roosevelt, says Taft has obesity, swears by Uncle Joe Cannon and characterizes Candidate Bass as a "prevaricating" Republican.

"I'm going up to Dover and run for Governor, although I haven't the slightest idea of ever becoming Governor," announced Mrs. Ricker. "I'm running for Governor in order to get people into the habit of thinking of women as Governors. You know people have to think about a thing several centuries before they can get accustomed to the idea. I want to start the ball a-rolling.

Why Not a Woman?

"There isn't a ghost of a reason why a woman should not be Governor or President, if she wants to be and is capable of it."

To the suggestion that a family of five children might be a slight hindrance, Mrs. Ricker set up her light heels and remarked in that determined, but kindly way of hers.

"That hasn't anything to do with it. By the time a woman is old enough to be Governor, her family is all brought up. No man is Governor much before fifty or sixty. There's no reason a woman shouldn't be Governor at that age.

"What is there to hinder me being Governor? I don't have to earn my own living. I haven't any children. I have as good an education as most men, and far better than some. I've practiced law for years. I've got the mind and ability.

"A few rich young fellows like Churchill and Bass think they can come into New Hampshire and run it, more for the fun of the thing than anything else. Bass is all right, I suppose, only I understand he is opposed to equal suffrage, which is very much against him.

"His mother has barrels of money and if she wants to open up one of them and buy 'Bobby' a plaything, why I suppose it's all right, and she has a perfect right to do so. The sons of rich women are usually worth about thirty cents.

"I'm like Joe Cannon—a stalwart Republican. Those people like Bass and Teddy Roosevelt, who call themselves insurgents and new nationalists and progressives are nothing more than 'mercenary' Republicans.

"When I sent my $100 to the secretary of state to register my intention of running for governor, he sent word back that I couldn't run. I didn't know why unless it was the same reason why Stevenson, who was candidate for vice-president on Grover Cleveland's ticket, was urged not to run for Governor of Illinois one day and told his wife that he intended to run for vice-president and his wife replied: 'No sir, they're making a fool of you, you're too old to run.'

"I'm seventy years old—and going on seventy-one. As I have always said I was ALWAYS born in 1840. Some women are born in various years, but I was always born the same year.

Most People Are Pious.

"I'm an agnostic and that, if there wasn't any other, would be an all-sufficient reason why I would never be elected governor of New Hampshire. Most people are pious, or if they're not, they pretend to be because they're afraid of not anything else. My idea is that a steeple should not be exempt from taxation any more than a smoke-stack. When a person asks me what an agnostic is, I always reply that it is something who knows he doesn't know anything about that which nothing can be known.

"Do good on this earth is my idea. Do your duty and be honest, give one hundred cents on the dollar and you don't need to care whether there are any gods or forty hereafters. This may shock some of the good sisters and brothers who adhere to the pernicious idea of immorality which teaches us to look forward to a life of ease and luxury.

"Every girl to-day ought to be self-supporting. Then, whether she marries or not will be whether she wants the man. She ought not to have to marry for a home, the way girls were obliged to when I was a girl. In those days there were only a few lines of work open to a girl—teaching, dressmaking, millinery, housework and the factory. To-day the Equal Suffrage movement has opened up all lines of work. There isn't anything that a girl of to-day cannot do. If she can earn her own living, is interested in books and study, she doesn't need to spend her time looking for a man.

"She can afford to wait until the right man comes along, unless she is like the girl who, when told that to be married was a sacrament, declared that not to be was solemner.

"Believe in children? Most certainly I do, but the weakest thing of all the weak things Teddy Roosevelt ever said was that about large families. No one has a right to any more children than they can properly educate and bring up and only a selected few are physically and mentally fit to be fathers and mothers.

"There isn't a reason against women voting that doesn't apply to men. They say women ought not to vote because they spend too much time on dress and fads. All nonsense! Men waste more than the women. They must have their trousers pressed. The women don't put them on tight they can't sit down. Next season they will wear skirts. They need a hoop to hold them out. The bobble skirt or any other fashion that impedes progress is too silly for words."

Mrs. Ricker never need wait up to more than fifty years if one is to judge by appearances. She has a wonderful physique, strong face and carries herself like a soldier. She doesn't believe in rocking chairs—wouldn't have one in the house—and declares she has a back of her own at least as it leans on it.

Just a Women Governor.

Oddity is one of her pet abominations and rather than be as flat as Fall she'd starve herself to the bone. Her idea is to get up and do things rather than pray for some one else to do them for you. She doesn't go in for society and believes that everything in it is like the frying pan which became a chafing dish when it got into society.

"There is the most idiotic thing in the world," declares Mrs. Ricker, with decision, "and things are dotted by people about as much as in the case of the young bay who showed me a bullfrog and put a baby sister.

"Men are all right, but why talk about them? Love and all that business—just nonsense.

"No, I don't expect to go down in history as a governor. I expect to live in history for my free and independent writings than for my policies, but I intend to stir things up a little bit and have people get the habit of thinking of a 'woman Governor.'"

"People Have to Think About a Thing for Centuries," Says Noted Suffrage Leader.

EVERY GIRL SHOULD BE SELF-SUPPORTING, SAYS MRS. RICKER

Every girl to-day ought to be self-supporting. Then, whether she marries or not, will be whether she wants the man. She ought not to have to marry for a home, the way girls were obliged to when I was a girl. In those days there were only a few lines of work open to a girl—teaching, dressmaking, millinery, housework and the factory. To-day the Equal Suffrage movement has opened up all lines of work. There isn't anything that a girl of to-day cannot do. If she can earn her own living, is interested in books and study, she doesn't need to spend her time looking for a man.

"She can afford to wait until the right man comes along, unless she is like the girl who, when told that to be married was a sacrament, declared that not to be was solemner.

"Believe in children? Most certainly I do, but the weakest thing of all the weak things Teddy Roosevelt ever said was that about large families. No one

SOCIETY NIGHT AT BIG FAIR TUESDAY

Next Tuesday night will be "Society Night" at the big Mechanics Exposition now running in Mechanics Building on Huntington avenue. After five o'clock that evening the regular price of admission will be doubled in order to restrict the usual crowded attendance. This arrangement is made so that patrons on Society Night can study the numerous exhibits without the usual crush.

For several days past "Mechanic Fair" parties have been under organization in the Back Bay and the fashionable residential suburbs. As particular features of Society Night at the fair there will be a special program by the United States Marine Band, with Lieutenant William H. Santelmann, U. S. M. C., leading. Miss Gertrude Hoff, soprano, will sing. Another musical feature will be the Meisterschapers, made up of the Harvard Schubert and Weber quartette clubs.

Tomorrow the children from the North Bennet institutions of Boston will be guests of the management of the fair. Everything possible will be done to give them a good time.

This is the last week of the United States Marine Band at the Fair. On Monday, October 17, the Seventy-Fifth Regiment, Lawrence, N. H., Band, will be the attraction.

The Fair is crowded with features. The Edison exhibit alone is wonderful. In the modern invention department the Edison manikin occupy an entire section. One of the most interesting of the exhibits is a moving picture film for the study of walk. It shows what many people do not know, gives a perfect analysis of that thing.

Mrs. Bertha Palmer Hallauer of the domestic science department is always the center of an interested throng of women—sometimes men. Her lectures on food and its preparation

BOSTON DEATH RATE 16.8 PER THOUSAND

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.—Acording to data compiled by the census bureau, the city of St. Paul, Minn., is credited with a death rate of only 11.4 per 1000 of population for the year 1909, among all of the cities in the United States which had at the census of 1900 a population of 100,000 and more each. The exceptions are San Francisco, Louisville, Minneapolis, Omaha and Memphis. The report on the mortality statistics from the first so far there has been no announcement of their 1910 population by the census bureau.

The highest death rate in 1909 was reached by New Orleans with 20.2 per thousand. Next was Fall River, Mass., with 18.7, and Washington, D. C., with 19.0. Following is the list of cities with the highest death rates in 1909:

Boston, 16.8; Fall River, 19.1; Worcester, 15.5. The death rate for New York is 16.6; that for Philadelphia is 16.4.

The report further shows that the people recently by the census bureau to be effect that the United States has enjoyed unprecedented health conditions at the general death rate of 15 per thousand of the population area in 1909 was the lowest on record.

Crank Threatens President's Aunt

Police of Several Massachusetts Cities After Unknown Millbury Visitor.

The police of a number of Massachusetts cities, including Boston, have been requested to be on the lookout for a stranger who threatened Miss Delia C. Torrey, aunt if President Taft, at her home in Millbury yesterday after he had unfolded what he said was a plot to kill the President. The man, who refused to give his name, told Miss Torrey that he had overheard the conspirators while in Boston before he left Miss Torrey's home, he said he would return and kill her if the matter got into the newspapers.

Miss Torrey reported the occurrence to the police. Secret service agents have begun an investigation.

The man told me he had been in Boston and had heard some men saying that they were going to kill the president," said Miss Torrey. "Altogether he acted queerly. He threatened to kill me if anything got into the papers about it."

The police think that the man was probably an inmate of a Worcester institution who was at large.

Greek Prince Will Lecture.

A lecture of peculiar and wide interest will be given in Sanders Hall to-night. The subject announced is "Ancient and Modern Greece," and the "Greek in America" and the lecturer will be His excellency, the Prince De Byzantium Constantinos Poleologos, a member of the ancient royal Greek family. The prince will be illustrated with stereopticon views and admission will be free.

CHILDREN WILL BE HORSE SHOW GUESTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—This year's National Horse Show is to open on a Saturday, instead of a Monday, and it will run for an entire week instead of ten days. The announcement was made to-day by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, president of the Horse Show Association, after special meeting of the directors. Each departure from tradition marks the horse show's entrance upon an era of greater prosperity.

Event Saturday to Saturday, November 5 to 12, inclusive, the week will be as set at Madison Square Garden. Progress of the program presenting the events each day is as follows:

A feature of the opening day will be the presence of thousands of horses, dressed children and other little people of Greater New York, as guests of honor on the afternoon of the day of the horse show's quotation. A section of the gallery will be set aside for them and a special entertainment, the initial number of which will be the parade of the Pretzel Goat Cavalcade. Performing and other beasts, draft horses, ponies, hackneys, saddlers and other classes.

The foremost event will be the polo game, which was an innovation last year, and proved just the kind of a contest to set the guides of the Meadowbrook Cavalry and horse artillery officers on the war path. The idea from England, from Canada and from our own Fort Riley, Kansas, will be the chief feature in this competition for international honors.

A New "Nemo" Corset

Self Reducing, No. 405

Stout Women! : : : Attention!

The greatest "reducing" corset ever made is the new Nemo No. 405. It has two new features of great value:

FIRST—The new Nemo "Relief Bands" (an improvement over the Relief Straps), which are extra wide and strong, and perfectly support the abdomen from underneath.

SECOND—A newly-invented long skirt effect, coming well around to the front, which produces tremendous reduction of upper limbs as well as back and hips. But this pressure ceases when you sit down, and you feel as if you had no corset on.

No. 405	for tall and medium figures	$4.00
No. 403	for short stout figures	$4.00

HOME RULE MAJORITY OF 125 IN COMMONS, SAYS JOHN REDMOND

Confident That the Premier Will Keep His Pledge and Avert a Crisis.

North Mayo, had never visited this city before. Therefore special arrangements were made to show Mr. Boyle the interesting sights of historic Boston.

At 11 o'clock, after breakfasting at the Lenox with several prominent Boston men, the party journeyed up to Granby street to call upon Archbishop O'Connell. After the episcopal call the party went to Beacon street and visited Governor Draper at the State House. Mr. Redmond was accompanied by Mrs. Redmond, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Fitzpatrick and M. J. Curran.

Greeted by Governor.

From the State House, after a pleasant chat with the Governor, they went to City Hall, where Mayor Fitzgerald received them.

After lunch Mr. and Mrs. Redmond went for a spin through the Park driveway with Mr. and Mrs. Fitzpatrick in the latter's touring car. Then Mrs. Augustine J. Daly, wife of ex-Mayor Daly of Cambridge, and president of the Boston Central branch of the United Irish League, was hostess at her home in Cambridge, and she conducted them to the historical places in the University City.

Mrs. Daly and Mrs. Redmond made several calls during the afternoon. The visit to the home of Longfellow was perhaps the most interesting to Mrs. Redmond, who is an admirer of the American poet. They were received by Mrs. Richard H. Dana, daughter of the poet, who showed the visitors many interesting books and writings of the great poet.

Mr. Devlin and Mr. Boyle were taken in charge by members of the Boston reception committee and conducted on a tour of the city which lasted all the afternoon. After dinner the envoys were kept busy receiving callers. At 7:30 the three envoys left the Lenox to spend the evening with friends.

Big Meeting Tonight.

They were assured of a tremendous meeting tonight in Symphony Hall and pledges were given of hearty support to the latest effort for the amelioration of conditions in Ireland.

All three of the envoys are to speak at the Symphony Hall meeting. Mr. Redmond laughingly said: "You have kept us so busy to-day that we shall hardly have time to learn our speeches, so don't blame us if we are not letter perfect. It is your own lavish hospitality."

The great event today is the mass meeting in Symphony Hall, but the envoys will be busy nearly all day. At 10 A. M. the envoys will leave the Lenox, and, escorted by the reception committee, will proceed to the Cathedral, where pontifical high mass will be celebrated. Cardinal Vannutelli, the papal delegate, and Archbishop O'Connell will be present.

Will Visit President.

After lunch Mr. and Mrs. Redmond will motor down to Beverly and will be received by President Taft.

For half an hour before the opening of the meeting at Symphony Hall to-night there will be a concert of Irish melodies. At 8 o'clock Chairman Augustine J. Daly will call the meeting to order. An address of welcome will be delivered by Mayor Fitzgerald and then each of the envoys will speak.

The music will be in charge of Professor John A. O'Shea.

MR. & MRS. JOHN E. REDMOND. DANIEL BOYLE. JOSEPH DEVLIN.

GREETING TO ENVOYS PLEASES IRELAND

By AUSTIN F. MAGUIRE.

Special Cable to Boston American.

DUBLIN, Oct. 8.—The cable messages coming over for the last week telling of the warm enthusiasm of the American people toward the mission of the Irish envoys have given a great stimulus to the spirit of the people at home.

The good news of the convention at Buffalo was quickly followed by reports from Philadelphia and New York, and the splendid result at each meeting was hailed with the deepest gratitude.

Keen interest is felt in the meeting to be held at Boston Sunday evening. Mr. Redmond has many times spoken, in public and private, to his friends here of his appreciation of the support Boston has always given to the Irish cause. From the cables that have come from other sections of America since the Buffalo convention the feeling is general that the present mission in behalf of the Irish national movement will be the most successful in many years.

Irish Language Revival.

That the Irish language revival is still making steady progress is proved by the success of the Language Week, just held under the auspices of Dr. Douglas Hyde. A great procession which passed through the streets of this city, was not only imposing and impressive in itself, but an immense throng, which lined the route evinced the utmost sympathy with the marchers.

The procession was headed by bands of Irish war-pipers with handsome flags, was divided into seven sections. The first consisted of Gaelic League branches, the Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language, and kindred bodies. The second was representatives of the Gaelic Athletic Association, and consisted of hundreds of sturdy hurlers and footballers. The educational section came next, and it was probably the most imposing feature in the procession.

Led by the students of St. Patrick's Training College, Drumcondra, it numbered over three thousand, and with the exception of students from St. Enda's, Rathfarnham, and St. Ita's, Rathmines, was made up almost entirely of Christian Brothers' boys. Next in order came National and Friendly Societies, with which representatives of the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Association marched. Then followed the industrial and other sections.

Most Successful Year.

At a meeting held after the procession had dispersed, Dr. Douglas Hyde, who is the leader and inspiration of the Gaelic revival, said there was no year since the foundation of the league in which they had achieved a greater success.

Their work would not be complete, however, said Dr. Hyde, until there was an educational ladder from the national schools to the university. He expressed his full confidence in the National University and in those who are guiding it, especially the Most Rev. Dr. Walsh, archbishop of Dublin, its chancellor, who has spent life and health in promoting the Irish language cause.

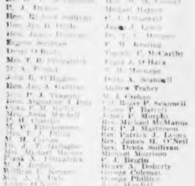
Wales is setting Ireland a good example in the matter of reviving her ancient language. At the Eisteddfod held recently at Colwyn Bay, the Rt. Hon. Lloyd-George advocated the raising of the age limit in the primary schools to seventeen, as in Bavaria. By doing this, said Lloyd-George, every Welsh child should be taught two languages and two literatures.

The Most Rev. Dr. Riordan, archbishop of San Francisco, has been visiting the Archbishop of Cashel. He expects to return home in December. His trip to Europe has been of great benefit to the American prelate.

Encouraging Crop Reports.

On the authority of T. W. Russell Ireland has begun to see a turn of the tide in her agricultural industry. Mr. Russell reports that for the first time since the famine years of 1847-48, tillage has increased by 70,000 acres.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (David Lloyd-George) announces that next year he will introduce in Parliament a great scheme of insurance, which, by means of contributions from the workers, would place each wage earner above any worries about his daily bread.



Mrs. Frank Stroebe.

A Remarkable Recovery.

Mrs. Frank Stroebe, R. F. D. 1, Appleton, Wis., writes: "I began using Peruna a few months ago, when my health and strength were all gone, and I was nothing but a nervous wreck, could not sleep, eat or rest properly, and felt no desire to live. Peruna made me look at life in a different light, as I began to regain my lost strength.

"I certainly think Peruna is without a rival as a tonic and strength builder."

ONE DEAD, ONE DYING IN HEAD-ON AUTO COLLISION

Fatal Accident to Delegates to Faneuil Hall Convention Near Springfield.

fair. I told them thy might, and the children climbed in and seated themselves in the back seat.

"I think I had gone about one mile along a level open stretch of road towards Palmer when I saw coming toward me, a considerable distance away, a large touring car which was moving rapidly. I turned to the right as far as the rail by the side of the road would permit.

"I noticed that the other car did not turn out as far as mine, but I thought it would clear without touching. My left front wheel was struck by the other car, and the front wheels were swung around at right angles to the road so that my right front wheel struck the side of the other car.

Shock Stops Car.

"As nearly as I could make out, the shock of the impact brought my car to an immediate stop and sent the other car careening along the side of the road. It ran along as if uncontrollable for a distance of 80 or 100 feet when it struck a large elm tree by the right of the roadside.

"There was a terrible crash, and the car went over sharply on its side. The man who was driving was killed—I supposed, instantly. The others were thrown out and the extent of their injuries you know. I am sure my car was going along at an ordinary gait. I would estimate the speed at about fifteen miles an hour.

"As regards the speed of the other car, I wish to make no statement that is not perfectly charitable. At the same time I think it perfectly just to say that it was going at a speed not less than thirty-five miles an hour. I am perfectly willing to go before any authority and make a full statement of the case.

Just after the crash I looked to make sure that the girls were unharmed, and I rushed to the other car. When I looked again for the little girls, they had disappeared."

Cassidy in Hospital.

Former Senator Cassidy is in the Mercy Hospital, Springfield. He landed on his right hip when the Callahan auto struck the tree. He suffered a severe shock, contusions of the body and a bad scalp wound. His injuries are painful, and he was loathe to discuss the accident, but he made this brief statement:

"The car in which I was riding was going at a moderate rate of speed and when we came abreast of Bennett's car, we pulled as far to the right as we could. Bennett did not turn out as far as we did. He struck us, and threw us off the road. We rode about three feet over the side of the road until we hit the tree."

When informed of the accident by telephone James H. Vahey said:

"These men are all dear friends of mine. They were delegates for me at the State Convention, and ex-Senator Cassidy placed me in nomination. I am terribly shocked and grieved at this calamity. I am so sorry for Mr. Callahan, and I pray with all my strength that Welch will come through all right. You cannot express too strongly how badly I feel over this accident—so sudden, so dreadful, and in which my sincere friends were concerned."

SCHLEY IS 71 TODAY.

Enjoys Anniversary in the "Sunshine of His Own Bower."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, retired, of Santiago fame, will be seventy-one years young tomorrow.

"It wouldn't do for any of you fellows without much muscle to stand in too close to me. It might go hard with you."

Admiral Schley made this answer to inquiries to-day as to his health. "I'm glad I'm alive, and I'm going to spend the day in the quiet and sunshine of my own bower," he said. "That's the best way to enjoy a day."

ANARCHY IN HONDURAS.

United States with Other Nations Sends Gunboats.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Following an appeal from the Honduras Government to the State Department, the United States has ordered the gunboat Princeton, now at Acapulco, Mexico, to proceed to Amalapala, Honduras.

Conditions of anarchy prevail in Honduras, cable despatches state. Foreign interests are said to be in jeopardy, and warships of leading governments are reported to have been asked for.

KING SENDS HIS PICTURE.

Italian Monarch Honors Commodore Morton F. Plant.

NEW LONDON, Ct., Oct. 8. — Commodore Morton F. Plant has just received photographs of the King and Queen of Italy with their autographs and compliments. Mr. Plant visited the King while cruising about on his palatial steam yacht Iolanda.

I MAKE THIS APPEAL TO THE WOMEN READERS OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN

MELVIN WILLIAMS

I have been writing advertising for the big tailoring house of Gale & Kent for the past three years, and this is my first Sunday announcement.

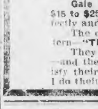
I want every married woman who reads it to ask her husband if he has ever considered geting a suit (or overcoat) made at 96 Court street.

I want every mother to ask her son the same question—every daughter to ask her father—every sister to ask her brother. If the answer is "No!" then I want every woman to show this ad to the man and ask him to read it.

Gale & Kent will make a suit (or overcoat) to measure for $15 to $25. It will be stylish, made of the best woolens, fit perfectly and be guaranteed in every possible way.

The coat front will be made after the famous G. & K. pattern—"The-front-that-won't-break-down."

They do business at 96 Court street—just off Scollay square—and they are Boston's Busiest Tailors because they always satisfy their trade. If every man in Boston knew them as well as I do their tailor shop would be the only shop in Boston.



"And the Leaves of the Tree were for the Healing of the Nations."

So are the Roots, Herbs and Barks which Dr. Liverpool uses in his medicines. Dr. Liverpool has his office in Boston, at 589 Tremont street, where he may be consulted every Monday, Tuesday and Saturday, 10 to 4 p. m. Evenings, 7 to 8. Sundays, 10 to 2 p. m. Dr. Liverpool is at his Salem office, 60 Washington street, every Wednesday, 9 to 4 p. m. Evenings, 7 to 8. Also Sundays, 5 to 6 p. m.

Dr. Liverpool is at his Lynn office, 10 Central avenue, every Thursday and Friday, 9 to 4 p. m. Evenings, 7 to 8.

DREXEL BRINGS FLIERS.

Comes to Take Part in Big Tournament.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—J. Armstrong Drexel left on the Lusitania to-day to participate in the international aviaton tournament at Belmont Park, New York. Mr. Drexel said:

"I think the two Bleriot monoplanes which I am taking are the fastest that were ever brought to the United States. I think the actual struggle for the Coupe d'Aviation will be between French and American teams, but the English team is confident. It will be the greatest aviation meeting ever held."

NEW YORK-CHICAGO FLIGHT.

Ely Delays Start Pending Concession From Promoters.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—The start of the Chicago-New York aeroplane race has been postponed until 2 p. m. to-morrow. After the decision of the aviators to let Eugene Ely make the flight alone on account of a lack of equipment for more than one airship in such a long flight, representatives of the Chicago Evening Post said that they were inclined to waive all conditions and make any concession necessary to insure a successful flight, but that they could not accept the proposition of the aviators without the consent of the New York Times and the Aero Club of America.

MAINE MYSTERY SOLVED.

Proof Found That Explosion Was From the Outside.

HAVANA, Oct. 8.—The first bit of evidence that the Battleship Maine, blown up in Havana harbor twelve years ago last Feburary, was destroyed by an explosion from the outside, as contended by the United States Government, was found to-day by workers engaged in raising the wreck, in the discovery of the foremast of the vessel. The mast was found some distance from the rest of the wreck and the engineers who examined it after it had been dragged up on the wharf gave it as their opinion that it had been blown from the ship by an explosion from the outside.

MANY BOSTON DOGS CAPTURE RIBBONS

Society Out at Annual Show of Lenox Association Which Breaks Record.

LENOX, Oct. 8.—Society people from Lenox, Stockbridge, Boston and New York, petted the aristocracy of the dog world at the annual show of the Lenox Dog Association, held in the Lenox Town Hall this afternoon and to-night. A park of 275 dogs with pedigrees a mile long hoisted and old enough lurking for a thousand canines. Fashionably dressed society women brought their pet dogs in their arms, and paraded them back and forth before the judging gaze of society and kennel fanciers. Never was Tower more honored in the Berkshires.

Scores of pets received [illegible] ribbons and silver cups. The exhibition was [illegible] a black and tan, owned by Mrs. James Kidd of Tuxedo. The dog was the [illegible] Ch. Shot, weighs [illegible] pounds. Chow, [illegible] magnificent St. Bernard, Berri, owned by Gerard Foster Jr. Berri was the smallest dog in the [illegible] class. He tipped the scales at 160 pounds and Berri proved to be a heavy weight in winning ribbons, for he was awarded every blue ribbon in his class.

The most valuable dog in the show was Rochlitz Maegel, a white bundle ball exhibited by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Minturn. Pile dogs has been recognized for the ring sons in England and many in this country. He is valued at $5,000. Mrs. William Sloan and Mrs. Frank S. Sinnott exhibited Pomeranian puppies from the kennels of Lady Gordon Algernon Lennox in England. The dog was sent to this country and was presented to J. Pierpont Morgan.

The first of the show was West Highland, a white terrier, owned by Mrs. J. Pond Sperry. She scored a sad fate. Little Westie was but four months old and [illegible] from the kennel to exhibit in public that was like endless long, until an hour longer than Westie. Dog and baby, both [illegible]

S. Parkman Shaw of Boston, was delighted to see his doggie. Wallo, was the blue ribbon in the Russian wolf hound class. Miss Nora Isolf of Boston, also beamed upon Zuf, her French bull won a blue ribbon.

It took the judges until late to-night to make all of the awards and the society women gave up dinner parties and dances to see which of the doggies should receive the coveted prizes. The judges also had the responsibility of awarding the prizes were James Mortimer, Robert Frederick, Jr., James W. Sperry and Dr. Haire.

BOSTON ORCHESTRA OPENS 30TH YEAR

Director Fiedler Honors Schumann in the Initial Programme.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Without ceremony of display the Boston Symphony Orchestra has begun its thirtieth season. A full generation has elapsed since Major Henry L. Higginson founded the band which has come to be considered the first in the world. And there were no speeches, no congratulations, no flowers. Only a little group of friends, fashionably dressed society women, who brought their pet dogs in their arms, and paraded them back and forth before the judging gaze of society and kennel fanciers. Never was Tower more honored in the Berkshires.

Scores of pets received [illegible] ribbons and silver cups. The exhibition was [illegible] a black and tan, owned by Mrs. James Kidd of Tuxedo. The dog was the [illegible] Ch. Sinnott exhibited Pomeranian puppies from the kennels of Lady Gordon Algernon Lennox in England. The dog was sent to this country and was presented to J. Pierpont Morgan.

The first of the show was West Highland, a white terrier, owned by Mrs. J. Pond Sperry. She scored a sad fate. Little Westie was but four months old and [illegible] from the kennel to exhibit in public that was like endless long, until an hour longer than Westie. Dog and baby, both [illegible]

The judges also had the responsibility of awarding the prizes were James Mortimer, Robert Frederick, Jr., James W. Sperry and Dr. Haire.

The opening concert and rehearsal was a memorial for Robert Schumann, born a hundred years ago and dead since half a century. A feast of Schumann half hidden in mourning stood in front of the platform.

Mr. Fiedler selected for performance four Schumann compositions which well represent the various phases of the composer's [illegible] energy. Schumann was greatest in his songs, and it is a pity there was no singer to interpret some of them. But the weird, mystic overture to Byron's Manfred, the familiar melodious and enchanting Symphony in E flat, No. 3, known as the Rhenish because it breathes the spirit and the moods of the Rhine people, and the beautiful and imposing overture to Goethe's Faust made a satisfying program, while the violin concerto with orchestral accompaniment in A minor, Op. 53, was rendered because of its lovely slow movement. It is a work that presents enormous difficulties for the virtuoso, and yet it is not showy, so most soloists have no use for it.

Mr. Schroeder displayed his old-time dignity and reserve [illegible] with dignity from his single box rich, deep, thrilling tone.

Mr. Fiedler's vigor and energy has not departed with his mustache, and the playing of the orchestra at the first concert was what might have been expected from such a band and such a conductor.

Hoxsey Sets New Airship Record for Continuous Flying

Sails from Springfield, Ill., to St. Louis Without Once Descending to the Earth.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—Archie Hoxsey today broke the long distance record for a sustained flight without stop when he landed at the golf grounds at Clayton, seven miles south of Kinloch Park aviation field in St. Louis, at 2:52 p. m., having flown from Springfield, Ill., without descending. The distance is approximately 105 miles.

The best previous record was made by Brookins in his flight from Chicago to Springfield recently, when he reached Gilman, Ill., a distance of 81 miles, before he landed. Hoxsey lost his bearings and flew seven miles past his destination. Brookins started after him in his biplane and Hoxsey will probably resume his flight and return here as soon as Brookins arrives.

Prior to starting his flight from Springfield, Hoxsey in a Wright biplane engaged in a race with Barney Oldfield in a Stutz[illegible] Race. He circled the mile track five times to Oldfield's six and won the race and a special trophy.

At that time Tessier was fined $10 for assault. Then Gambedian sued to recover and was allowed $50.

EVERETT MASONS LAY CORNER-STONE

Grand Master Flanders Uses Trowel at New Temple Ceremonies.

The cornerstone of the new Masonic Temple in Everett was laid with appropriate exercises yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The attendance of grand lodge officers and of Albert W. Lewis, only living charter member of Palestine lodge of Everett, which is building the Temple, made the occasion a memorable one in Masonic circles.

Guests assembled with 140 members of Palestine lodge in the First Universalist Church of Everett, and marched thence to the Temple on Broadway, opposite Hampshire street. Prayer was offered by the Rev. R. Perry Bush, grand chaplain, of Chelsea. Dana J. Flanders, grand master of the grand lodge of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, placed the box in position, containing Masonic and city documents, coins and copies of Boston newspapers. Those who used the trowel were Grand Master Flanders, who made the address of the afternoon; Worshipful Master Fred A. Robertson of Palestine Lodge; Mr. Lewis and all the living past masters of Palestine Lodge.

After the exercises, luncheon was served in the First Universalist Church, where Rev. Mr. Bush extended the greetings of the grand lodge.

The new Temple is two stories high, of red brick. The interior will be finished in red birch. The dedication will take place in January. The organ will be presented by the wives and daughters of lodge members. Mayor Charles Brooks of Everett is chairman of the building committee.

New System of Fat Reduction

The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription, that harmless combination of fat-defying elements discovered by one of our foremost physicians. Now, from the same high authority there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same yes, famous ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime they help the stomach to digest all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets are the easy system—to prove what bodily exertion and self-denial can not do and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You, too, can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent post paid by the Marmola Co., 190 Monroe Av., Detroit, Mich. A large case—sufficient to bring lasting results—is but 75c.

The GLENWOOD RANGE makes cooking easy.

The GLENWOOD HEATER insures comfort and warmth.

Handsome Blue and White China Teapot Absolutely Free to Every Housekeeper Who Visits Our Stove Department on Monday and Tuesday.

We want you to become familiar with

Glenwood Ranges and Heaters

Glenwood stands for comfort, service and economy—it is positively the last word in cooking and heating.

Throughout the present week we will demonstrate to visitors the excellent qualities that make the GLENWOOD RANGE the range of the hour. We want every housekeeper in New England to visit us and see the superiority of the GLENWOOD.

The Our Glenwood is a brick lined, revertible flue heating stove for burning coal. The heat passes down the main flue on each side to the bottom and then returns up the back flue. This method of construction makes it a very powerful heater with a small consumption of fuel. THE ENTIRE CURVED TOP swings to one side so that the oven beneath can be used for heating water or many other purposes. ALL NICKEL PARTS are easily detached when cleaning the stove. THE MICA PANELS in doors add to the attractive appearance. THE DRAW CENTER COAL GRATE is strong and easy to shake. THE DAMPER in back flue controls the fire perfectly and will not warp or stick. THE PLANISHED IRON BODY gives a powerful heat, and also looks well. THE FEED DOOR is made extra size so that large pieces of wood can be used Fall and Spring when only a temporary fire is needed.

Glenwoods Are Made To Suit All Purses.

You'll find in the low-priced Glenwoods more substantial worth than the same outlay will procure elsewhere, and in the high-grade Glenwoods you'll get everything that ingenuity can devise or capital construct. They are the Standard.

The Modern Glenwood E range that is famous everywhere for its baking. No other range has so many conveniences or is in better style. It makes work in the kitchen a positive delight, and every bit of baking a rousing success. The heat indicator on the oven door guides you in your baking, and it is easily regulated for all kinds of cooking.

Clergy and Laity Unite in Welcoming Cardinal Vannutelli to Boston

PAPAL LEGATE GUEST AT MEMORABLE BANQUET

Welcoming Address Delivered by Archbishop O'Connell in the Italian Tongue.

Cardinal Vannutelli was the guest of honor last night at a banquet in the Hotel Somerset which will live long in the memory of Roman Catholicism of Boston. Leading clergy and laity of the diocese of Boston were among the 600 then present.

Archbishop O'Connell, several of the Monsignori and many of the Boston clergy were there. The Governor of the State, the Mayor of the City, and other representatives of civic life joined in the general homage to the Prince of the Church.

Cardinal Vannutelli, speaking in Italian, gave his blessing and brought the blessing of the Pope to the gathering. The burden of the address which he delivered with the blessings was translated into English by Archbishop O'Connell for the benefit of the major part of the audience.

Archbishop O'Connell also spoke in Italian in courtesy to Cardinal Vannutelli. But the archbishop preceded his Italian speech with a brief summary in English of what he was about to say to the cardinal.

Mayor's Speech Translated.

The speech of Mayor Fitzgerald was translated to the cardinal by Judge Frank Leveroni. The Marquis Bouthillier spoke in French. The other speeches were in English.

The banquet and speeches were marked with a dignity comporting with the high office of the chief guest. But the brilliance of the speeches created an enthusiasm in the audience that found frequent vent in vigorous applause.

In every way the occasion was uplifting and inspiring. It will rank as one of the most memorable of its kind in the history of Boston diocese. It was a worthy tribute to Cardinal Vannutelli on this, the first visit he has made to Boston.

The banquet took place in the State ballroom of the Somerset. At the rear end of the long apartment was the guest table, sufficiently elevated from the main floor to enable all to obtain satisfactory view of those seated at it. The rest of the assembly was divided up among small tables, six to a table, throughout the hall.

Papal Colors on Decorations.

The only decorations were clusters of American Beauty roses on the tables. The menu folders were strung with ribbons in white and yellow, the Papal colors.

At the head table Cardinal Vannutelli was seated between Archbishop O'Connell and Henry V. Cunningham, president of the Cathedral Guild which tendered the banquet and reception.

The cardinal presented a magnificent figure. His striking form was all the more imposing in the crimson robe of the Cardinalate. Archbishop O'Connell, in his episcopal robes of black and crimson, was another figure to hold the eye. All the ecclesiastics, whether at head table or in the general assembly, wore their churchly robes, adding dignity and splendor to the scene.

In addition to Cardinal Vannutelli, Archbishop O'Connell and President Cunningham of the Cathedral Guild, those at the head table included

At the Head Table.

Bishop Joseph G. Anderson, auxiliary Bishop of Boston; Governor Eben S. Draper, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, Mgr. Tampieri, secretary to Cardinal Vannutelli; Mgr. de Croy of the Cardinal's suite; Hon. Bellamy Storer, Mayor Cahill of Lawrence, Mgr. Lega of the Cardinal's suite, Marquis Bouthillier Chavigney, Bishop Allen of Mobile, Ala.; William J. Dooley of Boston, Thomas B. Fitzpatrick of Brookline, Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of Boston, Thomas Hughes of New York, Knight of St. Gregory, attached to the Cardinal's suite; William F. Fitzpatrick of Boston, Edward F. McSweeney of Boston, Bernard J. Rothwell, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Bishop Silver, Conte Galileo Vannutelli, nephew of Cardinal Vannutelli; Mayor Clifford of Brockton, Mayor Shea of Quincy, Judge Charles A. DeCourcy of Massachusetts Superior Court, Judge Joseph D. Fallon of South Boston District Court, Judge Michael J. Murray of Boston Municipal Court, Judge Frank Leveroni of Boston Juvenile Court, ex-Congressman Joseph H. O'Neil, District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier and James M. Prendergast of Boston.

Mrs. Fitzgerald Present.

In the gallery were Mrs. Fitzgerald, wife of the Mayor, and a party of ladies.

The banquet began at 7 o'clock. The ensuing hour was occupied by the following menu:

Oyster Cocktail.
Chicken Gumbo a la Creole.
Olives. Salted Nuts. Radishes.
Sweetbreads Braised. Green Peas.
Cauliflower au Gratin.
Sorbet au Menthe.
Filet Mignon with Mushrooms.
Pommes Julienne. Bananes [illegible]
Lettuce and Tomato Salad.
Roquefort Cheese. Toasted Crackers.
Fancy Ices. Assorted Cakes.
Coffee.

At the conclusion of the banquet President Henry V. Cunningham of the Cathedral Guild made the opening speech of the evening as toastmaster. He said:

Mr. Cunningham's Address.

"Your Eminence—We catholic men of Boston rejoice to honor and greet you. Through you, his personal legate, we pledge to our Holy Father and Spiritual Leader our loving homage and fealty.

"From Rome, the mother of nations, you come to America, the youngest of the nations, where men are free and where the Church, in whose councils you govern, is exalted in her influence for the welfare of men.

"In this land you have found men of different races and tongues, but all in union with that church which speaks every tongue and lives in every clime and under every government.

"In you, distinguished Cardinal of our church, we offer the veneration of Catholic hearts.

"From Boston, the home of American freedom, and whose men love freedom, we send to the Father of all liberty the message of constant support in his struggle for the freedom of the church he wisely governs and directs."

After the applause for this felicitous beginning had subsided the toastmaster presented Governor Draper, representing the State of Massachusetts. His Excellency said:

The Governor's Address.

"Your Eminence, Your Grace, Right Reverend Monsignors and Gentlemen—It is a pleasure for me as Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to be here for a few moments to welcome Cardinal Vannutelli to this State. I regret very much that engagements of the utmost importance, made weeks ago, prevent my remaining during the exercises, as I should have liked very much to do.

"We welcome you to this Commonwealth of which we are very proud; and sincerely hope that your visit here will be pleasant. Massachusetts, while small in area, is sixth in population among the great States which make up our Nation. Its interests are large and manifold, and in no section of the world is the welfare of the people more carefully looked after than here in Massachusetts.

"The people of your church form a large part of our population. They occupy public places of great prominence in all sections of the Commonwealth. They are in all professions and in all branches of life; and the responsibilities which rest upon them are great because of their power.

"Massachusetts is a most liberal Commonwealth, and men of different nationalities and creeds live here in the utmost harmony and with mutual respect. I am glad that you have been able to come to our State. I hope that what you see here will impress and please you, and that after your return to your beautiful city you will remember most pleasantly the few days passed in our Commonwealth."

The next speaker was Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor was in excellent vein. His remarks were:

Welcome by the Mayor.

"It is a fortunate sequel to the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal that brings to Boston the personal representative of the Holy Father in that assemblage. To his garments clings some part of that supreme sanctity which abides in the centre of Christendom. In his discourse dwells some savor of that higher world wisdom which embraces, yet transcends, the mere wisdom of the world. We salute in him one who has walked with princes, sat in august councils, and helped frame the decrees of the Universal Church. We venerate, too, the exalted character which has worn these dignities with no abatement of personal humility. Accept, Your Eminence, our assurance of respect for your person and of loyalty to him whose benediction you bring.

"Perhaps His Eminence, having a mind keen to grasp the significance of things, will have profited no less than we by his visit to the Western world. He will observe here the conditions of a pioneer church, always propitious to piety and faith. Here each diocese, one own among the rest, repeats on a modest scale the history of Christianity itself. Our baptism, like that of the early confessors of the faith, was of blood and the seal of martyrdom is graven on our brows.

"In numbers, too, the spectacle of our diocese is not unimpressive. Among all the larger cities of the United States none is more Catholic than the capital of Puritan New England. Throughout the whole diocese nearly 1,000,000 Christians worship in our edifices of religion; nearly 60,000 children are taught in our schools, and about 2,500 priests and religious serve the wants of the laity.

Catholics in All Walks.

"It may be a further source of gratification to Your Eminence to learn that the Catholic laity, starting as a rule with few social advantages, has achieved by its gifts and virtues a social standing which no longer brooks condescension or patronage.

"Here in Puritan Boston the chief positions of responsibility and power are now occupied by Catholics. Those who are entrusted with the detection and prosecution of crime, the protection of property, the management and the scrutiny of public finance, the execution of municipal engineering works, the leadership of great commercial organizations are Catholics to a man; and the professions and mercantile life are crowded with similar examples of honorable achievement by Catholic laymen. In no other city of the English-speaking world, not even in the capital of Catholic Ireland, will Your Eminence find your co-religionists enjoying an equal measure of public recognition and personal prosperity.

"Your Eminence, as Mayor of the city, I bid you welcome. As a son of the Mother Church, I offer you the homage of my fellow citizens of the faith who are honored in this visit, and will treasure it among the memorable distinctions of their lives."

Translation of Mayor's Speech.

Then Judge Frank Leveroni of the Children's Court gave the first translation of the evening. He rendered into Italian, for the benefit of Cardinal Vannutelli and other guests who did not understand English, the speech of Mayor Fitzgerald. The Cardinal listened with evident pleasure at hearing his own liquid tongue flowing into the stream of English, which had been offered so far.

Then came the speech of the Marquis Bouthillier Chavigney in French. A translation of his remarks is as follows:

The Marquis's Greting.

"Your Eminence: If, in the course of your triumphal voyage across North America, you had not had the leisure to understand all the cordial generosity which the American heart encloses, you would have a singularly striking example of it in the fact that to-night a Frenchman of France arises in the midst of this brilliant assemblage of Americans to speak in the tongue which was the language of the first Bishop of this diocese, Bishop Cheverus.

"Permit me, Your Eminence, to turn toward the illustrious prelate who directs with a firmness so sweet and so productive for the Church the grand diocese of Boston, His Grace, Archbishop O'Connell, in order to thank him, in the name of those who in this vicinity speak the French language.

"Catholic Americans, learn from me that the grand nation of France, which had always the glory of being called the beloved daughter of the Church, is not dying, but lives and struggles constantly and by her nobility of heart is still at the head of the Christian world by the number, character and zeal of her admirable religious and social works.

"On your part, Your Eminence, bear in mind the noble prelate, who conducts with such rare prudence and a heart so full of affection the superb diocese of Boston, remember his devoted clergy and his faithful flock when, in all the joy of a glorious mission happily accomplished, you will prostrate yourself before the living representative of Christ, to whom we all live submissive with the profound tenderness which infants have for their father."

District Attorney Joseph Pelletier, representing the Boston laity, followed the Marquis. The district attorney, noted as an after dinner speaker, was in one of his happiest veins. He said:

Mr. Pelletier's Welcome.

"In behalf of 900,000 Catholic souls of the Boston diocese, it is my distinguished privilege to offer to your Eminence the loving homage of their hearts, and through you, as the special representative of our Holy Father, to offer to His Holiness our pledge of loyalty and filial devotion.

"Had a representative of the Holy See visited this city 100 years ago, he would have been welcomed by a mere handful of the faithful in a church but just finished and the only Catholic church in a city of about 20,000 population, in fact one of three in all New England. There are present here to-night almost as many Catholics as were to be found in all of New England a century ago.

Greetings to Pope Pius.

"We venture to assert, that nowhere in the world can be found a more loyal Catholic people than those of the Boston diocese under the guidance of our beloved archbishop and his priests.

"Our reverend archbishop, with our interests always at heart, has made possible your presence here in Boston, and in welcoming your Eminence, we offer him our grateful acknowledgment of his devoted interest.

"We shall ever treasure the memory of your visit and shall henceforth feel in even closer communion with His Holiness.

"There are those who look upon America as a land of non-Catholics, but we, who know her history, tell that there was never a land so blessed with Catholic dedication as ours.

"We humbly ask you to make known to our Holy Father that here in Boston we love and revere him. While official Rome is insulting him, we here are but drawn closer to him; we send him our hearts' prayer for his personal welfare and invoke God's choicest blessings upon him as the Head of the Church and in all piety we ask his blessing upon us, upon our good archbishop and upon the Boston diocese."

Then came the speeches of the Archbishop and the Cardinal, with their translations. The applause was tremendous for both. Archbishop O'Connell spoke first in English. Then, saying he would translate for the benefit of the Cardinal he continued in Italian.

Cardinal Vannutelli received a tremendous greeting as he rose to speak in response to the call of the toastmaster, whose introduction of the distinguished guest was simply:

"Gentlemen, His Eminence, the guest of the evening, Cardinal Vincent Vannutelli."

As the prelate rose to the full height of his splendid stature, the entire company rose with him, and a mighty cheer rang through the banquet hall. The Cardinal was evidently much touched by the enthusiasm of his reception. His strong face flushed with pleasure as he smilingly bowed his acknowledgements of his warm reception. Then speaking with animation and apparent emotion at times, he delivered his speech in the Italian language. The major portion of his attentive audience was unable, of course, to understand his diction. But so clear was his expression, both of features and of hand that those who could not follow the language caught the spirit unerringly and with enthusiasm.

Those of the audience who could understand Italian; Archbishop O'Connell, the members of the Cardinal's suite and Boston citizens of the Italian race, followed every sentence of the distinguished speaker with genuine delight and their frequent expressions of approval gave the cue to those of the audience who did not understand Italian.

Tribut to "Americanos."

Once or twice in a splendid peroration Vannutelli declaimed the word "Americano" with intense emotion as he paid tribute in his own tongue to the greatness of this nation and its institutions.

The word "Americano" was the keynote for the attentive listeners and each time at its utterance a mighty volume of applause arose which lasted several seconds. Another passage in the Cardinal's address that was of especial moment came when, turning towards Archbishop O'Connell with outstretched hands, he addressed to him an eloquent and touching personal tribute.

When His Eminence resumed his seat, having spoken without notes or preparation for about twenty minutes, there was another storm of cheers and handclapping to which he smilingly bowed his acknowledgement.

Then Archbishop O'Connell rose and gave a brief translation of the Cardinal's address.

Three Cheers for Archbishop.

When Archbishop O'Connell ended his translation applause came afresh for the graceful message of the Cardinal. The gathering was most demonstrative.

Then came a delightful human interest touch. The Cardinal rose and called out vigorously in Italian.

Immediately a member of his suite rose and said:

"His Eminence calls for three cheers for Archbishop O'Connell."

The room rang and re-echoed with the cheers of the assembly.

Then Mayor Fitzgerald called for three cheers for the Cardinal. Again the hall-room rang.

Silence followed the cheers. Cardinal Vannutelli rose. He blessed himself. Then, raising his hand in solemn benediction, he bestowed a blessing upon the company.

Archbishop O'Connell made the announcement before the company separated that today the pontifical high mass at the Cathedral the Papal benediction will be bestowed upon the congregation by Cardinal Vannutelli.

As the Cardinal and his suite were accompanied from the banquet hall by the toastmaster, the Mayor, Archbishop O'Connell, Bishop Anderson and Monsignore Splaine, members of the company stood and continued their applause until they had passed from the hall.

ARCHBISHOP AND PRIESTS AWAITIG CARDINAL VANNUTELLI'S ARRIVAL

Throng of 5,000 at Station As Foreign Prelate Arrives

Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli, Papal representative at the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal, arrived in Boston shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His arrival at the Back Bay station was awaited by a throng numbering fully 5,000, including the escort of 150 members of the Catholic Union and Knights of Columbus, who made an imposing spectacle in their top hats and frock coats.

Archbishop O'Connell was at the station to receive the Cardinal and their greeting was in the privacy of the delegate's special car. As the Cardinal left the car a cheer came from the waiting crowd and His Eminence raised his hat in recognition of the tribute.

Then Archbishop O'Connell led the Cardinal towards the stairway to the street and the retinue of the great churchman and the escort of the Boston archbishop followed. When the street was reached there were hundreds waiting who cheered and saw the Cardinal lift his hat, beneath which he wore a close-fitting red cap.

Six in His Retinue.

In the party with the Cardinal were: Monsignor Principe Ferdinando De Croy, Monsignor Sante Tampieri, Monsignor Michele Lega, Hon. Thomas Hughes Kelly, of New York; Knight of St. Gregory, E. P. Gelasio Uginet, secretary of the Cardinal; and F. Conte Galileo Vannutelli, the Cardinal's nephew.

With Archbishop O'Connell to receive the Cardinal were: Rev. James J. Redican, Rev. Michael Scanlon, Rev. Thomas R. McCoy, Rev. William B. Finnigan, Rev. John J. Crane, Rev. Charles J. Sullivan and Rev. James A. Walsh.

Honorable Josephll O'Neill, president, represented the Catholic Union. One of the first of the laymen to be presented to His Eminence was President Henry V. Cunningham of the Catholic Guild. On the reception committee with President Cunningham were these members of the Guild: John A. Bruen, secretary; Daniel L. Prendergast, treasurer; James M. Prendergast; William J. Dooley, Dennis J. Sheehan, John P. Manning, Dr. Thomas Dwight, J. Eugene Lynch, Henry Wessling, Patrick M. KeKsling, Francis P. O'Connor, John W. McDonald, Joseph A. Sheehan, Charles D. McGuinness, Dr. John T. Bottomly, James J. Phelan, James M. Morrison, Daniel Clarke, John P. Leahy, John H. Casey, Thomas Crawford, James A. Trainor, Edward J. O'Neill.

Cheered on the Streets.

The procession to escort the Cardinal to the home of Archbishop O'Connell on Granby street formed in the station. The procession was headed by Sergeant John Hughes of Station 5, with five patrolmen in uniform. Then came the twenty-five members of the Cathedral Guild, headed by President Cunningham. The Archbishop's landaulet car containing the Cardinal and the Archbishop followed. Behind the automobile marched a hundred members of the Catholic Union and Knights of Columbus. Two automobiles carrying the members of the Cardinal's party and the Boston clergymen brought up the rear.

So dense was the crowd on Dartmouth street that the procession moved but slowly and with great difficulty. The Cardinal was cheered continuously. As the procession moved up Dartmouth street into Copley square more than a thousand men, women and children followed and continued their march until the home of the Archbishop was reached.

Frequently crowds along the streets cheered, and the response of the Cardinal was his lifting his hat and waving his blessings.

Presented a Bouquet.

When the procession reached the front of the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Commonwealth avenue the Cardinal arose and lifted his hat. In front of the convent building were the sisters and the pupils of the convent school. The pupils were dressed in white. On behalf of the convent sisters and pupils Miss Hilda Gavin approached the Cardinal and handed him a large bouqet of American Beauty roses. Be fore the machine moved on the Cardinal waved his blessing and appreciation of the token.

The Archbishop's home was reached at 5 o'clock, the procession moving from Commonwealth avenue into Bay State road, thence into Granby street.

Sergeant Mulen was in charge of the detail of police handling the crowd in the station. A force of inspectors walked on either side of the Cardinal's car. The inspectors were Sheehan, Burr, Wise, Pierce, Conboy and Morrissey.

At the Cathedral To-day.

This morning the Cardinal will assist at the solemn pontificial mass at the Cathedral at 10 o'clock, being escorted from the residence of the archbishop by 500 fourth degree Knights of Columbus. After mass he will be the guest of the Tabernacle Society at Notre Dame Academy, Berkeley street, for an hour. Then he will go to St. John's Seminary in Brighton, to dine with the archbishop and the Sulpician Fathers, ad afterward attend solemn benediction in the seminary chapel at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. All the priests of the diocese not otherwise engaged will be at the seminary to meet the Cardinal.

Cardinal Welcomed to Boston by the Archbishop, In Italian

Archbishop O'Connell's address at the banquet was as follows:

"Though Boston is the last city in America to offer Your Eminence a welcome, nevertheless the warmth and heartiness of our welcome are quite equal to those of the cities through which you have passed.

"Your Eminence has now acquired by traveling through our country some idea of its immense extent, its enormous resources, the hospitableness of its people, the splendid liberty and good feeling which reign between the civil and ecclesiastical authorities, and, most of all, the profound and sincere spirit of faith which dominates the children of the Church in America.

"We are yet a young people, happy to learn still many things from old Europe, but certainly there are some things which certain parts of old Europe may learn from us, and among them is the fact that our government frankly respects the Church's rights, and those who are ruling the nation's destiny candidly acknowledge the magnificent strength which obedience to the principles of our faith gives to the stability of the nation. This Your Eminence has seen wherever you have gone in America, and this same spirit, we are happy to say, reigns in the State of Massachusetts and the city of Boston, which now have the honor of holding Your Eminence as their guest.

"Your Eminence, Boston acknowledges no superior in its manifestation of active, energetic, zealous Catholicity in the new world. We have over a million of Catholics in this diocese, and, Your Eminence, they are Catholic through and through; Catholics in their devotion to the principles of their faith, in their unbroken loyalty to the head of the diocese, in the splendid activity of their priests, whose zeal and devotion are recognized all over America. And Boston boasts what none of the other cities which Your Eminence has visited can vaunt, and that is her Catholic citizens form the great majority of her population.

"And this splendid body of Catholics stands forth first and above all, Your Eminence, in their perfect attachment and devotion to Rome, the Holy See and the Vicar of Christ. And this is no idle boast. Ask if you will, Your Eminence, the Society for the Propagation of the Faith what Boston sends annually for the support of missionaries in foreign lands.

"Behold, if you have time, also the splendid institutions of charity which the generosity of the faithful has erected and supports. Ask if you will the Holy Father the place that Boston has gained in his heart by her manifestations of filial devotion in helping the Holy See with practical and generous aid to carry on the great mission which Christ has assigned to him for the benefit of the whole world.

"Your Eminence, it is with a feeling of pardonable pride that the Archbishop of Boston can say to Your Eminence to-night that in all these things Boston takes first rank of all the dioceses of America. And the humblest of her million of children will feel profoundly the compliment which Your Eminence pays the diocese by coming out of your way at the end of a long, fatiguing journey to bring to all of us the blessing of that Holy Father who is so dear to the heart of every one of us, who from the first days of his pontificate until to-day has proven himself a father, indeed, to their archbishop.

"And let me add, Your Eminence, since your coming to America the people of Boston have longed for this occasion to show to Your Eminence their appreciation of your own personal traits of character, which by your public utterances and amiability of disposition and courtesy of manner have made Your Eminence well known and well beloved throughout this country as well as in Canada.

"For me personally this occasion is a most happy one, which allows me the privilege of welcoming under my own roof a Prince of the Church, to whom during my sojourn in Rome as rector of the North American College I became devotedly attached. The kindness of heart of Your Eminence which America now knows was long since revealed to me when I first took up my duties fifteen years ago in the Eternal City.

"Not once, but many times, have I been the debtor of Your Eminence's exquisite consideration and courtesy, and, believe me, Your Eminence, your presence here in my home city among my own people is a source of unspeakable joy and satisfaction.

"Accept, then, Your Eminence, not less for your own person than for your exalted office our most cordial and affectionate salutations. Carry over the seas to our beloved Father in the Vatican the filial love and veneration and homage of the Church of Boston. And when in future years—and may they be long and happy—Your Eminence looks back with pleasant memory over the events of your sojourn in America, we are certain that these words, the last which any American city will offer to Your Eminence, will return in their full significance to remind you of Boston's faith and love."

GLENWOOD RANGE EXHIBIT.

Bigger and more elaborate than ever this year was the exhibit of the Glenwood Range at the Brockton Fair.

A special feature of this celebrated cooking range which will appeal to all housewives is the new Ash Chute attachment which is composed of a pipe leading from the fire box through the floor into the ash barrel in the basement, thus eliminating the carrying of ashes through the kitchen.

The Glenwood Range may also be seen in the Grand Hall at Mechanics Building.

ALICE NIELSON BLENDS HER HIGH C'S WITH HOUSEKEEPING

Boston Opera Prima Donna a Charming Hostess Despite a Burnt Chicken.

IS LEARNING NEW ROLES

Hopes to Sing Them This Season and to Use Real Baby in "Butterfly."

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

MISS ALICE NIELSEN is back from Europe, settled for the season in an apartment in Westland avenue, and is already making her associates dissatisfied with hotel life by inviting them to lunch. One of these luncheon invitations came my way the other day, and at the appointed hour I was punching the electric bell in the front doorway of an ornate apartment house near the Fenway. Over the letter box was a card reading "Miss Alice Nielsen," right along side of the Browns, Jones and Greens and other domesticated persons who live in flats.

"Come right up," said a voice through the tube, and an accommodating elevator boy deposited me on the proper floor.

Miss Nielsen was awaiting. She wore an afternoon gown of flowing crepe, or silk, or mousseline de soie, or some such material, cut a la fleur de lis and trimmed with cashmere. There were a lot of little holes punched in the skirt which Elizabeth Elliot says is very recherche. Anyway, she looked splendid, and not a day older than when she used to skip around in the "Singing Girl." Miss Nielsen never skips now, but she looks as though she would like to.

Nose Interrupts Greeting.

"I am so glad you came," said Miss Nielsen. "Excuse me, I think I smell something burning."

I sat down in a pretty drawing room, decorated with a grand piano and several chairs. It is probable that the ladies will find the descriptions of Miss Nielsen's apartment very unsatisfactory, but wait until I tell about the lunch.

There was a big photograph of Caruso upon a table with an inscription in Italian to the effect that Miss Nielsen was a dear friend and he wished he had a bigger picture to give her.

There were other autographed photographs of Tosti, D'Annunzio and Eleanor Duse.

Just then Miss Nielsen came back. "There was something burning but I couldn't discover what," she said nonchalantly. That augured fine for the lunch, didn't it?

Upon the piano was the score of the first act of the "Sacrifice" by Frederick Converse, whose "Pipe of Desire" was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House last season.

Learning a New Part.

"This is the most delightful thing," said the artiste. "It is full of melody and brightness. I am learning the soprano part and if I am not allowed to sing it I will be very much disappointed." She hummed over three or four pages. Did you ever hear a prima donna hum? It's a delightful sensation, makes you feel that you are one of the family. If Miss Nielsen can be persuaded to hum "The Sacrifice" at its first production its success is assured.

Mrs. Stickles, who is Miss Nielsen's secretary, interrupted the performance by saying in a hesitating manner:

"I think lunch is ready."

The procession started for the dinning room. It was an extremely pretty room decorated—never mind how it was decorated—I don't think its exactly right to give away these intimate matters. The table was decorated with food and it looked great. There were three covers.

Miss Nielsen took a seat which enabled her to look into the pantry and make faces at the maid without being observed. The lunch started. Likewise conversation. I am very fond of olives and there was a large dish right in front of me. But three courses went by and nobody said, "Have some olives Mr. Johns." Finally I said it to myself and accepted. Miss Nielsen laughed cheerfully.

Awful! Such Oversight!

"Fancy my forgetting that. But do you know I had two gentlemen to lunch the other day and I never gave them anything to drink. Not a drop of water or wine or anything did those poor men get. I simply forgot it, and they were too polite to ask. I never drink anything with my meals so I didn't notice."

"They say water is fattening," I observed politely.

"That isn't the reason I refrain," said Miss Nielsen indignantly. "I am not fat. I have lost five pounds since last year. I don't think it is healthful, that's all."

Meantime the lunch was going along finely. During the fish Miss Nielsen began to pay her respects to one Theodore Roosevelt. If Roosevelt knew what Miss Nielsen thinks of him he would be somewhat peeved. When she got all through I said: "Do you know you are being interviewed?" Immediately she got scared.

"Oh, don't print anything about Roosevelt. Of course I don't know anything about politics."

So that's why I don't tell you what she said.

Maid Like a Chorus Girl.

To change the subject she began to talk Italian to her maid who is a recent importation from Sunny It., and greener than the grass of springtime. Miss Nielsen talks beautiful Italian, but the maid comes from the mountains or some place where they don't speak pure Tuscan and if it hadn't been for Mrs. Stickles's knowledge of the sign language she mightn't have got any more to eat. She was a pretty maid and looked like one of the peasant girls in "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Mrs. Stickles went into the pantry with her to show her what was what. We heard considerable conversation out there, and then a silence.

Miss Nielson looked worried. Finally, her secretary called out:

"It was the chicken that was burned."

The silence was really embarrassing.

ALICE NIELSEN, JUST BACK FROM EUROPE FOR BOSTON SEASON

ALICE NIELSEN

"Well, bring it in and let us see it," said the prima donna, sadly.

In came the funeral procession with the chicken. The maid was weeping and her tears narrowly escaped falling into the platter. When it was placed on the table it was seen that the chicken was but slightly burned—only very well done in fact.

"I adore chicken when it is well done," I said with truth. You ought to have seen how grateful they were. Miss Nielson tried to give me a double portion, because of my expressed preference.

The chicken was very nice and the salad was delicious and for dessert there was a sort of sultana roll that made the tongue curl up with ecstacy. The conversation veered to opera.

Curses Upon the Doll!

"I do hope they let us give "Butterfly" this year without that miserable doll," said Miss Nielson. "The opera depends so much upon a child, and a doll is completely inadequate. Imagine singing in impassioned strains over a wretched piece of wax and putty; it's enough to drive an artiste insane.

"I have been studying the soprano role in 'L'Enfant Prodigue,'" she continued. "It is perfectly charming and I do hope they let me sing it."

"I suppose you have been studying all the other operas that they will sing this year and hope to sing them."

"I have," said Miss Nielson frankly. "All except 'Thais.' I do not want to sing 'Thais.' To dress the part properly you have to endress it, and I do not think a singer should be asked to do such things. You know I was supposed to sing that role in Milan some years ago. I had never seen the opera when I learned the part, and it was not until the dress rehearsal that I discovered what the costume was. I refused to sing it."

Somebody mentioned Nordica and Miss Nielson recalled her first meeting with the diva.

A Note From Nordica.

"It was in 'The Singing Girl.' Nordica had a box that night with a party. You remember the waltz song? It was quite involved and I sang it while I whirled about the stage in a dance.

"Nordica sent me a note. It said:

"'Your voice is charming, but you will ruin it if you keep on dancing. The dance is not necessary, we are satisfied with the song.'

"I was scared half to death, and the next night I didn't dance, to the great indignation of the manager. But I soon forgot her advice and was dancing as lively as ever. I might have lost my voice if I continued, but the next year I began to study for grand opera."

By this time it was so late in the afternoon that dinner began to loom up large, and I relieved Miss Nielsen by asking for my hat, although she protested valliantly.

MEMORIAL TO RECTOR.

St. Paul's Dedicates Falkner Tablet To-day.

At this morning service in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Tremont street, will be dedicated a tablet to the memory of the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Falkner, late rector of the church. It is made of brass on a background of Tennessee marble and with the Biblical text is the family coat of arms. The style is late Gothic and will occupy a position on the right side of the chancel near other tablets to the memory of other departed rectors. Dr. Falkner died suddenly on June 15 at Naples, Italy, having gone abroad with his wife, four weeks before. He became rector of St. Paul's church in October 1907, succeeding Bishop Jaggar.

Elevated Puts up Alphabetical Stations in Dewey Square.

Strangers in Dewey square—and many of our native Bostonians—know now where their trolley stops. That is, they know where the trolley stops are. Knowing where the stops are, they know where the trolleys stop. For the trolleys stop at the stops. The stranger stops at the right stop, and when the car stops the stranger gets the car. Get the idea?

Stop! It's this way. The Elevated has hung (or hanged) a large sign from the Elevated structure in Dewey square. The sign tells that certain cars stop at letters A, B, C, D or E, as the case may be. Five posts in the big square are lettered to correspond, the letters being painted a foot high in black on white board, so they can be seen afar.

'EFFICIENCY,' ROURKE TELLS STREET MEN, IS ONLY TEST.

City Official Declares Day of "Shooting, Swearing Foremen Is Past."

MUST USE PUBLIC WELL.

Superintendent Also Says Men May Vote as They Please Without Danger.

LOUIS K. ROURKE told his supervisory force "what's what" yesterday afternoon. The new Superintendent of Streets and acting-city engineer put a punch into every sentence.

It was the first talk of this kind that the deputy superintendents, foremen, sub-foremen and other gang bosses of the street department ever heard. It took them off their feet. It made a hit with them.

Among the things which these men now have "straight from the Super," are these:

They can vote as they please without fear of their jobs.

The day of the shooting, tearing, swearing foreman is past.

Efficiency is the one test.

Most of the old men in the street department are earning their money.

If they have a just grievance, tell it to Rourke.

Treat the public with courtesy. A man doesn't own the street just because he works in the street department.

If they can't handle their men, they ought to quit.

They All Come, 400 Strong.

Superintendent Rourke sent word around to the different street department yards Friday afternoon that he would like to have the deputy superintendents, foremen and so on come to the aldermanic chamber at City Hall at 2 p. m. Saturday, if they could without inconvenience. He had a word to say to them. But it was not compulsory on any one to be there.

All came, about 400 of them. They came in even from the farthest yards in West Roxbury, Dorchester and Brighton. They jammed the old aldermanic chamber to the last inch.

The "Super" gazed about in surprise at the audience he had drawn. He had not expected to "sell out the house," as theatre managers express it.

"Well," he said with a grin, "If I'd known such a crowd would be here I'd have got Faneuil Hall."

Whether he meant this with any reference to recent political proceedings or not, the remark raised a general laugh.

Then the "Super" talked for twenty minutes. Right off teh bat he said:

Vote as They Please.

"I want to divorce the mind of every man from the idea that the Street Department is run on a political basis. No man will be discharged while I am superintendent because he exercises his right of suffrage as he sees fit. Let that be understood.

"I have been sperintendent four months. I don't pretend to know all there is to know about the street department. But I do know enough about it to have a definite idea as to how its affairs should be conducted.

"This department must be run on a business basis. There is no reason why this municipal corporation canot have its work done as efficiently and economically as the railroad and other big corporations.

Treat Public Courteously.

"I want it understood that you men are not expected to set yourselves up as Czars when you are at work or to feel that you own the streets because you work upon them. Don't forget for a minute that you are public servants. You are expected to treat the public with courtesy and respect.

"Intelligent direction of the 3,000 laborers of the Street Department is essential. The day of the shooting, tearing and swearing foreman is at an end. Intelligence and tact, not brute force, are demanded now, and will have to be given. The results in this department are better than they were, but they are not what they ought to be.

"As long as I am Superintendent of Streets, efficiency will be the one test for your retention or promotion.

Praises Old Men.

"I have made a study of the old-age problem, and I don't find that it as much of a problem as we have been told it is. The old men in the Street Department are working, and in most instances are working hard and earning their money. I came across a gang of men the other day. Five old men were working away. The young men in the gang were resting and discussing a woman who had just passed. Don't put your old men into gangs with young men, but place the latter by themselves. If they won't work, discharge them.

"I will back up the inspectors to the limit in their efforts to make contractors live up to the specifications in their contracts. But you must give the contractors a square deal, too."

The "Super" was applauded all the way out.

NEW SIGNALS FOR ROAD.

New Haven Installs Electrical System to Improve Service.

MIDDLEBORO, Oct. 8.—The New Haven Railroad is installing a system of electric signals between here and Buzzards Bay. This new system will make much improvement in the service between here and Buzzards Bay, both in the freight and passenger lines, and more protection will be given trains running between these points.

The condition of the switch and tracks will bee hown in the day by semaphores enclosed in a round iron box with a glass dial and in the night red and green lights will take the place of the semaphores.

HELP HOSPITAL FUND.

Boy Scouts Distribute Flags at South Framingham.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Oct. 8.—Scores of pretty girls, members of the South Framingham Boy Scouts and their comrades, succeeded to-day in raising more than $1,000 to make up the deficit in the funds of the Framingham Hospital by pinning American flags on hundreds of residents of South Framingham. Fully 125 people volunteered to aid in raising the money to-day and every contributor was given a tiny flag. The largest single contribution to-day was given by Francis Squire, who sent a check for $100.

LAY PREACHERS TO MEET.

National Association Convenes Here October 13-17.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 8.—The fifty-third anniversary of the National Association of the Local Preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, will take place in the Summerfield Church, corner Dixwell and Shelton avenues, October 13 to 17. About 15,000 "local" preachers will be represented by the delegates. The Rev. Thomas Rowbotham, of Stockport, England, and Rev. John Tearle, of Luton, England, will bring the greetings from the British Association. The Rev. John Corbett, of Philadelphia, and the Rev. Charles S. Gillespie, of New Haven, will make addresses.

FISHERMAN THOUGHT DEAD REACHES PORT

GLOUCESTER, Oct. 8.—After being mourned as dead by his comrades while he was suffering with hunger and thirst in an open, rudderless dory off Cape Sable for three days, Martin Schiells, a Gloucester fisherman, reached here safe and sound to-night aboard the fishing schooner Independence, Second.

Last Sunday the fishing schooner Mattakeeset, warped in at T wharf, Boston, with her flag at half mast. The captain told a pathetic story of the loss of one of the sturdiest men of his crew, Martin Schiells, while setting a trawl off Cape Sable.

"I thought I was going to starve to death," Schiells said to-night. "I left the ship in a light dory to set a trawl. That was a week last Wednesday in the morning. The ship was only a mile away to the leeward, and I could see it plainly. A heavy gale struck me with a high sea. I tried to row to the boat. The waves battered my boat. I called as loud as I could, but no one heard me.

"I saw the boys weighing anchor and I saw them sail away. I pulled for all I was worth. The waves were too strong for me and I had to give up. That afternoon a heavy fog set in and I couldn't even see my hand ahead of me. I didn't have any provisions, not a drop of water nor a morsel of bread. I kept rowing on and on through the fog. Night came and I sat up through the storm.

"Three times my dory was nearly swamped.

"I lost both oars and had no rudder. The sea swept everything from the boat. I pulled a bit of the rising board away from the gunwale and used it for a rudder. I felt as though I was going to die. I was fearfully hungry.

"Thursday the storm abated and I managed to raise a sail. I tried to sleep a little and the next day it was clearer. Friday I saw a sail and knew it was coming to my aid. Captain Price took me aboard. I couldn hardly walk. That's all there is to tell except that I'm here, thank God."

SITUATION IN CHINA GROWING ALARMING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The startling news to-day indicating that Great Britain has ordered marines from her Asiatic squadron to be ready for landing to protect British property and citizens near Canton, is corroboration of the announcement of some days ago that political conditions in China had caused the American fleet in the East and troops at Manila to be kept under orders for similar action.

The situation in China, it may be now stated without breach of confidence, was reported by the Navy Department by Rear Admiral Hubbard, in command of the Philippine fleet. He had been in communication with Minister Calhoun in Pekin and the minister has been given wide discretional authority. He is now acting with the admiral of the fleet, and has authority to telegraph orders direct to Hubbard in case of emergency.

NEWPORT IS SPLIT ON SALVATION ARMY

NEWPORT, Oct. 8.—The citizens are split into two factions, those for and those against the beating of the big bass drum by the Salvation Army on Sunday evenings in Washington Square, where the crowds do most congregate.

Chief of Police Crowley caused a notice to be served last Sunday on the Army that if the drum is sounded next Sunday night the beater will be "pulled in." This means that "Salvation Margaret" will have to march to the police station. But whether she marches or not Salvation Margaret is out in a statement that she is going to beat the same old bass drum in the same old way and several thousand sympathizers will be on hand to see her arrested.

Albert A. Stark, the newsdealer, has this to say:

"The church bells calling to worship make a clamorous noise, but we hear no protest. The big bass drum attracts the sinner and may save a soul. Why should we protest?"

Our Famous Hats at $4.98

Our millinery buyer claims (justly, as we think) to have been the originator of the $4.98 hat in New England. That is, he conceived the idea of selling inside of $5.00 a hat worth much more than the price, and of making it a prominent and regular feature of the department. We began making these hats about seven years ago, and since then nearly every millinery and department store in the country has brought out some kind of a $4.98 hat. The idea has proved a great success with us, and from the start these hats have met with popular favor. That ours are the best for the money we boldly claim, and the fact that they have maintained themselves so long and so successfully with the purchasing public would seem to confirm all that we claim for them.

DRAPER AT A RALLY DEPLORES FANEUIL HALL RIOT

Declares It a Disgrace to State Which He Regrets as Much as Anyone.

SIX of the best speakers the Republican leaders could muster raised gale after gale of laughter at the expense of the recent Democratic Convention and brought round after round of cheers from their own ranks in addition to those started pat at the first enthusiastic meeting of the State Republican campaign in Tremont Temple last night.

Ex-Governor Draper, former Congressman Lodge could be given the pleasing duty of getting the Democrats and their nominee, Gov. Eben S. Draper, on the run in the opening meeting held Congressman Mc-Kinley, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and Secretary of State Langtry also took a fling at the opposition party.

The keynote was struck by Ex-Governor Draper, who spoke for a quarter of an hour. He was followed by Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, James M. Swift of New Bedford, Republican nominee for Attorney General, Senator Lodge and Mr. McKinley.

Lodge Holds His Audience.

Preparing his remarks by saying that he did not intend to make a partisan speech on the Democratic or their convention, Mr. Lodge deftly approached the subject with which his friends knew he would not well deal, and within a few minutes had the audience in the palm of his hand and shaking.

In introducing the ex-Governor, Draper, former Governor Guild said: "There was another convention to offer which was not the work of a party, and which set forth and urged that the best citizens of all parties should unite and did they demonstrate their powers of self government in that they had to be coerced by the mob."

Governor Draper said, in part:

"I sincerely regret that the Democratic convention was not able to carry out the work for which it was called, and nominate candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. Every citizen of Massachusetts, whether Republican or Democrat, has reason for regret that this convention so utterly failed to fit its platform to the people of the State when they had pledged by the actions of their organization to consider the failure of the Democratic convention to properly carry out its purpose as a misfortune to the Republicans or for caustic criticism, rather feel that it is a cause for congratulation and as a citizen of Massachusetts extreme sorry that it happened.

"As a Republican candidate for Governor I say that if that happened, in spite of the fact that many people have held me out as material to help run the campaign for election

Sorry to Have Such Aid.

"This may be out of taste, but I trust that I should rush pretty far to have had less chance for election than to see the reprehensible action of the Democratic party leading to the people for a chance to rebuke their good fortune in the control which has assembled to govern themselves. This responsibility is fundamentally and all the time a responsibility of parties.

"In their platform adopted some days after they had failed to nominate a ticket, they are to place a candidate later on the Democratic ticket, Democrats declared that they were less commissions in the State.

"With this platform already adopted and subscribed to by the party organization, and of four people to select a candidate for Governor, and a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, can still appeal to the people of the State as a party.

"We find many of the prominent leaders of the Democratic party in the last twenty-four months trying to induce members of the state to support their nominees, when the nominees had not been put in the field and nominated are. There has never been more indecision and confusion in the Democratic commonwealth by any political party.

"The meeting did not ratify the nominees of the Republican State convention, but called upon the people to do what can honorably be done to support the nominees of the party for the high offices to be filled. We are not here to make note that I consider it a great honor and that if elected I will use all the power to serve all the people honestly and well. The election of a Governor is suddenly party I know intimately and well, and that I can say that they are honest men and true.

"Senator Lodge in his address will say to you reference to the Faneuil Hall meeting.

"I know the man who was the chairman of that convention. In spite of his remarks in my judgment he is a gentleman of character and honor, and I am sorry that the Democratic party should have permitted the disrepute into which it has fallen.

"I am sorry for the party, and justly regretful for his good humor, but I think that in that meeting he made of his will be unfortunate to say that I regret that the meeting was held. I regret that the Democrats of Massachusetts and the people of the State condemn it. I condemn it. I regret that I would do good many times that I do as a Republican candidate for Governor to be the occasion of Mayor Fitzgerald losing the day after the election, and I am told that the Mayor of Boston said that 'I am told that the Democratic party is disgraced.' I am sorry the people to be morning papers are good enough to say that I am not.

THE FEAR OF HUMBUG

Prevents Many People From Trying a Good Medicine.

Stomach troubles are so common and in most cases so long standing that people are apt to look with suspicion on any remedy, claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspepsia and indigestion. Many such people themselves on their account and never being humbugged, especially in medicines.

This fear of being humbugged can be carried too far, so far, in fact, that many people suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims made of a preparation so reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

New Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important respect from ordinary proprietary medicines, for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analysis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments, aseptic pepsin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on any organ, but they cure indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten thoroughly before it has time to ferment, sour and cause the mischief. This is the only secret of their success.

Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles, because they act entirely on the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half digested is poison, as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart, loss of flesh and appetite and many other troubles which are often caused by some other cause.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package.

CAMPAIGN SNAPSHOTS AT STATESMEN AND PLAIN POLITICIANS

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

SOME folks will tell you that it didn't altogether destroy the Democratic party's chances for success this year, in being what happened in Faneuil Hall. Some others will tell you that it did. There are a differences of opinion, too, as to whether or not all of the blame for what did happen should be attached to a gentleman named Lomasney, and his henchmen, as to whether or not Jim Vahey could have stampeded the convention for himself at the eleventh hour, and as to whether or not a mistake was made in not taking a third ballot before the convention, or whatever it was, adjourned.

But it's government bonds against Barney Schiffel's securities that not one man who took part in or witnessed the several disturbances will deny that he saw a beautiful argument in favor of a state-wide system of direct nominations for all elective offices.

It may be that the Faneuil Hall turmoil was the deathknell for the convention system in Massachusetts. If it was, then the ticket was indeed buried with a vengeance.

Other States desirous of shaking off the convention yoke in this manner should engage the services of Jimmy Carthy of Ward 8 and Jimmie Green of Charlestown, the experienced gentlemen for places in next year's Legislature. Their work at Faneuil Hall was a masterpiece from the viewpoint of a lover of riot.

Senator John White Says:

FATE decrees that Senator John E. White of the Cape should be in Faneuil Hall to witness the excitement. White is a Republican. He was elected by delegates for the Senatorial nomination in his district a year ago by methods of which the less said the better. He ran as an independent and was elected.

Could suppose that his experience with the convention system would put him on the side of the angels? Not a bit of it. He was one of the arch enemies of the convention. Every effort was made to defeat it.

The other night he was a guest in the reporters' enclosure in Faneuil Hall. He was right in the corner next to the ward 8 men who had occupied with his life. But his presence seemed to be of benefit to them. He was heard to remark when the rush started:

"I guess no one can raise an argument against direct nominations now."

James H. Vahey Is Bigger Than Ever.

IF there is one man who emerges not only from the convention wrangle, but from the six months of campaigning that preceded it with a big name, that man is former Senator James H. Vahey. Vahey today is bigger than he ever was, as a candidate for Governor before the convention had the Democratic ticket. As a matter of fact, no man who has been mentioned for any office in this campaign will be so much sought after as Vahey. He stepped into public life

There's no salad or dish of vegetables that can't be improved by the addition of a little Lea & Perrins Sauce. Try it on cold meat, fish, soup, stew, gravy, chops, steaks, roasts, game, salads, cheese, eggs, etc. Use it at the table instead of vinegar.

Lea & Perrins Sauce

Just as sure as you're living, there's something brewing in the way of a real Republican scrap next year. If there is any attempt on the machine's part to shove Weeks into the Governor's chair ahead of Frothingham, watch out for Speaker Walker to take off his coat and go after the place for himself.

Haigis Is in Danger. Machine Is After Him.

FROM the vicinity of Turner's Falls comes the story that the Republican machine lieutenants of the district are doing their utmost to defeat Representative John W. Haigis for renomination. Haigis has given his district a chance to vote for direct nominations, and has. While he was working for direct nominations they were cutting into his political strength. It is up to the voters of Haigis's district to see that the machine does what they want and not what the machine orders.

Keliher's Mistake.

FOR a few minutes last Thursday night Congressman John A. Keliher had the Democratic convention right here—and when we say "right here" we are laying the cards on the table pretty boldly, though he could stampede the convention for himself or for anyone of his choosing. He was making a great fight, and the delegates were shouting for him madly. Then he slipped up. He sought to "play" the field, and another reference to "the people of Hingham," and Keliher had lost his opportunity.

John J. Mitchell. He Can Be Elected.

NO matter what you may hear about the chances of the Democratic party for success in the fight for Governor, you cannot afford to overlook John J. Mitchell, the able Democrat who stands an excellent chance of being elected on November 8. This man is John J. Mitchell, who is running for Congress in the Fourth District.

G. W. TAYLOR JUMPS OFF G. O. P. ELEPHANT

George W. Taylor, an insurance man at No. 141 Elm street, and one of the best known Republicans in Hoddens County, in a letter to chairman Charles E. Hatfield of the Republican State Committee, tells the latter that there is "nothing doing" in the way of a campaign contribution from him this year, as he intends to vote the Democratic ticket.

The letter, addressed to Chairman Hatfield of Fifth Middlesex politics by the New Haven railroad and the nomination of Edwin A. Bayley for Governor in that district are given by Mr. Taylor as his reasons. Taylor and Bayley are both residents of Lexington.

Mr. Taylor's letter, one of several who received letters from Chairman Hatfield on Monday morning mail, asking for financial assistance, was a bolt from start to finish from State headquarters in the Kimball Building. Here is the letter, without a break and penned the following reply:

Mr. Taylor's Reply.

Boston, October 3, 1910.

Mr. Charles E. Hatfield, Chairman of Republican State Committee, No. 18 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir—Replying to your esteemed favor of the 30th inst., requesting personal contribution to aid in electing the Republican ticket, I beg to say that this year there is nothing doing, as I intend to vote the Democratic nominees, and, naturally, any financial contribution will go the way my vote does.

This is somewhat of a departure for me, but inasmuch as the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad appears to dominate the Republican situation in the Fifth Middlesex district and to have insisted upon the district for a Senator the candidacy of Mr. Edwin A. Bayley of Lexington, for whom I would not vote under any circumstances, I feel that by refusing to vote the Democratic ticket for once I can get back to my party.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) GEORGE W. TAYLOR.

Hatfield Somewhat Surprised.

On receiving Mr. Taylor's reply, Chairman Hatfield at once gave it out to the political reporters and to say that the letter almost knocked Mr. Hatfield's chair would be putting it mildly. Scouts were sent out in all directions for Mr. Taylor and a good many other old-line Republicans were questioned as to Taylor's standing. Mr. Hatfield declared that he "didn't look altogether promising for Bayley," but the biggest part of all came when it was discovered that the letter to Mr. Hatfield, who sent the letter to Mr. Hatfield, some other than the Republican State committee. Again like Vesa, he was not a member but a regular citizen and voter. Of course, he could not vote for Bayley, as he was not a resident of the Fifth Middlesex district.

Taylor is a well known Republican in the towns of Lexington, Arlington and Belmont. He is a member of the Lexington Republican committee.

HOT FIGHT IN FOURTH.

Wilder and Pierce Both Claim Congressional Nomination.

MARLBORO, Oct. 8.—The fight for the Republican nomination in the Fourth Congressional district is the most bitter it has ever known, and will be settled at the convention to be held in Knights of Columbus Hall here at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. The candidates are William W. Wilder of Attleboro and Representative Harry L. Pierce of Leominster. Each claims a majority of the delegates. Pierce claims 79 and Wilder says he will have more than 80. The convention will be called to order by Chairman Bigelow of the congressional committee. He is a Pierce man and Pierce is so confident of victory that he has already hired a hall to inaugurate his supporters.

FIGHTS IN SIXTH PLYMOUTH

Kiernan and Field in Contest for the House.

WAREHAM, Oct. 8.—Political insurgency is rife in the Sixth Plymouth representative district, including the towns of Wareham, Marion, Mattapoisett, Rochester, Carver and alkeville. Accordding to the rotation agreement the Mattapoisett's turn o name he Republican candidate, but there is a move to ignore this agreement. The "insurgent" candidate is J. F. Kiernan, a young lawyer of this town, and the "regular" candidate is Hosea Field, a Mattapoisett selectman. As the situation stands now Kiernan and Field have an equal number of delegates, one delegate from Carver and one from Lakeville being undecided. As compromise meddling, Walter Perry of Milton and Albert Bounsville of Rochester are being considered.

DEMOCRATS CHARGE TWO CONVENTIONS WERE STOLEN

Begin Court Fight to Keep Higgins and Fairbairn Off Middlesex Ticket.

MIDDLESEX County Democrats, who charge that the two conventions held at Lowell Friday were cut out to the Republicans, yesterday made their next move toward nullifying the conventions' nominations when they applied to the court for an order restraining Secretary of State William M. Olin from claiming the certificate of nomination from the Democratic State committee.

The protested conventions were attended by fully two-thirds of the 218 delegates to which they were entitled. The District Attorney's convention nominated John J. Higgins, Republican nominee, as their candidate for District Attorney. The County convention nominated John R. Fairbairn, Republican nominee, as their candidate for sheriff. Both nominations were opposed in convention by Cornelius A. Cronin, a member of the Lowell Democratic City Committee.

Action came from the protesting Democrats yesterday when they filed in the Supreme Court papers in equity, in which in equity seeking to have District Attorney John J. Higgins restrained from claiming the certificate of nomination from the convention. Higgins was the candidate for the nomination.

The bill was filed by John McNamara and James J. Devers, Lowell lawyers, who sought to have William A. McClosky, chairman of the convention, restrained from certifying to Higgins' nomination.

Petitioners' Charges.

In the bill the petitioners charge that the convention was "controlled by the enemies of the party, for the purpose of foiling the convention was not given to the delegates for their own use, but was used by the enemies of the party and their agents to defeat the nomination. This is charged as being illegal, and the question will be raised in the bill that the Ballot Law Commission, so they declared yesterday.

Charges that both conventions were dominated and fraudulent name calling and first recording. That came from town and city committee chairmen all over the country, who declared that they did not get their notice that the conventions were to be held Friday night at Lowell until Friday morning.

They claimed that the notifications were not mailed until late Thursday afternoon at Lowell. Many of them said that they did not get them until they had returned from their work Friday night.

It was originally planned to hold the District Attorney convention at Waltham Saturday night, and a complete slate had been prepared by the Democratic leaders.

The next Democratic leaders knew, so they claim, was when the result of the two conventions was announced. Chairman Charles L. Shea, of the Somerville City Committee, a city entitled to fifteen delegates, declared that the convention was a "frame-up." None of the delegates were present. Everett, Chelsea, Natick, Framingham, Waltham, Watertown and other places sent the full number entitled to large delegations.

Cornelius J. Crosby, of the Lowell Democratic City Committee, was present at both conventions, although he was a delegate only to the county convention. Yesterday he charged the conventions flatly with being "frame-ups." Chairman McClosky declared that Cronin although not a delegate to the District Attorney convention appeared at the hall five minutes before the convention was called to order and filed papers in the county convention. He held up the proceedings for a time, while a search was made for them, but they could not be found.

Seizes Bundle of Papers.

Taking the floor he charged that the convention was selling out to Higgins and Fairbairn. He was promptly ignored. While he was making his protest the name of Fairbairn for sheriff was placed in nomination and he was elected.

Cronin strode to the front of the hall, he says, demanded the papers and when no one heeded him he reached in front of him and snatched a bundle of papers from the chairman's table. Chairman McCloskey declared that Cronin had resigned, but Cronin still had them yesterday. McCloskey declared that the papers were private and he declared yesterday that he would force Cronin to give them up.

CANDIDATE IN RAID.

Three Lynn Arrests for Alleged Policy Game.

LYNN, Oct. 8.—Former Reserve Police Officer Edward Sears, recently dismissed by the police commissioners, was arrested by the police under either of the two plans provided by the new city charter, who bases his claims on the statement that he acted on the city of gambling, yesterday made raids on many of the city's clubs and resorts and the officers, who conducted the raid, arrested three young men and charged them with conducting a policy game.

Sears recently resigned from the police force after he was suspended by Chief Hurley for conduct unbecoming an officer.

Sears recently resigned from the police force after he was suspended by Chief Hurley for conduct unbecoming an officer. It is charged that Mayor Rico allowed the gambling in many of the city's clubs. He denied that any gambling existed, but it would give the Mayor until October 1, to clean up the city of all gambling. Mayor Rico had not acted he would himself raid the clubs. Sears recently accepted the position of bond agent for the Welch and Ward Society and in this capacity he made the raids yesterday. It was said by Jefferson Parker, secretary of the Welch and Ward Society, that Sears was formerly a police officer.

Sears was followed by Arthur Lewis, who was placed in charge of the raiding squad. Simultaneously another squad headed by Sergeant Parker raided No. 502 Monroe street. At the Union street place Sears and his men found three vacant rooms.

A vacant room was found at Monroe street.

Both raids coming shortly after noon created great excitement. Crowds collected and followed the officers as they conducted their raids. After the two raids had been made the officers headed by Sears made a tour of the city and arrested those in charge of John O'Neil, Arthur Lewis and John O'Donnell. The first of the three to was arrested was John street and the two were on Mulberry street. They were booked on a charge of promoting a policy game.

VAHEY DECLARES FOR DIRECT NOMINATIONS

James H. Vahey issued a statement last night in which he declared that he was not a candidate for the nomination for Governor, and that it would be very unwise for the nominating committee to choose him.

Mr. Vahey said that the Democratic Convention was a powerful argument for direct nominations and State-wide primaries. He said the Convention system should be abolished. His statement follows:

HEEDED CALL TO A SOLEMN DUTY.

I nominated to represent me on the committee which will decide upon the nominees, Major J. Crowley of Lowell, a staunch admirer and loyal friend of Mr. Hamlin, and Senator William H. Hayes of Springfield, a devoted friend of my own. Chairman Macleod of the State Committee and Chairman Maynard of the City Committee of Boston were selected to represent Mr. Foss. Unless they agree a fifth man will have to be chosen.

The public has been misled by reports current in the daily press that there was an agreement between Hamlin and Vahey forces by which the strength of the one was to be thrown to the other according to the result of the first ballot or other contingency. Such reports, of course, are altogether useless. I pledged myself absolutely not to enter into any arrangement whatever of this kind, and such pledges are sacred to me.

I am not a candidate for the nomination. Under no circumstances would I be very unwise to nominate me.

Pledges Earnest Support.

In regard to the nomination for the head of the ticket, I am in a position, without assuming any dominance, to assure the party and the public that the committee is making good progress toward securing candidates in every way satisfactory.

To these nominees I pledge my earnest and unreserved support and being the one most sacrificed at the result of the convention, will be able to demonstrate the disturbance was unjustifiable and neither deep nor ugly in temper.

I was in the Democratic Convention from 11 o'clock Thursday morning until 1 o'clock Friday morning and know exactly what took place. Before the surrender of credentials by delegates who could remain no longer it was as fine a body of men as I ever saw gathered at a political convention of any party. The platform and speeches were of a very high order and made excellent documents for us in the great contest we are about to wage.

Whatever trouble arose in the Convention was entirely due to a difference of opinion as to the method of taking the second ballot after the first had been announced. I regret exceedingly that anything at all occurred to disturb the harmony of such a splendid Convention. As delegates outside of Boston were leaving for their homes toward 4 o'clock their credentials were delivered to men who did not vote in accordance with the wishes of the delegates.

It is unquestionably true that I was the choice of a majority of the delegates to the Convention on the second ballot, and it is also plain that I could have been nominated on the third ballot. It was then one o'clock in the morning, the delegates had been more than fourteen hours, many of them without anything to eat. They were worked up to a high pitch of excitement and normal conditions were impossible.

In this situation I had a most serious and solemn duty to perform. It was to save the Democratic party and sacrifice myself. This I did.

Had Made No Agreement.

We nominated a man for governor of high ideals, excellent character and splendid ability, a man in every way worthy of the responsibility intrusted to him. He, also, made a great speech which was received with the most unbounded enthusiasm.

I am not a candidate for the nomination. Under no circumstances would it be very unwise to nominate me.

In regard to the nomination for the head of the ticket, I am in a position, without assuming any dominance, to assure the party and the public that the committee is making good progress toward securing candidates in every way satisfactory.

Remember the song in the "Pirates of Penzance"?

"When constabulary duty's to be done, to be done,
A policeman's lot is not a happy one."

The police officers from Stations 1, 2, 4 and 5 who were on duty Tuesday night in connection with the Faneuil Hall meeting, left the station houses until 7 a. m., went to Faneuil Hall at 9 p. m., and were on duty there till 2 a. m. Friday morning. During the early part of the convention Tuesday night had hot fifteen minutes for eating, and that was in the late evening. Sergeant Reardon of the City Hall Avenue Station, who was in charge of the detail, was on duty from 7:30 p. m. Tuesday to 7 a. m. Thursday till the convention closed.

THE SITUATION AS TO THE FILING OF NOMINATIONS

BANNARD WILL BUILD TAFT MACHINE IN NEW YORK

Recent Candidate for Mayor Selected as Administration Mouthpiece for State.

BEVERLY, Oct. 8.—Otto T. Bannard recently Republican candidate for Mayor of New York, who is becoming more and more the political representative of President Taft in New York, is spending the week-end at Burgess Point, and it is admitted that more than the usual social chatter is being indulged in. He is staging beside the Taft cottage. In discussing 1912, the President has said that his future is in the hands of his friends; and it was Mr. Bannard who, after the conference with Roosevelt at New Haven, declared with regard to the decision not to endorse Taft for 1912 at Saratoga, that he was a "red hot Taft man" himself.

When the time comes, there is no doubt that Mr. Bannard will take then necessary steps to line up a Taft organization, and it is not likely that the Federal officeholders who hold the balance of power at Saratoga will be invited to come into the reservation.

In the meantime, the New York situation is of immediate concern, the conference between the President and Mr. Bannard on Wednesday evening, and the new information that the President has received from Mr. Bannard making clear just what the situation there is greatly complicated and it is not unlikely that before anybody knows just where he is at Republican Situation is Jumbled.

To just what extent the Roosevelt influence is going to be for or against the Stimson candidacy is one of the problems that confronts the Republicans; and another is the newly developed complexion that has been put on affairs by the Democratic ticket.

Ordinarily, the Roosevelt popularity would have been counted on as the deferming factor. But the "New Radicalism" of Boosevelt has put a certain chill upon popularity. In attempting to analyze his influence one finds the Republican leaders at sea as to whether the opposition to Roosevelt centers in Wall Street, or has spread to all classes of business men.

With regard to the Independence party platform makes it appeal wholly to State issues, it is felt, will be an additional incentive for some Republicans to support the Independence party candidates. Private verifications, col. Roosevelt has held out little promise of straight-forward primary reform, and his practical repudiation of the party platform leaves Republicans up in the air.

Taft Hopes for Best.

It is understood, however, that the President, now that the matter of the nobility of Mr. Stimson to command the respect and confidence of the people, and he hopes for a Republican victory, is making the campaign goes forward.

Mr. Bannard has had some bi- Administration figures will be sent into New York for the closing days of the campaign. The President to-day renewed his promise to send Secretary Nagel to Boston or rice to help out the fight that is being waged there by Senator Crane of the State from Harmon, and the same will be done by Secretary Ballinger in New York.

Carmi Thompson, candidate for Secretary of State of Ohio, and G. A. McClellan, a Republican leader of Ohio, are guests of the President and assumed him that matters in Ohio are in a hopeful and more hopeful as the fight proceeds.

Mitchell Sees President.

John Mitchell, former president of the miners' union, and now vice-president of the Federation of Labor, saw the President to-day with reference to labor legislation that is to be recommended in the Annual Message. By agreement, the proposed meeting was kept secret, but it was discussed the disagreement between the President and the labor leaders on that subject being entirely settled.

The President assured his callers, however, that he would receive the recommendations for laws respecting locomotive boilers and the prevention of the dangerous overhead obstructions; and that he has not made up his mind as to the bill being reported by the Congressional Commission for fixing workmen's compensation for injuries received in the employment of interstate commerce railways.

Representative McKinley, of California, saw the President upon matters of the interests of the San Francisco-Panama Exposition in 1915. There is not the slightest doubt, it is said, that the President-elect city as the site for a Panama Canal Exposition, and Mr. McKinley's efforts will be the city that he will name.

$50,000 FOR AEROPLANE FLIGHT ACROSS CONTINENT

Mr. Hearst Offers the Greatest Prize in the History of Aeronautics

MR. HEARST offers a special prize of $50,000 to any aviator who within one year flies from the Atlantic Seaboard at Boston or New York to the Pacific Coast at Los Angeles or San Francisco; or, reversing the direction, from the Pacific to the Atlantic Coast, starting and finishing at either of the cities named.

The contestant may be American or foreign, and may use any type or make of self-propelled aeroplane which is heavier than air, not a dirigible balloon. He may choose his own time, season and route, but including Chicago on the way; he may stop where, when and as often as he pleases, and make any necessary repairs and replacements of parts of his machine, but the flight must be accomplished within thirty days from the start. It is not necessary that there shall be a race. If only one contestant for the prize appears and achieves the flight, the prize of $50,000 will be paid; if more than two contestants start, the one that accomplishes the feat first will be awarded the prize.

There are no other conditions. Curtiss having made a flight of 144 miles in four hours, Hamilton one of 180 miles in twelve hours, and LeBlanc having flown from Paris to Nancy and back, 500 miles, in five days, the next great international aviation record should be to cross the American continent. For the accomplishment of that feat within the next year Mr. Hearst offers the largest prize ever tendered in America to the daring and ingenious bird man.

40,000,000 WILL SEE FLIGHT FROM COAST TO COAST, MARKING NEW ERA IN CONQUEST OF THE AIR

The Man Who Wins the Splendid Prize Will Make a Name for Himself, a Name That Will Live and Give to the New World a Crown of Glory in the Annals of Man Flight.

FIFTY thousand dollars to the person who flies across the American continent.

William Randolph Hearst offers this prize in cash to the aviator who is first to blaze an aerial trail over the 3,000 miles that separates the Atlantic seaboard from the Pacific slopes.

It is the richest individual prize ever offered in America for the most important cross-country aviation feat in history.

Curtiss flew 140 miles from Albany to New York. Hamilton flew from New York to Philadelphia and return, a distance of 180 miles. Paulhan traversed the 184 miles between London and Manchester in an aeroplane. Molssant winged his way 300 miles from Paris to London. Le Blanc, Auburn and Weymann soared from Paris to Nancy, on the German frontier, and back to Paris again, a total of 500 miles. There are prizes for flights from New York to Chicago and from New York to St. Louis.

The feats that have been accomplished are remarkable demonstrations of the practicability of the aeroplane. Those that are to be attempted in this country in the near future are still more wonderful proofs of the marvelous progress in aerial transportation during the past two years. But in far reaching consequences they will not be eclipsed by the momentous achievement to which the Hearst prize invites all aviators.

The continent that stretches over three thousand miles between the stormy Atlantic and the slumbering Pacific ranges in climatic conditions from semi Arctic frigidity, through African aridness to the tropical luxury and heat of the Orient. Upon its broad expanse are the world's greatest fresh water oceans, rivers that are like the Egyptian Nile and the German Rhine, mountain ranges more wonderful than the Alps, and vast canyons whose stately wastes and wildernesses man has never penetrated.

ALL WITHIN CONTESTANTS' REACH.

All this within a traveling distance that is about equal to the mileage between New York and Gibraltar, or New York and London, or Chicago, Liverpool or Amsterdam and very scarcely less than the distance to Paris, Vienna, Berlin or St. Petersburg.

The first aviator to drive an aeroplane over this route will be in history. It will be the greatest feat in the annals of transportation. It will conclusively prove that a new realm has been opened to the dominion of man for practical uses. It will typify the unequivocal conquest of human ity's future highway, the natural highway the illimitable spaces and lanes overhead. It will usher in a new era.

Prosperity followed the first mule ... ox trains that blazed the Oregon and ... Fe trails. In the wake of the first ... of transcontinental railroads came work and wealth for millions. After the ... automobile toured from ocean to ocean a vast new industry with many busy little relations came into being.

The effect of the transcontinental flight for the Hearst prize will even be more far-reaching. At least forty million people will see the flight itself. Its educational value cannot be overestimated.

Example to Progress.

Children throughout America who will witness the progress of the aeroplane will be inspired to study the problems of aerial navigation. Inventors and experimenters in all parts of the world will be spurred to greater efforts in making the flying machine safer. Flying sportsmen with enthusiasm and proving the value of aircraft to financiers, it will give a vast impetus to the commercial development of the aeroplane. Hotels, manufacturing plants into existence, it will provide employment for large numbers of skilled and unskilled workers.

The man who flies from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will endow the aviator's profession with a new dignity and world-wide renown. It will be the severest sustained test to which a human being has ever been subjected. The physical and mental strain will be terrific; the draft upon his ingenuity to meet all unique conditions and overcome inevitable adversities will make the aviator's hardihood an epic. When the flight is done the birdman's experiences will add a wealth of precious data to the sum total of practical knowledge of aerial navigation.

Puts America at the Head

Best of all the very offer of the Hearst prize puts America at the head of all aviation activities, just as America was first to perfect the art of flying. It regains for the New World the lead that in order to reduce the head-resistance to

50,000 Men to Form the Line on the State's Newest Holiday

Gigantic Outpouring of All the Various Catholic Organizations of Greater Boston Will Be Reviewed From Four Stands by Archbishop, Governor, Mayor and the Chief Marshal and Aids

Knights of Columbus, Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Foresters, Holy Name Societies and Italian Lodges Will Combine to Form Greatest Civic Turnout in the History of This City

THE biggest parade Boston ever saw will march through the streets next Wednesday, in honor of the first Columbus Day to be officially observed in Massachusetts.

Fifty thousand men will be in line, under command of Colonel John J. Sullivan as chief marshal. Elaborately decorated ...oats will be a feature of the spectacle.

Speaking of the coming demonstration Colonel Sullivan said last night:

"With 50,000 men in line this will be the biggest, I might say greatest, civic parade that Boston has ever witnessed. All we need now to complete a notable success is fair weather. The members of the Knights of Columbus have entered enthusiastically into the spirit of the day. The other organizations, civic, religious and fraternal, and the patriotic representation that will make up the roster are striving to make the first legal holiday celebration of the discovery of America, one that the whole country will point to with pride. The demonstration will be of real educational value in addition to one of absorbing interest."

State's Newest Holiday.

Columbus Day, October 12, will be the State's latest and newest legal holiday. ... day will be celebrated generally through the State and particularly in Boston.

The celebration will be private, civic and religious. Business will be suspended as far as possible. The City and State officials will participate in the observance of the day. The seal of church approval is set upon the occasion.

The big monster Boston parade, starting at 12, noon, from the Hereford and Beacon streets. Back Bay, will be four times reviewed, first by Archbishop O'Connell, next by Governor Draper, then by Mayor Fitzgerald and finally by its chief marshal and his staff.

This imposing procession of civic, military and semi-military bodies will be seen by thousands of Bostonians and by thousands of others who will come to the city for the holiday. Advantageous places along the line of march are being sought. There is tremendous demand for tickets to the city reviewing stand, which is to be erected on Tremont street at Boston Common. This stand will accommodate about 1,000. More than 2,000 applications have been received so far.

Fireworks in Evening.

The distribution of tickets is in charge of Col. "Dick" Field. He has decided to allot fifty tickets to each member of the City Council and five to each of the department heads and to distribute the remainder himself.

Mayor Fitzgerald announced last night that the $2,500 which the city of Boston appropriated for the celebration will be expended on the following program.

10.30 a. m.—Rowing regatta, Charles River Basin, under the auspices of the New England Amateur Rowing Association, the incinde races by all classes of shells and canoes.

12 o'clock—Parade. The city is to pay ... the charges of transportation, lunches, etc., incurred in connection with the expenses of the regular army and navy detachments and of the militia.

8 p. m.—Display of fireworks in the Charles River Basin. The Mayor has given personal attention to the details in connection with these features, and he promises one of the best displays ever given in this vicinity. Boat owners have been requested to illuminate their craft for the evening, and the basin should present an attractive spectacle for thousands of people.

8 p. m.—Band concert in the vicinity of Pleasant and Pearl streets, Dorchester.

Mayor Fitzgerald is to tender the officers of the Columbus Day committee, the officers of the parade and the officers of the army and navy participating a dinner in the evening. Colonel John J Sullivan, the chief marshal of the parade, will preside.

Celebration Opens With Mass.

The celebration of the day will be opened with a solemn high mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. At this service the sermon will be preached by Archbishop O'Connell.

Residences and business establishments along the route of the procession will be decorated with flags and bunting in honor of the day.

When the procession is formed, the right of line will rest at the junction of Hereford and Beacon streets. The order to march will be sounded punctually at ... twelve noon. Moving towards the city ... the procession will come in Beacon street ... at the ... of Beacon and Arlington streets, the parade will be reviewed by Archbishop O'Connell and his guests.

At the State House the procession will be reviewed by Governor Draper and his staff and the Governor's Council.

Mayor Fitzgerald will salute the marching thousands from a stand on the Tremont street side of Boston Common.

Route of Parade.

The route will be as follows: Beacon street, Tremont street, Court street, Washington street, Temple place, Tremont street to Boylston street to Park Square where the line will be dismissed after review by Chief Marshal Col Sullivan and his staff.

Major Butler, the surgeon of the N ... Regiment, will act as surgeon general of the day. He will establish a number of hospital tents at leading points along route for the relief and care of those who may meet with accident or sudden ... during the passage of the procession.

These medical stations will be in charge of the following physicians by volunteer trained nurses and ambulance service at their disposal:

PRIEST AND MARINER COME TO THE AID OF HATTIE LE BLANC

Cape Breton Clergyman From Accused Girl's Home Ready to Testify for Her.

WHEN Hattie Le Blanc, the seven teen-year-old girl who faces death in the electric chair for the alleged murder of Clarence F. Glover, is called to trial in the East Cambridge Court in January a priest who has known the little French girl from childhood will take the witness stand and testify in her behalf.

He is Father Joseph Robetaille of West Arichat, Cape Breton, the home of the accused girl. Since she was a child old enough to attend church Hattie Le Blanc went to Father Robetaille's church.

The priest and the people of the parish are astounded that the bright little girl who left Cape Breton two years ago, innocent of evil, ignorant of the ways of the big world, is now in prison under the dreadful charge of having taken a human life.

The Child is Innocent.

"That child is innocent. She must be saved!"

That is the burden of the cry of the people who know the Le Blanc family and who remember Hattie before she came to Massachusetts. This news of how the people at home regard Hattie was brought to Boston by Captain Peter King.

Captain King is seventy years of age. He knows Hattie Le Blanc. The girl was employed in his daughter's family a good deal before she came to the States. Hints that reflected on Hattie were dropped after the Waltham crime. The girl's name and that of Captain King, old enough to be her grandfather, were connected.

But Captain King is to look after that. He has seen Hattie in the East Cambridge jail and assured her that she will be at her side when the trial takes place and that he will shatter any evidence that reflects upon her, so far as he is concerned.

Befriended by Priest.

"Hattie Le Blanc has a good friend in Father Robetaille," said Captain King to a reporter of the Boston Sunday American. "He has known the girl all her life. He knows the secrets of her heart. Hattie went to church regularly. She was one of the brightest little girls in the church. When there was any gathering in connection with the church where a girl could do anything Hattie was always the first to volunteer.

"I talked with Father Robetaille before I came to Boston. He told me how sorry he was that such a charge could be made against any one that had ever been connected with his church, but even a little girl.

"Father Robetaille told me that he would come to find out if it would serve any purpose for him to come to Boston and testify for Hattie. He said that he could tell the jury that she had always been an honest and an industrious girl. He said that he knew her well and that he could and would go on the stand that would show that Hattie had not a vicious drop of blood in her veins.

"State Detective Byrnes saw Father Robetaille. I think he obtained an affidavit from the priest. That affidavit contains a statement that is in favor of Hattie. The priest says that he will not put the State to the expense of bringing him to Boston, if he is needed to help save the accused girl. He will pay his own expenses.

"I know that he could help Hattie Le Blanc a great deal. In a case of this character the reputation of the girl when she came here and went to work in the Glover family would naturally have much weight.

"The question that will go to the jury ... Father Robetaille must have been in the same parish for about a dozen years, so that he ... knows Hattie place she was old enough to go to church."

VINCENT CLUB GIRL WILL BE BRIDE OF FRANCIS H. BURRAGE

MISS MARION GAY.

OUTDOOR SPORTS LEND CUPID HELP

Marion O. Gay, to Wed, in Romance of the South Shore.

A ... that which the So... Shore summer colony has long been predicting has occurred and the engagement of pretty Marion O. Gay, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Gay of Crestfield street and Cohasset, to Francis H. Burrage, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, is announced and the young people are being delugged with congratulations and felicitations.

Miss Gay, who is as popular as she is pretty and as chic and dashing a young Miss as there is in society, was introduced a few seasons ago and was at once chosen a member of the Vincent Club.

The young couple have been riding and driving, playing golf and tennis together for many summers, and the prophets of their set long ago commenced nodding their heads in approval and predicting the happy outcome. Both young people are exceptionally fond of outdoor sports and have so many tastes in common that it is hardly to be wondered at that they fell in love.

Miss Gay is a sister of Miss Caroline Gay, and the two girls spent last Winter abroad with their relatives, the Dorrs.

Mr. Burrage, who is one of the most popular young men about town, is a brother of Miss Elizabeth Burrage and Albert C. Burrage, Jr., and Russell Burrage, both Harvard men.

Wrights May Try.

Mr. Wright intimates that it is not improbable he and his brother may build such an aeroplane especially to make the flight from ocean to ocean for the Hearst prize. They have at present the most durable and stable flying machine in existence. The Wright biplane is [illegible] flying in heavier weather and retaining its equilibrium in more contrary [illegible] any other air craft. This danger has made the altitude flights of Brookins, Morane, Drexel and Chavez extremely perilous. It makes the flight over the Alps—8,000 feet high almost foolhardy. It makes flying in regions far above sea level hazardous. The flight across the American continent leads over vast stretches which are exceedingly [illegible] and arid. SCOTT DEATH STIRS THE DEER HUNTERS

Dissatisfied with a coroner's finding of "accidental death," the authorities of Coos county, New Hampshire, are conducting a more searching investigation into the death of Walter Scott, a wealthy automobile dealer of Saugus, who was shot last Wednesday while deer hunting near Beechers Falls, Pittsburg, N. H.

The bullet which killed Mr. Scott has been extracted from his body. It came from a high power rifle. The officers are trying to find a rifle using bullets to match this one.

The county authorities believe that, if Mr. Scott's death was the result of a stray shot fired by some other hunter, that it is time such reckless shooting was stopped.

The funeral of Mr. Scott took place yesterday from his home in Saugus. Among those present was the dead man's half brother, George Nevins, who moved away from Saugus some years ago at the time when the old Scott woolen business was abandoned. Mr. Nevins had not been on friendly terms with Mr. Scott for a long time, but the tragedy in the family brought him back to his home town.

Another mourner was G. F. Hutchinson of Beechers Falls, a member of the hunting party from whom Scott had started away alone on the fatal day. Mr. Hutchinson said yesterday:

"Mr. Scott was out hunting deer alone. He was out about half a mile from our camp on Second Lake, which is about twenty-five miles from Beechers Falls.

"Late last Wednesday afternoon, when Scott did not return, I became worried. I organized a searching party.

"We found Scott's body in a clearing with a bullet in his head. It was evident, from the situation of the body and the nature of the clearing, that Scott had been shot while he was in wait for a deer. He fell on his face, with his gun lying beside him."

All Scott's personal effects, including his money, were found intact. His person had not been disturbed. Death was evidently instantaneous.

NEW 'FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.'

Natural Gas and Water from the Same Well.

In boring for oil at Monroe, La., recently, the accidental discovery of a wonderful well of salt water was made which is said to possess marvelous properties. From the same well with the immense volume of water, is a flow of natural gas at approximately 40,000 feet daily.

To utilize the water a concrete natatorium has been erected and the gas flowing from the same pipe is used for illumination. Aside from the novelty, the mixture of the gas and water seems to produce particularly beneficial effects, and many persons variously afflicted claim results little short of miraculous.

It seems possible that Monroe will soon enjoy a reputation as a health resort.

SHUBERT CHAMPIONS "OPEN DOOR" POLICY FOR THEATRES

Protects the Managers and the Public From Dictation, He Declares.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Unless some unfriendly hand breaks the connection Boston is likely to feel the importance of being emphatically inscribed on the new theatrical map before it settles down to ear muffs and goloshes.

It was only last Wednesday that Charles Frohman made the bold confession that he was going to cling close to Boston until November and give strict attention to the production of new plays.

And now Lee Shubert, who shoulders a generous share of the responsibility for the independent movement in the theatrical world, hastens to add that the elevation of Boston to a producing centre will not be a one-sided game by any means—that the syndicate and its near relatives will find itself amply occupied trying to keep pace with his firm and its allies in the matter of new Boston productions.

Boston Has Already "Arrived."

To take Mr. Shubert's identical word for it, "Boston is not going to become a producing centre—it has already been one for years." Which means, as he explained, that plays, not words, make both productions and producing centres, and he cited as lively examples Henry W. Savage and William A. Brady, who in a few recent years have produced more new plays in Boston than any combination of high-minded and well meaning men of the present day drama can possibly hope to accomplish in one season regardless of any promises to the contrary.

"It is almost ridiculous for one man to say that he intends to raise a new production in Boston and by so doing make the city a producing centre," said Mr. Shubert. "It takes more than one man to do all that, and you only need recall new productions that have been made there in the last few years to find that Boston has already arrived in that respect. John Stetson made Boston a producing centre before either the syndicate or the open door was even dreamed of—we are simply following the course laid down before us.

"Open Door" Helps Public

"When you think of all that Mr. Savage [illegible] in Boston," continued Mr. Shubert, "it seems silly for any other producer [illegible] to say that he alone is [illegible] make Boston a regular centre of [illegible] One man, of course, [illegible] in the field with new productions [illegible] that have not been presented [illegible] but he cannot honestly [illegible] extraordinary credit for it at this [illegible] Why, my firm produced a new [illegible] Boston in July, 'Up and Down Broadway,' but we never thought of putting [illegible] we had made Boston a producing centre. That was all done before our time."

Mr. Shubert drifted naturally to the [illegible] development of [illegible] which [illegible] overturning [illegible] of its rule over a large [illegible] of the one-night stand territory in New England.

Of course Mr. Shubert believes devoutly in the open door. He believes it [illegible] managers of New England, he said positively, "have nothing to fear from the open door. It is really their salvation, for it takes the control of their theatres from greedy interests and places it where it belongs—with the managers of the theatres themselves."

Wars On Dictators.

"The open door not only gives the small city manager a chance to control his own property, but it gives the playgoers, through their managers, an opportunity to see plays that they want and not plays that are forced upon them by men in New York who [illegible] interest in the welfare of the one-night stand houses has apparently been [illegible] profit they could squeeze from them.

"Let me [illegible] myself clear on one point," and Mr. Shubert spoke with [illegible] "the [illegible] promoters of the open door [illegible] independent movement are not going into the [illegible] territory like a band of pirates. We are going there for the good of the theatres and the playgoers in that territory, and if we make good, as I know we shall, for results are already developing splendidly, we will find sufficient reward to satisfy everyone concerned in the effort.

"As a matter of plain fact, the open door is not the result of any particular effort on the part of any group of men, but the natural outcome of a vicious booking system that had been practiced for years by men who were paid to protect the small city theatre, but who, by reason of their position in the field, were enabled not only to misrepresent their clients, but safely assume a dictatorial attitude that made the existence of the one-night stand manager unbearable.

Open to All Producers.

"The formation of the National Owners Association was the direct outcome of abuses that the one-night stand manager had been forced to face for years. It is merely an organization of self-defence and not one of aggression, as its critics have been proclaiming.

"The open door is wide open to every producer in the country, even syndicate producers, but the open door will not tolerate booking office interference. Under the old arrangement of syndicate bookings the manager of the theatre in Salem, for instance, could not protect himself against any attraction the syndicate wished to send him—he simply accepted what was sent him or got nothing. His patrons might complain, but he could not help himself. He simply dangled on the loose end of a string that was pulled in New York.

"To-day the small theatre manager has a great deal to say about his attractions—he books what he pleases through his own association and not through any booking office that represents a dozen or more producers. My own firm is closely allied with the open door, but we are not permitted to [illegible] our own plays in the open door theatres."

Helps One-Night Stands.

Mr. Savage, Mr. Brady and George Tyler make their own arrangements with the National Theatre Owners Association, and you should have no trouble believing that the one-night stand manager, under this arrangement, is in a position to give his patrons more for their money than they have had the pleasure of enjoying for years."

Mr. Shubert hastened to add—and repeat—that New England has nothing to fear from the open door. "It is movement of self-defence," he said, "that has seized the greater part of the theatrical territory of the country, and you will find that the affairs of the theatres represented in the movement are on a more substantial and sane basis than ever before."

The effect of the open door in New England has been to take the control of about twenty-five theatres from the syndicate to the National Theatre Owners' Association. These cities include Bangor, Lewiston, Portland, Portsmouth, Manchester, Concord, Lynn, Salem, New Bedford, Fall River, Providence, Haverhill, New Haven, Hartford and a dozen other busy communities.

CUTICURA CURES STAY CURED

First Father is Cured of an Eruption that Burned and Itched Day and Night. Then Baby is Cured of a Distressing Rash.

Neighbors Pleased to Find a Sure Cure for Skin Afflictions.

"I suffered for eight years with what the doctors called the 'seven year itch.' This was like small red pimples such as form on the face but they burned and itched, day and night. These pimples were from my ankles up, but mostly on my thighs and arms. I tried doctor after doctor but their medicines brought no relief. But at last I struck the right treatment — this was Cuticura. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies — Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills — and a few applications brought relief. When I had used about half the set I was nearly cured and after using two full sets I was well and best of all, I have stayed cured.

"About four months ago, our baby began to be covered with a rash and his head with a spreading sore. Back of the ears, the flesh cracked open and the poor baby would scratch till it bled. He worried, cried and could not sleep. Then we bought a set of Cuticura and with a few applications the burning and itching ceased, baby stopped worrying and could sleep. When this single set had gone we had no use for any more as baby was never troubled with the disease again. The neighbors who saw the condition of the baby all asked what cured him and when we told them, they were surprised and pleased to find a sure cure for these skin afflictions. Edward H. Carter, 323 North 37th St., Camden, N. J., Mar. 6, 1910."

INDEPENDENTS PUT UP TICKET AGAINST BOSSES

League Ticket the Only Progressive-W.R.Hearst

The following statement was sent by William Randolph Hearst last night to the State convention of the Independence League in Webster Hall:

"Fellow delegates to the Independence League Convention:

"I am exceedingly sorry that I was not with you as a delegate last Wednesday to vote for the adoption of your splendidly progressively platform, to vote for the nomination for Governor of John Jacob Hopper and to add my vote to yours in favor of a straight Independence League ticket. I wrote lately: 'My preference is always for a straight Independence League ticket, but I have sacrificed my preferences whenever two progressives tickets would merely have divided the progressive vote.'

"I say to-night that I would have sacrificed my preferences again if I had felt that our straight ticket would do nothing better than divide the progressive vote.

"But on the contrary I am confident that our straight ticket will unite the progressive vote under the banner of the Independence League. Our straight ticket will give progressives the only opportunity that they will have in this campaign to vote for a platform that sincerely expresses their ideas and for candidates that honestly represent their principles. Our straight ticket offers the only refuge to the progressive citizens, who were shrewdly tricked in the Republican convention and boldly driven out of the Democratic convention.

"I believe that the people generally have come to understand the combination that exists between both of the old parties on behalf of the privileged interests and I believe that your convention will be heartily thanked by all patriotic citizens, regardless of party, for the opportunity that it has again given the public to repudiate a corrupt political compact.

"I do not think that any Democrat is so innocent and trustful as to imagine that a Democratic convention firmly held in the greasy grip of Boss Murphy could be honestly opposed to boss dictation and corporation corruption.

"Without boss dictation there would not be anything for Murphy to do, and without corporation corruption there would not be anything for Murphy to take.

"I do not think that any Republican is so childlike and confiding as to believe that a convention directed by Elihu Root could possibly be opposed to the criminal trusts or to the evil alliance between unscrupulous interests and purchasable politicians.

"Can the man who defended Tweed become the foe of corrupt bosses? Can the man who represented Ryan become the enemy of corporation corruption?

"What kind of a radical reform Republican convention is it in which Mr. Roosevelt occupies the little position of temporary chairman and Mr. Root the big position of permanent chairman?

"I say it is a temporarily radical and a permanently re[illegible]ary Republican convention.

"What kind of a radical reformer is it who takes for himself that small position of temporary chairman and purposely places '[illegible] of all evil' in the conspicuous position of permanent chairman?

"I say it is a temporarily radical and a permanently [illegible]ing, compromising, trimming, fraudulent reformer.

"What kind of a Jeffersonian Democratic convention is it where the word of a Tammany boss is substituted for the [illegible] method of majority rule, where a ticket named by secret influences in a back room pretends to represent the Democratic idea of equal rights for all, special privileges for none?

"I say there was not an old-fashioned, genuine Democratic thought or method in all of this late so-called Democratic convention and that there is hardly one sincere Democratic candidate on all of this so-called Democratic ticket.

"I say that this Democratic ticket is a ticket of reactionary bolters and Tammany traitors, rewarded through their present preferment for past disloyalty to Democratic candidates and persistent betrayal of Democratic principles. I do not see how any honest Jeffersonian Democrat can support this false Democratic ticket.

"I do not see how any sincere progressive Republican can support this fraudulent Republican ticket. The Independence League has done exactly as it pledged itself to do. It has made an honest effort to support progressive principles and progressive candidates regardless of party, and, having failed to find them in the old parties, it has bravely determined to make an independent campaign of its own. I think that you may adjourn to-night confident that you have done your patriotic duty, and confident, too, that all honest, earnest citizens will appreciate your action and will in their turn do their duty at the polls.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—

FOR GOVERNOR—John J. Hopper of New York.

FOR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR—William Randolph Hearst of New York.

FOR SECRETARY OF STATE—Thomas P. Scully of Oneida.

FOR COMPTROLLER—Arnold B. M'Stay of New York.

FOR STATE TREASURER—William Irving Sirovick of New York.

FOR ATTORNEY-GENERAL—Robert Stewart of Kings.

FOR STATE ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR—James A. Lee of Rockland.

FOR JUDGES OF THE COURT OF APPEALS—Reuben Roble Lyon of Steuben, James A. Allen of New York.

This is the full straight Independence League State ticket.

It was completed last night at an unbossed convention at Webster Hall amid great enthusiasm and pledges of heartiest support.

John J. Hopper having been already nominated for Governor, and William Randolph Hearst for Lieutenant-Governor, seven places remained to be filled.

Practically every candidate selected was chosen with unanimity, except Secretary of State. A spirited contest developed between the adherents of Dr D. W. Fenlmore of St. Lawrence and Dr. William Irving Sirovick of this city. Sirovick finally won by an overwhelming majority.

In every utterance and demonstration throughout the proceedings the wisdom of repudiating any proffered deals with Root or Murphy was commended and emphasized.

The sentiment was "we all go it alone and smash both machines" was all pervading.

Owing to the Cooper Union, where the first convention had been held, had been leased by others, it became necessary last night to procure another hall. It was at first believed that the league headquarters at the Park Avenue Hotel would furnish accommodations for delegates and alternates at least. It soon developed, however, and there was little room for the 4[illegible] odd representatives. So at the eleventh hour Webster Hall in East Eleventh street was engaged.

As the convention was about to adjourn Clarence J. Shearn was recognized by Mr Lissberg, the chairman. Mr. Shearn said:

"I thought you would all like to have a word from Mr. Hearst before the convention adjourned. I asked him if he would not come down to-night and appear before you if possible. He was not able to do so, but when I asked him if he would not send some word to the boys in the the convention he consented, and I have just received a message from him which I will read."

Mr. Shearn's announcement was received with cheers, the delegates rising and cheering for several minutes. Mr Shearn was interrupted repeatedly as read Mr Hearst's statement.

Mr. Hearst's reference to Boss Murphy and his absolute domination of the [illegible]ter convention was cheered with earnestness, and the chairman was forced to appeal for order that the rest of the message might continue.

BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT SPREADS AS STRONG FORCES JOIN

Work in Full Swing, Powerful Influences Aiding in Bringing Success.

SOME splendid meetings were held by the organizers of the American Boy Scout during the week just closed. One of the most interesting was in the Beacon Universalist Church, Brookline, where the Rev. J. Van Nelco Bandy is pastor. Mr. Bandy is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, having served with the Third Nebraska Volunteers. He is much interested in the American Boy Scout movement because of its broad scope and its absolute freedom from any sectarian influence.

Upon the invitation of Mr. Bandy, Major Edwin R. Short, who served thirty-five years as a scout in the Indian wars under General Custer, Major Reno and others, was detailed by the secretary of the New England Headquarters to address a meeting of the Brookline boys, in Mr. Bandy's church Thursday evening. Major Short reported one of the most successful and enjoyable evenings he has ever had. The concrete result of the evening was the formation of two patrols of eleven boys each, the nucleus of a company which Mr. Bandy hopes to form in Brookline. He will serve as Scout Master, although he is a busy clergyman.

Every one of the twenty-two boys comes from a prominent family in Brookline, and many of them said they knew of other boys who are anxious to join.

Major Short reports that the patrols have ideal facilities for their work, as the church has granted the use of a small hall and the larger hall, which will seat five hundred, with a stage, banquet hall, [illegible] and dressing rooms, for the more extensive scout practice.

Boys Are Ambitious.

The boys are eager to go to work at once and Scout Master Bandy promised to take them out yesterday for a hike through the fields and over the hills of the upper part of Brookline. [illegible] will be equipped with uniforms within a few days.

[illegible] the boys in the ninth grades of the [illegible], Mark Hopkins and Freeman schools [illegible] North Adams, [illegible] company, with Scout Master Jourdenais visited the schools and explained the work. The American Boy Scout [illegible] have been formed, and a [illegible] team is being organized. Scout Master Jourdenais has just succeeded in enrolling all the boys of the parochial schools of North Adams.

It is practically settled that the School Committee will grant the use of the Mark Hopkins Gymnasium for the athletic work of the American Boy Scout and the Grand Army Hall will probably be granted for drilling purposes.

During the week Scout Master Jourdenais took several of his patrols, about fifty boys in all, on a hike, and [illegible] boys, after several hours of hard work along scouting lines, organized themselves into [illegible] picking battalion and scoured the woods. When the results were pooled and equally divided each boy had two quarts of fine, big chestnuts.

Nearer home the work progresses splendidly. The several patrols of the American Boy Scout of Everett are arranging for a Scout Night at the Broadway Theater Tuesday, October 11. The theatre has made a generous commission offer on the sale of tickets.

The boys are working like Trojans to sell out the house so they may raise a fund to obtain such things as are necessary to make a more creditable showing. In addition to the regular show it is expected to [illegible] Boy Scout [illegible] Major Edwin [illegible] will [illegible] scouts [illegible] and [illegible] to see him and hear him tell of the [illegible] Big Horn during which General Custer lost his life, and in which [illegible] participated.

Saturday afternoon Scout Master [illegible] McLean of Everett and four of the patrols [illegible] to Linden [illegible] [illegible] enemy [illegible] Leaders Johnson and [illegible], with their patrols, took a half [illegible] and found the [illegible] camp [illegible] in the hills. Leaders Peters and Harriman, with their patrols, took up the trail and put up some pretty fine work [illegible] and wildness of this [illegible] this was no easy matter for boys [illegible] age. Scout Master McLean will [illegible] younger scouts [illegible] the operations.

The work of assigning the scouts to the [illegible] masters of Greater Boston has been taken up and every man who has filed an application for enlistment as an Airer in boy scout will receive his assignment by the end of the week.

Many splendid offers to help the American Boy Scout were received during the week at the New England Headquarters. Dr. F. F. Schuemacht of [illegible] has offered the use of his beautiful place, Sherwood Forest, Squam Lake, N. H., an estate of more than two hundred and fifty acres [illegible] American Boy Scout [illegible] says he can [illegible] there at any time up to June [illegible], and [illegible] until August [illegible] The two [illegible] New England spring and the big [illegible] New [illegible] and [illegible] camp.

The next feature is the elongation of the heel on the inside and the scooping off of the sharp inward corner where the arrow points to.

For people afflicted with incipient or aggravated forms of flat foot, these soles and heels will give intelligent assistance and at the same time are not unsightly like other things that are offered to the trade.

Heels are 50c. Soles are 75c. Send postal order accompanied by diagram of sole and heel to the manufacturers, O'Sullivan Rubber Co., Lowell, Mass. Competent Shoemakers will attach them for a reasonable amount.

FEATURELESS DAY IN STOCK MARKET

Except for Sears-Roebuck $12 Jump and United Railway Investment There Was No Trading

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—All Wall Street stood in a position strained attention by watching Steel for a signal to go in some direction and Steel [illegible]. The stock swung between 69¾ and 70 1-8, closing at 69 7-8. It seemed like the dullest day on record in Wall Street with less than 100,000 shares dealt in. Somebody wanted 200 shares of Sears-Roebuck stock and had to pay $12 a share for it above the previous quotation. A little larger block of Mackay stock was secured after an advance of 3⅛ points. United Railway Investment preferred also advanced three points on a small transaction. Aside from these specialties the feature of the day was the strength of Smelting.

There was much speculation regarding the news that is promised on the Steel Trust. It is known that the railroads are preparing to put in some very large orders for equipment, but the expressed news is not believed to have any reference to orders. The report of the Steel Corporation Monday on unfilled orders should show a decrease of something like 300,000 tons at least. Whatever bad influence this may have will be overwhelmed by the Government crop report, which should show the greatest volume of crops ever raised in [illegible] the optimists as much as the pessimists, for even the most hopeful never dreamed of such a corn crop as has been [illegible].

Stocks maintained a stubbornly strong undertone all the week in spite of [illegible] that would upset an ordinary market. The Interstate Commerce Commission let it be known that no advance of freight rates would be [illegible] before January 1 at the earliest. Steel prices were read [illegible] tended to prove the existence of an agreement between [illegible] and the independents. The National City Bank asserted that the Monetary Commission will not make a report to the present Congress, thus throwing [illegible] of the national banking system and of the currency into the hands of the [illegible] to be elected this year. The feature of the market was the activity in bonds, and there seemed to be a genuine demand for gilt-edged [illegible] of this class.

[illegible] of the rate decision is due largely to the confusion caused [illegible] given to shippers [illegible] that the public [illegible] is anxious [illegible]. President Taft [illegible] assurances that he would insist on a square deal for the railroads, [illegible] President's statement [illegible] financial world to accept the [illegible] rate decision [illegible] deal for the railroads, and it was [illegible] statement that aided the financial world to accept the postponement [illegible] decision with [illegible].

[illegible] reported their annual earnings last week [illegible] and Northern Pacific, and both of these showed an enormous [illegible] operating expenses. In spite of that, the roads earned net [illegible] liberal dividends, and the belief is now general that American [illegible] will not at any time be pressed hard enough to endanger their [illegible] as the true reason of the good demand for bonds, for bonds [illegible].

[illegible] seems to be in plentiful supply for call loans, the time [illegible]. The heavy loss of cash by the New York banks [illegible] Bank of England shows a world-wide crisis in money affairs. [illegible] derations are disturbing Europe almost as much as America. [illegible] that the political makeup of the next Congress will be such [illegible] impossible to reach a definite decision in regard to reform [illegible] tends to make money timid.

[illegible] of steel prices consisted of announcements made at practically [illegible] time by the Steel Trust and the leading independents naming [illegible] on the same grades of material. This announcement followed [illegible] of steel men at the Waldorf so closely as to make it [illegible] agreed upon at that conference. The United [illegible] will act against the steel companies if any such agreement [illegible].

H. M. WHITNEY IS A CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY

HENRY M. WHITNEY.

RHODE ISLAND COAL NOW HIS PET HOBBY

Was Responsible for $3,000,000 Appropriation for East Boston Harbor.

HENRY M. WHITNEY is one of Boston's captains of industry. Boston owes him much for organizing the Boston Elevated Railroad Company as a successor to the West End Street Railway which was a consolidation of a number of surface lines. It has been said that Henry M. Whitney was the creator of the West End in Boston. New England and the Provinces owe him much for the development of coal and iron deposits. The nation owes much to him as perhaps its foremost exponent of reciprocal trade relations with Canada. Reciprocity with Canada is one of Mr. Whitney's several hobbies.

Mr. Whitney's pet enterprise at this time is the Rhode Island Coal Company. This company owns the mining rights on about 4,000 acres of coal land located in [illegible] R. I., believed to be the center of the coal deposits of the Narragansett basin. He has directed all his efforts to creating [illegible] in New England, which can compete with Pennsylvania anthracite, and it looks as if he had succeeded.

Mr. Whitney is a philosopher. At three [illegible] 72 [illegible] month he is active and robust, with his vigor [illegible] with every indication [illegible] residence in Brookline, but prefers [illegible] house at Cohasset [illegible] of the year as he [illegible]. He is president and director of the American [illegible] of the Boston & Gloucester Steamship Company, vice president of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Board [illegible] a director of the West End [illegible]. He is president and director of the Rhode Island Coal Company and is a director in the East Boston Land Company. It was largely through his efforts [illegible] the Massachusetts Legislature [illegible] appropriate $3,000,000 at its last session for [illegible] improvement of the East Boston [illegible]. Mr. Whitney has a way of getting what he wants out of the law makers, it is said, and it has usually turned out that his wishes were [illegible] the interests of the people.

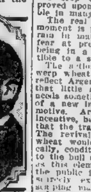
PUBLIC NIBBLING AT COPPER STOCKS

Local Market Broadening—Metal Stocks Likely to Take Important Part in General Market.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, Oct. 8.—Copper shares are fast catching the step and promise better things. An improvement is also noted in the metal market with indications of further betterment there. The public is nibbling in the share market, which has resulted in a better tone all around. At the same time the local market has broadened materially, and it now looks as if improved conditions might also be looked for in this direction. Stocks which receive a quotation but seldom now have a price attached to them, which is an unusual thing of late and leads to encouragement for the future.



It now looks as if the metal stocks would take an important part in the general market. They have already been conspicuously strong in the Wall street list and have had a renewed lease of life in local affairs. As yet the market here is professional to a large extent, but its broadening tendency is clearly indicative of public interest.

The appearance of the Copper Producers' report for September with its decrease of rising 20,000,000 pounds in the American supplies fell flat as a market factor, but this large reduction at this time cannot be overestimated. The October figures will undoubtedly show a further large reduction, while those for November will more fully reflect the curtailment agreement inaugurated during the early Summer. The production during September was but a trifle under that of the preceding month, but deliveries were the largest for any one known month with but one exception, and that was in January of the current year.

Copper exports during September have only been exceeded but once, and that was during January last. Domestic deliveries were about normal. Copper looks like going higher, and this will give stimulus to the shares. Mining companies are reducing costs little by little, and some of the lesser producing ones are now making money at the present price of copper. Although coppers did not respond to the favorable statistical copper exhibit, there will be a gradual awakening to conditions which will prove beneficial to the share market.

Stocks hesitate with inactivity. Apparently the large interests are content with market conditions. Prices have advanced fairly continuous. There has been no over-booming, except in isolated spots, and the general market bears a healthy condition. Continued improvement is noted in the bond market, and there is little fear of anything beyond a temporary flurry in money. Politics are shaping themselves favorable to stock market interests and business is apparently holding its own. Crops are secure, and bumper ones at that.

Although not quite so dull as the New York list, the local copper share market was quiet with activity in North Butte and Mass Mining this forenoon. Granby recovered 2 points and Shannon showed strength. Recent buying of North Butte has been excellent. In this connection it can be said that one of the largest North Butte stockholders has repurchased his original holdings within the last month. This is significant in view of the fact that a material improvement is reported in the underground workings. There was no pressure to sell coppers while a fair volume of buying orders is reported just under the market. Such curb issues as Chino, Inspiration, Arizona-Cananea, Arizona Mines and Rhode Island Coal were active and strong.

The New York banks again lost in surplus reserve, so that but $5,947,300 remains to the credit of that item. A decrease of $9,711,900 in specie was practically responsible for this, but as the season for shipping money to the West for crop moving purposes is nearly at an end, no alarm should be occasioned. While loans were reduced $13,219,400 during the week, deposits fell off $27,846,000. The total of the former now exceeds total deposits by $23,309,700.

IMPROVEMENT IN LEATHER.

Hide Market Tending Down, but Still Too High.

Conditions in the shoe and leather trade continue to improve and show a more cheerful tone, but the demand is irregular. Though the hide market has been somewhat easier during the past week sales have been limited because of the holding of packers for their price. It is interesting to note and also encouraging to the leather [illegible] that while packers have held prices for their hides firm, country hides, which are subject to the law of supply and demand, are very weak.

There is more inquiry for all kinds of leather [illegible]. Any general [illegible] of prices [illegible] and is still irregular, which [illegible] and splits, [illegible] well. Neither [illegible] in price, but the [illegible] is still quiet. The [illegible] is still quiet in some [illegible] for upper tanned [illegible] strong [illegible] sole leather is in good [illegible] selling manufacturers [illegible] sales, the [illegible] leather [illegible] prices.

WOOL QUIET, BUT FIRM.

Shortage of America's Clip Has Developed Optimism.

The local wool market remains comparatively [illegible].

As usual there are two views as to the future of wool [illegible] traders look upon the [illegible] the markets affected.

Against the admittedly large increase in supplies to come from Australia, New Zealand, South Africa [illegible] the shortage of 30,000,000 pounds [illegible] 40,000,000 pounds in the American clip this year, and the [illegible] American [illegible] to the present [illegible] of the past [illegible] of the tailing of a [illegible] and demands for the meat market continues at the present rate.

From the firm tone of the market and the [illegible] of sellers to yield a particle, it is [illegible] the turn in the tide has [illegible] real activity will soon ensue. Moreover, the buying demand is broadening out in a healthy way, [illegible] will be [illegible] buyers. Statistics show that the manufacturers as a rule are carrying light stocks, and that stocks of counter goods are also low.

The buying of the past week here has been mostly of [illegible] made to dealers [illegible] blood to 60 cents [illegible] there are said to be numerous [illegible]. It has been impossible to [illegible] a large sale of [illegible] territory wool at prices representing a scoured cost of 50 [illegible] cents. The sales made and the asking prices make the scoured cost of territory at present about 51 to 72 cents for quarter blood [illegible] blood, 71 to 62 cents for half blood, and 65 to 67 cents for fine staple.

METAL EXCHANGES.

The New York metal markets were quiet, but unsettled. [illegible] Lake copper, 12.62½ @12.87½; electrolytic, 12.50@12.75, and casting, 12.25@12.50. Lead, 4.40@4.55. Spelter, 5.50@5.60. Iron, unchanged.

WHEAT REPORTS ARE CONFLICTING

Large Argentine Shipments and Good Weather Here Cause Selling.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Wheat news has changed with the Argentine crop advices this week. The reports were conflicting in character, some of them reading no damage at all, while others said that the losses were likely to be severe. Several houses here and in the Northwest received reports of hot weather, with the drought unbroken. Other houses were advised that the crop outlook could hardly be improved upon, yet rain would be acceptable in many sections.

The real situation in Argentina at the moment is probably that there is need of rain in many quarters, but the greatest fear at present is of frosts, the wheat being in a condition particularly susceptible to a sharp drop in temperature.

The action of the Argentine and Antwerp wheat markets, which most closely reflect Argentine conditions, tend to show that little anxiety is felt. The market needs something more tangible in the way of a new inspiration to supply a definite motive. Argentina is a prospective new incentive, but advices are so contradictory that the trade has no confidence in them. The revival of a domestic demand for wheat would help considerably. Statistically, conditions should be more favorable to the bull side from now on, but as long as this element of uncertainty exists and the public is disinterested, the trade can scarcely expect anything more than a scalping market.

Enormous shipments from Argentina and seasonable weather conditions in this country has caused general selling of corn at lower prices. The Armour Grain Company, after having looked over the field carefully, estimates that the yield of corn will be fully 3,000,000,000 bushels. Those in a position to know say that the corn crop is out of the way of frosts and that it is fully made. The railways of the West expect a heavy movement in the near future, and in many instances oats and wheat will have to be shipped out of elevators in order to make room for the new crop of corn. The country continues a free seller of its cash grain, in the belief that the supply of new corn will be [illegible] before next month.

The Eastern demand for cash oats shows a marked improvement and some traders have covered short lines on this one fact. The Iowa crop has still to come out, but shipments are now being made direct to the seaboard instead of coming via Chicago. There is a large open interest in oats in this market, with the shortage mainly held by the elevator concerns.

FORTUNE IN EPSOM SALTS.

Michael McCammon, a rancher near Oroville, Stevens County, Washington, separated the government from a small lake under mineral rights. By draining the lake at government expense, he comes into possession of several hundred thousand tons of epsom salts, shown by laboratory test equal to the German product worth twenty-five cents per pound.

The lake is a thousand feet long, nearly two hundred deep, with the bed and banks covered with a thick deposit of salts.

PORTUGUESE REVOLT HITS STOCK MARKET

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Portugal was responsible for an international flurry in securities—for just one session. On Wednesday of last week British consols fell to the lowest in sixty-three years.

That Europe's premier security should have scored in pessimism is not surprising when it is recalled that the English own the major part of Portugal's debt.

This statement demands no qualification. It merely asks an explanation, for a change from a monarchist to a republican form of government is not necessarily a change for the better in Portugal. If the history of the Portuguese insurgents is at all instructive, the move at best is rotatory; at worst it means backforemost progress.

Manifestly, a citizen of a republic, and especially of the American republic, should rejoice whenever and wherever a president is substituted for a king, but Portugal may make an exception to the self-evident proposition.

The present economic woes of that unhappy country are not rooted in kingcraft, but in parliamentary graft. The Portuguese Parliament is responsible for a debt per capita of $156.71, the highest of any civilized nation. To Parliament is due the terrible fact that a land with only 35,490 square miles and a pauper population less than 6,000,000 owes $1,000,000,000 in government bonds held by foreigners. Parliament is to be held for a state of affairs where a yearly revenue is $57,000,000 against expenditures of $71,000,000, where imports are $70,000,000 and exports $36,000,000, where a school system is much more of a theory than a practice, where agriculture is in the lowest stages, where highways are mainly impassible and where railways are largely a geographical conception.

Economic reform was attempted by the deposed boy's father. His end was tragic. The eighteen-year-old boy and a dansuese are charged by the Parliament clique with having despoiled Portugal's treasury. The accusation is richly silly. Portugal's treasury has been subject to spoliation for half a century by Parliament.

This unfortunate nation has not been governed by a monarch. It has been misgoverned by a Parliament—by a crew given to peculation, corruption and every legal and illegal form of maladministration; by conspirators who are a hideous travesty on Portugal's illustrious history; by intriguers of a country that produced a Vasco Da Gama and other great explorers and navigators.

For years the Portuguese Parliament has been a house of time servers, of place hunters and place-makers, of grafters, of corruptionists, of small change interests, who have wrangled and intrigued, wholly callous to the increasing ignorance and poverty of the masses. It has been said of Napoleon that he was more careful of France's francs than of her people. Portugal's Parliament has been reckless of the country's money as well as of its people.

And while a Napoleon is in mind, a comparison occurs between the coup d'etat of last week and that of Napoloon III. Fifty-nine years ago Louis Napoleon before he had himself proclaimed Emperor of the French had the grace to go through the form of an election. A plebiscite was taken. Portugal's parliamentary clique did not condescend to appeal to the people, although the laws of Portugal would have permitted the establishment of a republic in a perfectly legal and peaceful manner. Votes only were necessary. But the ballot was deemed unnecessary. All that the politicians thought necessary was the aid of certain officers of the army and navy.

It is, of course, possible that the hoisting of a flag will make a republic and that a republic can be made without republicans. Spain in the early seventies tried the experiment—and Spain's revolutionary party was at least frugal and had their country's good at heart.

No wonder, then, that British consols touched the lowest in a generation. English investors may be Tories or Liberals in politics. In finance, particularly in foreign finance, they are hard-headed, dispassionate financiers who judge of a country's condition according to the law of pound and pence. They do not think the complete accession in Portugal of the parliamentary party a matter of financial rejoicing.

Surely, the world will hope that Portugal's chief creditors are mistaken. Despite a short record, finance will wish the parliamentary party well. But the leaders have undertaken an enormous task. Reform will be difficult, especially will be difficult the task of self-reform. The Portuguese people require the intelligence which the school master can develop. The farmer must have more and better agricultural implements and must be relieved half his taxes. The artisan must have employment, and when he works must have a living wage, and the trade balance must be reversed.

Opinions of the Brokers

Haydar, Stone & Co.—We are considerably impressed this week by the bullish sentiment in copper circles. It is now possible to see electrolytic copper in quantity for as low as 12 cents a pound. This is the best price that has obtained since the April slump. For a year and a half copper and the metal trade in which more significance, edge and "futures," were "agreed" business has been done at 12 cents. The certainty of the ultimate return of copper to 13 cents, etc., is about 4-5 par for the entire metallic world. When it takes standard copper, selling less than 12½ cents "spot," it means nothing less than the setter is willing to pay a premium for that carrying cost. This, of course, betokens an acute scarcity, and a scarcity has been the keynote for months past the bread" between spot and futures has been almost nil. Now it is 1½ cents, as much as 2½ cents has obtained the general impression among metal dealers that the present is a peculiarly auspicious moment for the metal this is a matter of fact, and not sentiment. Moreover, the bullish is the result of the favorable statistics that are being published.

F. L. Mithers & Co.—There appears to be a steady increase in confidence so far as it is possible to gauge a matter of sentiment. When it comes to definite evidences in market action, there is the positive evidence of the changes in view from pessimism to optimism. Hopefulness is still tempered with caution as regards the rank and file of investors. There is little doubt, however, that the general aspect of conditions contains the elements for a substantial betterment in the position of market sentiment will appear in more active form. Meanwhile, the situation is best to all concerned that speculative sentiment should remain quiet during the autumn. All in all, the evidence appears to be daily cumulative that the worst is behind us, and that the main movement of security prices, allowing for seasonable reactions, will be upward.

Whitney, Watson & Co.—The Wall Street situation has not changed much since a week ago. The revolution in Portugal had no effect upon the security markets either here or abroad, as it is believed that the new governments will honor the liability of outstanding obligations. A settlement is noticed towards La Copper shares. The curtailment programme by the copper companies has been a considerable reduction in the monthly output of the metal. The statistical position is now and the end of October is quite interesting, as the copper has left the hands of the Eastern money markets, and the annual movement of copper has begun its journey to trade balance in our favor. Everything seems to be favorable for an upward movement in stock market.

A. M. MacKenzie & Co.—For the first time in over six large industrial and financial interests seem to be loosening their purse strings to any degree. It is generally acknowledged that the security price level is on a fairly safe basis, and that the present time is an opportune moment for investment being made of idle funds in the leading outside. Bear raids are by no means less and less frequent and prices respond more readily to good news than at any other time of year. As yet the public lacks confidence, strength and leadership, but once the banking powers are in confidence that will unquestionably demand a larger following.

Thompson, Towle & Co.—We admit being impressed with the strength displayed by the copper shares during the recent bullish reports by coppers on their first impressions. There is nothing in the way of news that could account for the strength in the bull side of the market, and reactions should be of a temporary character. The securities are a distinctive purchase.

Hunt, Kills & Co.—The holders of copper shares generally are congratulating themselves that at least some business principles are to be applied to the copper industry.

Notes for Investors

Private telegrams state that the deadlock between the Standard Oil and the Independent refineries regarding the price of crude oil is broken. The Associated, Standard Oil, has purchased all the oil of the surplus of the Independents.

Advices from Pittsburg state that a melon is to be cut in prize Union Switch & Signal Co. stock, amounting to 90 per cent. in a stock dividend.

At the annual meeting of the F. B. Stearns Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, manufacturers of Stearns Motor Cars, a cash dividend of 25 per cent. and a dividend of 25 per cent. in stock was declared. The following officers and directors were elected: F. B. Stearns, president; F. Mather, vice-president; E. Mather, secretary; F. B. Stearns, 2d, treasurer; F. M. Stearns, H. A. Merrill, W. Thomas and Philip Wick, the last two succeeding his father, the late Myron C. Wick, of Youngstown, O.

During September the Goldfield Consolidated Mines had profits of $75,000, the annual meeting of which organization, since February, 1909, has been adjourned from month to month, will probably be held about the same as on August 1 and unanimous proxies throughout the entire length of the year are sent.

A special meeting of stockholders of the Silver Mining Company has been called for October 31 at Reno, Nev., to vote on a reorganization plan. In brief, the plan provides for the formation of a new company, to be known as the Silver Cliff Mining Company, which is to take over all the property of the Owner's company and liquidate the debts of the latter, which amount to $1,000,000, in exchange for new stock, the increase of $1 cent on each share of the latter.

The annual report of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Company for the year ended June 30, 1910, shows profits of $429,685, or $1.72 a share on the company's 80,000 shares.

California Oil News.

Los Angeles dispatches state that it is announced that the report of an agreement between the Associated Oil Company and the Independent Producers' Agency for the sale of 30,000,000 barrels of oil to the Associated Company at 25 cents per barrel, for the delivery of 5,000,000 barrels of oil at a gross price of $2,500,000. Now paying dividends of 2 per cent. per month.

A new gusher has been ushered in at Midway, well 31 of the Sunset-Mexican, and is now flowing forth and spouted at the rate of 2 barrels a day. After a short time the flow was leased in the casing and the flow increased to 3,000 barrels per day. The company is controlled by the Rockefeller interests.

There has been more active trading in oil stocks on the New York curb. Although the prices have not advanced quite three points, there has been a done private. Prices on the various stocks have declined from recent high levels, but recoveries occurred in many cases.

The Lakeview gusher is keeping up its flow of 17,000 barrels per day, with no indication of a decline. The great Cosmos, Pioneer Midway, American Oil and Consolidated Stage and others still maintain a normal output.

The Le Roane Oil Company has struck oil on its lease in section 9-11-23 in Kern county, California, and both of the Washington wells are in depth of 2,364 feet, to have 125 feet of oil sand and a good-sized gusher.

The Honolulu Consolidated has brought in a new well on section 4 of the Midway and is producing from 400 to 500 barrels.

The Brookshire Oil Company has completed a 17,000-barrel tank in the Santa Maria district, California, the fourth for the company.

Mr. James A. Cruikshank of San Francisco, a director of the Lincoln Stock & Bond Company, is in Boston in the interests of the company.

"First, because of my interest in the use of oil as a fuel for naval vessels, and later because of my conviction that the future of the commodity would make it one of the most important features of the world trade, I have invested my money and am at the head of the California Consolidated Oil Company."

Rear Admiral ROBLEY D. EVANS, U. S. N. (Retired.)

OIL, KING OF FUELS

Rear Admiral ROBLEY D. EVANS, President of the California Consolidated Oil Company.

Since the first announcement of the unusual plan offered by the California Consolidated Oil Company, inquiries have been received from investors all over the United States. The organization of such a community of interests to promote a great producing enterprise upon a basis which insures every stockholder his exact share of profits has naturally enlisted the interest of men who have idle money. Remittances have been received by almost every mail from practically every State in the Union. In view of the splendid response to the invitations of the last two weeks, we do not believe that the opportunity will long remain open.

THE PLAN

The California Consolidated Oil Company Presents to You a Dignified Plan of Investment in an Enterprise of Solid Worth, of Actual and Substantial Merit; Backed and Managed by Interests of Unquestioned Integrity.

It is a proposition made possible only through the co-operation of investors who placed their interests in the hands of men upon whom they can rely with absolute confidence. The field to be covered is so large, the property to be acquired so rich, and the necessity for funds so imperative, that no small group of capitalists or detached body of investors could begin to perform what the California Consolidated Oil Company expects to accomplish.

Detailed Statement of the Unusual Offer to Investors

This company has just been organized under the laws of California, having an authorized capitation of 10,000,000 shares of a par value of $1.00 a share. It has been organized under a broad charter, which enables it to acquire and develop certain California Oil properties, construct pipe lines, build refineries and engage in any other business appertaining to the Oil Industry.

Deals have already been consummated for the acquisition of at least three of the leading individual oil companies of California. The net income of these two companies at this time, conservatively estimated at a very low price for crude oil, is about 900,000 per annum. This represents a profit of 10 per cent. per annum on the entire capitalization of the California Consolidated Oil Company at the present price of the stock, regardless of future development.

A special meeting of stockholders of the Silver Mining Company has been called for October 31 at Reno, Nev., to vote on a reorganization plan. In brief, the plan provides for the formation of a new company, to be known as the Silver Cliff Mining Company, which is to take over all the property of the Owner's company and liquidate the debts of the latter, which amount to $1,000,000, in exchange for new stock, the increase of 1 cent on each share of the latter.

The annual report of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Company for the year ended June 30, 1910, shows profits of $429,685, or $1.72 a share on the company's 80,000 shares.

Properties and Earning Power

The properties proposed to be operated by the California Consolidated Oil Company, now being operated as three individual oil companies, are as follows:—

MASCOT OIL COMPANY—Located in the Midway District. Consists of 160 acres. Equipped with 4 wells. Four additional wells now being drilled Present output, 90,000 barrels per month, provides a net income of $460,000 per annum. Has a contract for the delivery of 5,000,000 barrels of oil at a gross price of $2,500,000. Now paying dividends of 2 per cent. per month.

PREMIER OIL COMPANY—Located in Coalinga Oil Fields. Property consists of 160 acres. Fourteen producing wells, one now being drilled and one ready for drilling. These 16 wells, basing the figures upon the present production of the 14 now producing, will yield at least 864,000 barrels yearly. This means a net income of $240,000. Has been paying dividends at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

YELLOWSTONE OIL COMPANY—Holdings in Kern River, Sunset and McKittrick Fields. Property consists of 225 acres, all leased to other companies except 10 acres. These 10 acres being operated by the company contain 6 wells.

The estimates of profit from the Mascot and Premier properties above are based upon the present 50 wells upon the two properties. In the judgment of the best oil experts of California, these properties will easily support 140 wells. On the same conservative basis of estimate this should provide a net income of $1,680,000 per annum. This estimate is based upon the two properties alone, making no allowance for the Yellowstone property or for other profitable branches of the industry into which this corporation will enter.

Underwriters' Syndicate Announcement

Instead of following the usual practice of allotting this stock to a few capitalists as underwriters, and paying them for the disposal of same, it has been decided to organize an Underwriters' Syndicate. Readers of this publication are invited to join us by purchasing this stock at the Underwriters' Syndicate price, the proceeds of which will go toward the payment of the properties. This gives each individual the privilege of associating himself with the organizers of the company, thereby securing the advantages usually accorded to underwriters or the founders of a company of this character.

The fact that this method of organizing a conservative corporation is much more attractive to the American public than to investors of the nation, large and small, who are glad of the opportunity to join in the organization of a company of this kind on the underwriters' basis, and favor the idea of participating in the market at the bottom and not at the top, prove clearly in a company which has been organized by men of unimpeachable integrity for the protection of stockholders' interests.

The Underwriters' Syndicate price for the capital stock of the CALIFORNIA CONSOLIDATED OIL COMPANY is

60 Cents Per Share

No order can be accepted for less than 100 shares. The allotment of stock available at this price is necessarily limited. The demand for the stock is growing very rapidly, and we advise immediate investment in order to make sure of securing the advantage of this low price.

THE JONES DRY GOODS COMPANY, one of the largest department stores in Kansas City, Mo., now in the hands of receivers, have a petition in bankruptcy pending against them.

The Ben Strauss Company, general European buyers for the above firm, annually importing as high as $200,000 worth of merchandise for this house, replevined their Fall shipments to the Jones Dry Goods Company upon learning of their unfortunate receivership and sold to us at a fearful loss the major portion of these European purchases of Finest New Fall Goods.

700,000 SEE BIG AUTO RACE WON BY ZENGLE IN A CHADWICK

Long Neck and Neck Race With Mulford in a Lozier Car at Fairmount.

TWO MEN FATALLY HURT

One Racer Turns Turtle—Winner Covers the 200 Miles in 3 hrs., 7 min., 8 sec.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—By the narrow space of six rounds, the time it takes an unflurried man to inhale and expel his breath, Len Zengle, piloting a Chadwick car, won the third Fairmount Park automobile race, this afternoon.

Ralph Mulford, veteran round-the-clock champion, was second in the low white Lozier, which ran like a grandfather's clock through the 208 mile contest.

A quarter of a million persons saw the race. Not one of them—what a contrast to the Vanderbilt—was killed or injured. Thirty-eight mile course [illegible] and the sole catastrophe of the day was a broken arm sustained by Glenn Etheridge, seat mate of Ralph Beardsley, who drove a Simplex.

The city turned out 2,100 policemen who devoted their energies to keeping people out of danger.

It wasn't a slow race either.

For the 200 miles an average speed of 58.46 miles per hour was maintained by the winning car—and by the second, too, for that matter since only that trifle of six seconds separated them.

Five Races in One.

The Fairmount Park race to-day was really five races. The thirty-two cars were split up, according to their piston displacements into classes 2C, 3C, 4C and 5C and 6C.

They ranged from the tiniest of Fords which looked like cigar boxes mounted on a set of wheels to the biggest of Benz, which resembled a [illegible] battleship firing all its port guns at the same time.

The Lozier with the same white-clad crew that hoisted it through the Vanderbilt, started as No. 1 and took the actual honor place at the end of the first lap, being the leader when the earliest bunch of cars flashed across the timing wire.

Close behind was No. 5, the Benz, piloted by Erwin Bergdoll, a local millionaire sportsman. Jack Aitken's big blue National, which made such a splendid showing in the Vanderbilt was a close third. Every other car was doing nicely.

Lozier Held the Lead.

Lap after lap—again reminiscent of the Vanderbilt—the Lozier held the actual lead.

With the Benz running second, the National third and the Otto—a car which nobody seemed to know much about—a steady fourth.

They are all in different classes. None of them actually was racing the other one. Each was holding its own class but the popular mind [illegible] was a big free for all, and not a class affair.

At the fifth lap the "breezy Benz" wrested away the place of honor from the white Lozier, and held it with regularity until the 15th, by when the engine went wrong in the backstretch.

Len Zengle in Chadwick No. 12 meanwhile has creeping up gradually. At the completion of the 16th lap he was running second to the Lozier which had again taken number one place on the road and was in point of time five two minutes back.

On the nineteenth lap—with only six more to go—the Lozier stopped for a tire, oil and fuel. When it got off again its lead over the Chadwick which hadn't stopped at all, was reduced to only about forty seconds.

At the end of the twenty-third lap Zengle was leading the Lozier by a lone second. The time was: Zengle, 191m. 21s.; Mulford, 191m. 22s.

Now it was any ones race but most apparently the Loziers. In a few minutes the white flier shot around and across the wire. The very next car that hove in sight at the far away bend and sprinted into the home stretch was No. 12, and it whooped across at a seventy-mile clip.

Even then—because it was quite a way back—there was a question as to the victory between the two. The timers figured it Chadwick 209 minutes 7 seconds, Lozier 209 13 seconds. Zengles daring won for him in the end.

As it was, each triumphed. The Chadwick won in its class, the biggest No. 6c. The Lozier walked away from everything in its section the next biggest.

The third car to finish—Jack Aitkens, blue National, also won in its class, No. 4c.

The 'Skeeter races, Nos. 3c and 2c were captured by Ernest Gellard's Pullman and "Paddy" Paddula's little Abbott-Detroit.

The way the diminutive Ford ran in its class was one of the brightest features of the day. It gave every car on the course a brush. In all the long races there were only ten stops at the repair pits by all the contestants combined.

Zengle's winning Chadwick car was fitted with Firestone tires. All of the placed cars in the main event, as well as all the class winners in the other events were Michelin shod, as usual.

HARVARD CRUSHES WILLIAMS==21-0

Crimson Eleven Plays Fast, Thrilling Game in Clash With the Purple

Top photo shows one of the sensational plays of game. Morrison (with ball in right arm) is tackled going around left end. Arrow points to Morrison. Lower photo shows stone wall defense of Berkshire boys. Williams holds Harvard on 5-yard line, the Crimson eleven failing to carry the ball over, and losing it on downs. HARVARD		WILLIAMS

By E. V. B. Parke.

THE big Harvard eleven mowed down the Williams team in the Stadium yesterday afternoon, in the hardest fought struggle in which the Crimson has participated this year. The game was characterized by such open play and some penalties by which Harvard suffered the [illegible] stood 21 to 0.

The day was ideal for a good football [illegible] spectators [illegible] in the Stadium to witness the [illegible].

In a degree the game was rough, though not intentionally so. Both teams were out to put up the best fight which was in them, and went at each other tooth and nail, with the result that penalties were inflicted on Harvard for "use of hands," interference and holding to a total loss of fifty-five yards, while Williams suffered the loss of but ten yards for off-side play.

Harvard in Great Team Play.

The first score of the afternoon was the result of excellent team play on the part of the Crimson eleven. It started with a thirty-yard end by Frothingham around the right end, the ball being carried from Harvard's 23-yard line to the Williams 33-yard line.

Two line plunges by Morrison netted first down. A penalty against Williams for off-side play and two beautiful quarterback runs through center by Wigglesworth, netting thirty yards, put the ball on the four-yard line. In one dash Morrison carried it over, nine minutes after the start of play.

The next score came at the beginning of the second period when Harvard, beginning the play with the ball on Williams' 33 yard line made several efforts to rush it, and finally Lewis put into the fray and, dropping back to the 25-yard line, scored a goal on a drop kick.

Directly after the kick-off Wigglesworth got the ball on his own 45 yard line on a punt from Stevens, and dashed through the Williams team to the 30-yard line where he was finally downed.

On the next play Graustein skirted to Williams right end, with the aid of some classy interference and also ability to keep his feet, when with Williams unable to gain with the ball on its 10-yard line Stevens dropped back for a punt, the [illegible] yard line swarmed through, blocking the ball, which bounded back over the goal line, and Captain Withington fell on it for the last touchdown. He kicked all of the three goals.

Harvard missed one fairly easy chance to score near the end of the second period. The Crimson got the ball on its own [illegible] yard line, and by a series of magnificent plunges by Leslie Graustein and Morrison, the ball was worked to the Williams eight-yard line. Here, however, the defenders took a wonderful brace and in three downs the ball was advanced to the two-yard line, where Williams was [illegible]

DOVES FINISH SEASON WITH DEFEAT AND TIE

By Sid Whipple.

IF there had been two feet of snow on the South End Grounds yesterday afternoon the game would not have been any more interesting or any more enlivening [illegible] during the first contest [illegible] Doves and Phillies; lost—Phillies, 5; Doves 1. The second was 3 to 3 in seven innings.

A bitter cold wind blew out of the East and chilled the Doves to the marrow. Likewise it cooled off the fans and the [illegible] and everybody [illegible] together made one of the coldest [illegible] spells the Doves ever received.

Two games were scheduled, and every one [illegible] that there had been only one. [illegible] was literally nothing doing from [illegible] the first game started until Umpire [illegible] called time in the second. It was, however, a fitting close to the Doves [illegible] series. It was, in short, [illegible] example of what the Doves have [illegible] since their advent to the South [illegible]—the icy mitt.

They Wanted Something Warm.

If [illegible] kind soul had served not tea [illegible], as they say in these English [illegible] during the seventh inning of the [illegible], he or she would have done a [illegible] business. Everybody had that [illegible], and wanted something warm. [illegible] weren't enough hip pockets on the [illegible] bleachers to go around.

[illegible] the press stand the gentlemen [illegible] whose duty it is to report the [illegible] the base ball players every day [illegible] and [illegible] warm, and then didn't half succeed [illegible] the icicles off their chins.

[illegible] was little doing to take away [illegible] cold feeling. Ever and anon some [illegible] would get a single, but aside from [illegible] contest was about as exciting as a [illegible] match between two Coos county farmers.

Nearly three fans were present when the two teams went on the field. Another one came a little later and that made four. Several belated travelers arrived during the second game, and by the time the umpire called the game off, there was quite a respectable gathering [illegible] about the various points of vantage.

The only cheers that arose came from the press stand, where the inmates had to do something to keep warm. Up the [illegible] on the roof they cheered when anybody was out, because that made the game so many minutes shorter. The janitor had a day off, and forgot to leave the steam on. There wasn't even an oil stove in sight.

The reason the Doves lost that first game was because they waited to make it an even hundred. That's what they have

SCORES TOUCHDOWN ON 100-YARD RUN

NEWBURYPORT, Oct. 8.—Boston Latin was a stonewall against the Newburyport High in the game this afternoon, on the Fair Grounds, winning 10 to 0. While Newburyport met defeat, it was thought the score would be larger.

The prettiest feature of the contest was the touchdown by Murray of the Latins, who made the run from the 20-yard line in the second period and eluded all pursuers. Newburyport at one time in the game worked the ball down to the 5-yard line, but their opponents held them while they lost the ball on downs.

The visitors were continually penalized for rough playing and hurdling. Newburyport's best work was done by Worcester, Kenney, Hery Little and St Little in the latter part of the game. M[illegible] were the stars of the Boston [illegible].

Harvard Team Threatens to Crush Yale

Fast Youngsters May Replace Veterans

The Crimson has the most formidable team in years. For nearly every place the "subs" are as good but they effectually replace the veterans. One of the mid-afternoon suite of the early games is the development of youngsters. One of them, Potter, is playing a high-grade game of [illegible] another Felton, looks like he will be a regular tackle or end, while Lewis, a freshman last year, is almost certain to play in [illegible] and in most of the games.

Formidable Battery of Stars for Most of the Places on the Crimson—Youngsters Play Dashing Football, and Are Likely to Replace Some of the Veterans in the Big Gridiron Games.

By E. V. B. Parke.

With the Harvard football eleven beginning its fourth week of training for the supreme struggle with Yale—the third week of November in New Haven—the big Crimson team is giving every day more hints of a championship aggregation at Cambridge this Fall. On the other hand, the Yale team is not coming along with more than an average amount of success.

In all of the years the Crimson eleven has played consistent ball, and in this line, to say nothing of the backfield, is one of the best in the history of the university. Yale has to choose an almost entirely new line, as all of the first string men for such positions graduated last June, and the line is finding the road to victory rough going.

Yale Has Some Tough Going.

[illegible] of the games thus far played Yale has had fairly easy opponents but has not shown up as well as the Crimson, the work of the former team being spasmodic and giving evidence of latent weakness which have not cropped out in the Harvard team. The only game in which Yale has run up against a really good eleven was in the Syracuse contest, and then Yale was scored on for the 1st time in two years, to say nothing of having experienced several bad scares.

On the other hand, the Harvard goal line has not yet been threatened, and with a long list of substitutes in each game, the Crimson had no trouble in piling up record point scores.

During the week two most promising candidates have been added to the Harvard squad, in the persons of Keays and Wendell, both members of the freshman team last Fall. The former plays a guard and the latter a half back, and one of the best of last year's freshman eleven has had no small time at Cambridge.

While the first string of linemen are all stars in their individual positions, and are ably backed by good substitutes, there seems to be a big hole at one of the guards in case a good man should be needed to fill the place of either Minot or Fisher.

Haggerty is an able substitute for either of the [illegible] not for both of course. The only other man who could be called upon is Stowe, who is really too green to be depended upon.

Parmenter, a guard on the freshmen team last year, has been out for the position on the varsity, but his lack of weight is a drawback, and he has been shifted to a tackle position, which he should fill admirably and also swell the list of substitutes for tackles.

The general feeling, however, seems to be that Minot is too valuable in the line this year, and that he will be of more use there, now that the pulling and hauling [illegible]

SOMERVILLE H. WINS FROM MEDFORD BY A LARGE SCORE

Victors Had Much the Heavier Team and Made Frequent Gains.

MEDFORD IS OUTCLASSED

At No Time Capable of Getting the Ball Nearer Than the 15-Yard Line.

MEDFORD, Oct. 8. Somerville High defeated Medford High in the opening game of the Suburban league, by a score of 35 to 0, on the Fulton street grounds this afternoon.

Somerville was much heavier than Medford, and the latter were unable to get the ball any nearer than the visitor's fifteen yard line at any time during the game. Somerville scored three touchdowns in the first two periods and three in the last two, owing for the most part to straight football. Garland and Durdis ripped Medford's line time and again for twenty and thirty yards.

When Medford tried the forward pass they seemed to bewilder their opponents, and gained the most of their ground through it, only to lose the ball by having one intercepted.

The features were the playing of the visitor's backfield and Kolesch's kicking of goals, and the playing of Lawless, Brawley and Dinsmore of Medford.

Smith won the game for Leominster in the last period of the first half with a [illegible] touchdown. The goal was on Fitchburg's 25-yard line when Fitchburg tried to punt, but Smith of Leominster blocked the kick and the ball came into the air ahead and rolled toward Fitchburg's goal line. Arlington High played fast football against Wellesley High on the Arlington Playground to-day, and won 18 to 0. Dedrickson collided with a member of his own team and was carried off the field unconscious. The line-up:

Hudson, 12; Worcester, 0.

HUDSON, Oct. 8.—Hudson High defeated Worcester scholastics, 12-0, on the Central street grounds here to-day. Worcester outweighed the locals, but the Hudsons had the speed to win.

St. Morgan's run of forty-five yards around left end and a forward pass executed by Captain Lapointe and Carney featured.

Moloff at center played a star defensive game. Coach Larry Duffy's boys have not yet been scored on.

WALTHAM HIGH HITS PACE; OVERWHELMS MECHANIC ARTS

Watch City Eleven Crushes Boston Football Team in 23 to 0 Game.

GRANT TACKLE THE STAR

Visitors Lose Chance to Score by Missing Kick From the 20-Yard Line.

Waltham High hit the football pace up again yesterday afternoon and out-distanced the powerful eleven of Mechanic Arts at Waltham, 23 to 0, in a contest of speed and endurance against beef and old-time football.

The onslaught of the Waltham backfield in the first half was so fast that the brawny linesmen of the Boston school were left bewildered and before the period ended the Watch City eleven had gone across for three tallies.

In the second period Mechanic Arts got going and all through the period it was take and give. Waltham managed to work her forward pass stunt and get the ball over on a line play. Mechanic Arts got a long touchdown when she got the ball to Waltham's 5-yard line after a fumble. Waltham held and recovered the ball on downs.

Cole, Waltham's big and speedy tackle, swept all before him every time he was handed the ball. He was called on several times to provide forward passes, and made possible two of Waltham's touchdowns. Barry, Stankard and Smith were fast on their feet and got into the game well.

Mooney Speedy Back.

The speedy Mooney, Mechanic Arts' quarterback, gave the Waltham tackle grave concern once or twice when he was started on quarterback run, although he was stopped before he could do any damage. Coach R. Cochrane and McLeod were Mechanic Arts other stars.

Filson, by failing to make a difficult goal after the last touchdown of the first period, missed sending the ball between the posts, after making twenty three consecutive goal kicks this season.

Waltham kicked off, and after three line plays Mechanic Arts had to punt. Stankard was given the ball and made twenty yards on an end play. Barry went right for thirty on a fake kick formation. Two more line plays and Cole ploughed across from the one yard line. Filson kicked the goal. Score, Waltham 6, Mechanic Arts 0.

Waltham made her second touchdown after the ball had been lost to Mechanic Arts on her five-yard line. The Boston team attempted to punt out from behind its own goal line, and Smith blocked the punt squarely. In the scramble Barber dropped on it for a touchdown. Filson's [illegible] goal over. Score, Waltham High 12, Mechanic Arts 0.

Lose Chance to Score.

Barry missed a forward pass, and Cochran tucked the ball under his arm and started along for a touchdown. Bowler was heard at his heels and brought him down on Waltham's five-yard line. Mechanic Arts was penalized fifteen yards for holding and tried a drop kick from the twenty-yard line. The attempt failed and the ball went to Waltham.

End runs by Stankard and fake formation plays kept the ball going up the field, until Barry went across for a fall. Filson failed to make the goal. Score, Waltham High 17, Mechanic Arts 0.

The second period opened with Mechanic Arts kicking off 25 yards. The rest between the periods like all the others took back seats and the same fast playing through the period. Waltham made her last touchdown on a fine forward pass, following the run of the game. Score, Waltham 23, Mechanic Arts 0.

Score—Waltham High 23, Mechanic Arts 0. Touchdowns—Cole 2, Barber. Goals from touchdowns—Filson 3. Referee—Mansfield. Umpire—Lane. Head linesman—Perry. Field judge—Cochrane. Time—Four ten-minute periods. Attendance—2,000.

Haverhill Gets First Victory From Salem in Ten Years.

HAVERHILL, Oct. 8.—Meeting in this city for the first time in ten years, Haverhill High won from Salem High this afternoon by 5 to 0, in a game replete with [illegible]. Baker worked the forward pass successfully three times and showed good development in the new game. Haverhill got away with the forward pass.

Captain Malcolm of the local team scored the touchdown after running from the 35-yard line through side tackle. In the second period Salem punted. West ran it back twenty-five yards, only to have the team lose the ball on an attempted forward pass. In the last few minutes of play Green cut loose for a thirty-yard run and the same ended with the ball in Salem's possession on Haverhill's ten-yard line.

The Line-up.

Malden High had no difficulty in defeating its old rivals, Worcester High, on the Malden athletic field yesterday afternoon 17 to 0. By means of the forward pass and fast team work, Malden easily outplayed the visitors, although the score only once was the Malden goal line in danger.

Miner played a star game for Malden, while Captain Worcester's defense for good gains. Worcester's backfield was fast [illegible] Malden's line was Captain's defense, while Worcester's line failed to withstand the [illegible] pushing of the Malden team. The line-up.

Dartmouth Is Victor Over Colby by 18 to 0 Score in Hard Battle

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 8.—In the cleanest and most satisfactory game that has yet been played at Hanover under the new rules, Dartmouth defeated Colby by a score of 18 to 0.

Dartmouth at the start discovered that Ingersoll's kicks were far superior to those of Welch, the Colby punter, and from then on it was a kicking game varied only by forward passes and spectacular rushes by Ingersoll, Hoban and Morey.

Colby foozled the kickoff and recovered the ball taking it to Dartmouth's fifteen-yard line. In the next play Colby was penalized for off side play and Welch failed at a drop kick from the twenty-five-yard line.

Dartmouth kicked out and Colby fumbled on the Green's fifty yard line. Hoban recovered, Morey made five yards and an exchange of punts followed netting the Green twenty yards advantage. Barenis barely missed a place kick from the forty-five-yard line. Colby punted out to Dartmouth's forty-yard line and with an onside kick and two rushes Ingersoll flashed around left end for a touchdown. Sherwin kicked the goal from the thirty-five-yard line.

In the third quarter the "Big Green team" demonstrated the [illegible] the "new football" and with a [illegible] kick, two forward passes, and [illegible] end run by Ingersoll they took the [illegible] to Colby's two-yard line and Morey [illegible] ban ploughed through for a touchdown. Army Men Pile Up Big Score on Tufts Medford Squad Unable to Hold the Speedy Cadets Eleven.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 8.—The cadets defeated Tufts here to-day by a score of 21 to 0.

The visitors were unable to do anything with the strong Army line, and relied entirely on end runs from a wing shift formation, but the Army forwards broke through the interference and throughout the game the visitors only made two first downs.

The cadets took the wind out of the visitors' sails by getting the ball on Tufts' thirty yard line almost before the whistle had ceased.

A pretty forward pass from Surles to Dean scored the first touchdown three minutes after time was called. The cadets added two more before the half ended.

Near the end of the first half, Tufts had a chance to score when Ireland broke through and had a clear field, but Dean overtook him and the visitors never again were dangerous.

Cornell Unable to Score on Oberlin

Minor College Succeeds in Holding Opponents to a 0 to 0 Game.

ITHACA, Oct. 8.—Oberlin showed up the Cornell team in a stubborn game this afternoon, neither side scoring. The visitors had the fastest and biggest minor college team seen here [illegible] and while Cornell had them on the defensive most of the time, they blocked all attempts at scoring. In the last period the desperate Ithaca back field rushed the oval to the three yard line, but here Oberlin piled Cornell up in a heap and gained the ball.

In the first period Martin wormed through centre for two [illegible] gains, putting the ball on Cornell's fifteen yard line. Here Seagrave, the power [illegible] little centre of last year's eleven who had not played before this year, was carried out to [illegible] the advance. By his gigantic effort the Oberlin backs [illegible] hurled back three times and Cornell's goal line was saved from what appeared to be a sure touchdown.

Kerr, Gray and Pyle, the Oberlin ends, had it on the Cornell men and the end and white end rushes were [illegible] smashed. Line plunging was also fruitless, and finally Cornell used Butler's strong right leg to keep off the attack. Butler outpunted Martin right along, keeping the ball in Oberlin's territory.

West Virginia Easy for Pennsy, 38 to 0

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—In a whirlwind football game the University of Pennsylvania defeated West Virginia to-day by the score of 38 to 0. The visitors could do nothing with the fast play of Pennsylvania's backs, who were equally successful going through the line and around the ends.

Towards the close of the contest the Southerners became worn out, and the Red and Blue gained as it pleased.

The game abounded in long runs, and forward passes. Mercer and Scott were very effective in the running game and each scored touchdowns after long runs. The game was remarkable in that only two penalties were given during the entire contest. Both were against Pennsylvania, one being for off side play and the other for giving assistance to the runner. Thayer scored one field goal at a difficult angle, but he missed two easy chances.

Tiger Eleven Wins Hard Fought Game

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 8.—Princeton defeated New York University to-day in a hard fought struggle by the score of 12 to 0. A long end run by Ballou and a fine forward pass from Pendleton to Dunlap were responsible for the Tigers' points.

The New Yorkers sprang a variety of clever plays that had the Tiger crew guessing, and by a varied attack of brilliant forward passes, offside kicks and some clever formations seen here for the first time brought the ball close to Princeton's goal. Here the jungle team took a great brace and held for downs.

Only superb defensive work kept the visitors from becoming dangerous a number of times. All the scoring was done in the first half. In the latter part of the game the Tigers were on the offensive, but the visitors managed to stave off the attack when it became most dangerous.

Within a minute after the game started he scored the first touchdown. In the last quarter he booted the leather from the 45-yard line for a field goal that was as true as an arrow.

Harvard Gains at [illegible] Until Last Period, [illegible] Williams Holds Crimson

Both of the former two [illegible] yards [illegible] and made some [illegible] gains on a quarter-back run, executed on a fake [illegible] formation.

Harvard on the other hand succeeded [illegible] almost doubled the distance made by Williams.

The passes were, for the most part, accurate and delivered sharply [illegible] Harvard tried two and Williams one on-side kick, none of which were successful, both teams following the ball too [illegible] to permit success in recovering the ball on those plays.

The play which gained the most ground for Harvard seemed to be the direct pass to one of the backs who stood close to the line [illegible] and also on the [illegible] Harvard [illegible] through the [illegible] Williams line for gains of 10 and 12 yards.

The majority of these plays were executed on the fake kick formation, and completely tricked the Williams' defense.

Remarkable Harvard Interference

The interference given the Harvard runners was the best seen in the Stadium in years, the Crimson players picking off one Williams man after another, every Harvard player apparently knowing just [illegible] work was cut out for him and how to do it.

Defense Was Perfect

HARVARD CRUSHES WILLIAMS' ELEVEN

Captain [illegible] son won the toss for Williams and [illegible] to defend the [illegible] Harvard received the kick-off, which Proud caught on his ten yard line, and after much [illegible] recovered it, but not until he lost two yards. After an exchange of punts Harvard got the ball in midfield [illegible] on a fake kick [illegible] for a nine yard gain. It [illegible] as though Harvard were [illegible] to score [illegible] an [illegible] fumble on the next [illegible] recovered the [illegible] on her 45 yard line. Line plunges availed nothing [illegible] Harvard line was holding like a [illegible] and Stevens punted to Wigglesworth [illegible] a fair catch on his twenty three yard line.

[illegible] yard run around the right end aided by beautiful interference, and Morrison followed it up with two plunges through the line, netting eleven yards and first down on Williams's forty two yard line. On a fake kick Wigglesworth, much to the surprise of the Williams players dashed through [illegible] for a fourteen yard gain. [illegible] five yards [illegible] and a penalty of five yards against Williams for off side play put the ball on the [illegible] line, and Wigglesworth repeated his [illegible] through the center of the line for eleven yards more. Morrison went through left tackle for the remaining distance and a score.

After an exchange of punts following the kick-off Williams was driven back to [illegible] line, the crowd yelling at the top of their lungs thinking a safety [illegible] The best Stevens could do was a punt to his 38 yard line, and [illegible] Harvard put the ball on the [illegible] Wilmington dropped back for an attempt at a goal from a drop kick [illegible] was blocked only to have the Crimson recover it on the 33 yard line, when [illegible] period ended.

The next play in the second period which opened with the ball in Harvard's possession on Williams' 33 yard line, was [illegible] executed forward pass from Wigglesworth to Smith for a 7 yard gain. Three line plunges left five yards to be gained on third down, and Lewis replaced Smith at the end of the line, and scored a well directed goal on a drop kick, showing excellent generalship from the side lines.

Neat Forward Pass

After the kick-off, Stevens punted to Wigglesworth, resulted in the latter running [illegible] thirty-five yards to Williams' forty yard line and one the next play, after Potter had replaced Wigglesworth at quarter, the signal was given for an end run, and Graustein in a brilliant dash circled the Purple [illegible] for a touchdown.

When the ball had [illegible] several times, and Harvard [illegible] her own forty three [illegible] where Stevens had punted [illegible] Crimson [illegible] to the Purple [illegible] out of a [illegible]

[illegible] forward pass from [illegible] gone through the centre, [illegible] yards, the pass going directly over [illegible] the ball was on Williams eight yard line. Here however the Purple line tightened up like a [illegible] and try as Harvard would, the best she could do [illegible] downs was to advance the ball [illegible] two yard line, where she was about to put it in play when the period ended.

Made Quick Score.

The next period began with [illegible] effective attempts to gain through the [illegible] blocking of Stevens' punt [illegible] Withington recovered over the line for a [illegible] two minutes after the start of play.

For the next few minutes the contest developed into a punting duel, and several good plunges by Graustein, who, by the way, showed up excellently in the game. Finally, Harvard got the ball on the Williams twenty yard line for first down, and [illegible] was put in to try a drop kick from the [illegible] yard line [illegible] the ball going [illegible] to the left of the posts. When in the fourth period the ball had been advanced to the [illegible] Lewis attempted to duplicate his [illegible] drop kick goal [illegible] and [illegible] kick low and Williams got the ball [illegible]

Tore Harvard Line

About this time the Williams team seemed to gather strength with a rush and began to tear the Harvard line [illegible] great shape going through them and [illegible] [illegible] the secondary defense proved its value and allowed but small gains.

The best play in the period was a good forward pass from Stevens to Rogers, [illegible] ing 15 yards. For the remainder of the game the play was mostly in Harvard territory, but although Williams was outplaying Harvard the latter seemed to keep the former from putting the Crimson goal in danger, and the game finally ended with the ball in Williams possession on the Harvard 40-yard line.

ONE OF THE MOST SUCCESSFUL SEASONS, SAYS AMERICAN LEAGUE PRESIDENT

By Byron B. Johnson.

Telegraphed specially to the Boston Sunday American by the President of the American League at the close of the league season last night.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 8.—The season of 1910 will go down in baseball history as one of the most successful in the life of the American League. Although we did not have a race as close as it usually is, yet the interest was great throughout the country and baseball made rapid strides.

The attendance in all of the cities composing the circuit was good. The class of baseball played by the various teams composing the league was high. Baseball, it seems to me, is becoming greater and greater every year. The game is constantly securing new recruits.

The 1910 season was notable for the many new men that came into the league. Much new blood was infused, and I think this makes the outlook exceedingly bright, for it will mean a higher class of ball in 1911 than it did in 1910.

Connie Mack, who piloted the winners of the race, has gathered a fast lot of ball players about him. His pitchers are in excellent condition.

The fact that the Athletics won the pennant so early proves their class, for they were compelled to battle against stronger teams than ever before. That convinces me that the Athletics have a fine chance of winning the World's Championship.

That they will uphold the honor of the American League in a manner to win commendation from every one connected with the league is my firm belief.

LOOKS LIKES TY COBB WINS THE $5,000 CAR

TY COBB, the heavy hitting center fielder of the Detroit team, appears, according to revised figures, to have won the $5,000 automobile offered by a Detroit firm.

No newspaper in the country will be able to give correct averages until they are announced by Secretary McRoy of the American League and Secretary Heydler of the National League.

In yesterday's games, Cobb rested up with his average of .384 standing, while Lajoie was able to get but one hit out of four trips to the bat. Larry plays in in his last game of the American League to-day in St. Louis, but will apparently be unable to overtake the eight-point lead held by Cobb. Their averages including yesterday's game:

Cobb	140	505	106	194	.384
Lajoie	151	583	93	219	.376

Doves Wind Up Baseball Year of 1910 In Boston

last in even century, and they have won fifty-one games. Which is a pretty good record for a cellar team.

Finished the Season.

These games practically finished the season as far as the Doves are concerned. Everybody is going home. That is, everybody of importance. And no wonder [illegible] want to reach their native heartlands. Sweeney packed his carpet bag and beat it for Newport. Not Newport, R. I., but Newport, Ky. The season is late for [illegible] own Newport and Sweeney's [illegible] home is in the Kentucky region where the grass and moonshine abound.

Bill was mighty happy when the game was over and the old visions of the Kentucky prairies (if there are any in Kent ky) were uppermost in his mind when he took his last shower bath in the club house at 5 o'clock.

[illegible] end of the season [illegible] Herzog went [illegible] Buster Brown has gone to [illegible] wherever that is. Mattern beat it for West Rush, N. Y. (Who ever heard of West Rush before?) Sharpe is already telling stories in the county store at Haddock, Georgia, and Evans is telling the dames around Glens Falls, N. Y., how he made the Doves a success this year.

Well, Here Are the Games.

To return to the games. The Phillies won the first game in the fifth inning, when Ferguson was too free with his presents and gave two bases on balls. A passed ball and a wild pitch, together with a single, scored Bransfield and Titus. Magee's home run over left field fence gave the Quakers another run; three bases on balls and a fielder's choice netted them one more and two hits and an error gave them the fifth.

The second game was [illegible] There was nothing doing from beginning to end. Boston scored in the first inning on [illegible] They scored again in the third inning and once in the fourth.

The Phillies scored twice in the second inning on Bransfield's home run, which scored Grant ahead of him, and once in the sixth on Magee and Doolan's hits.

But there is no more baseball for Boston this year, and all we have to worry about now is what the teams are going to do next year.

CUBS AND ATHLETICS READY FOR GREAT WORLD SERIES BATTLES

Baseball Experts Predict They Will Fight the Closest and Most Exciting Combats in Recent Years

COLLYER SAYS CUBS ARE 4 TO 5 CHOICE IN WORLD'S SERIES

Expert "Tipster" Picks Them as Favorites, but Says a Bunch of "Wise" Money Is Going Down on the Athletics—Figures Mack's Pitchers Will Make Chance's Men Tremble—Offers 4 to 5 on Cubs.

Thousands of Answers in Big World's Series Contests

THOUSANDS of fans are pouring in answers in the Boston American World's Series Baseball Contest

The great series between the Chicago Cubs and the Philadelphia Athletics will begin Monday, October 17—a week from to-morrow.

Only one week remains, so if you have not sent your estimate to the World Series Editor, Boston American, P. O. Box 270, Boston, do so at once.

The first two games will be played at Philadelphia, the next two at Chicago. The team winning four games takes the series. After one team has won four games the series ends.

By Bert E. Collyer.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Chicago, which in the past has been the great clearing house for the proverbial tons of money wagered annually on the baseball championship series, bids fair to be again pertinently prominent on the speculative map. In a word, it is my prediction, a liberty I take [illegible] having "made" the official prices on each world's series—those that have been accepted on the bourse during the past four years—that [illegible] records will go by the boards and a new mark set that, to use the vernacular, will make even the hardened regulars sit up and take noti[ce].

My opening quotation, which was issued to-day, justified the above prediction in that the play recorded was almost double that of any previous year. These were 7 to 5 that the Cubs take the opening game with the same team a 4 to 5 favorite on the series.

Reasons for the 4 to 5 Price.

At the first sign of prices a concerted play was made on the Cubs to win the series, many arguing that they fully expected a much shorter price, in fact one really smart bookmaker, who has accepted my prices for years, stated that he had not expected to post better than 1 to 2 on the series.

On the other hand there was some grumbling heard to the effect that the price was a trade short on the opening game. However, it is [illegible] to attempt to please. I merely make quotations from cold deduction, though I have no hesitancy [illegible] a few [illegible] sons.

In the first place the opening game of the world's series will be played in Philadelphia. This was reached through the [illegible] St. Louis is booked to play in Chicago October 17. True, considerable pressure was brought to bear to have them cancel this date, but to no purpose. Br'er Robison and his Cardinals experienced a [illegible] indifferent season and a big Saturday crowd, which the Cubs are sure to draw, were they even to play a semi-[illegible] good to [illegible].

[illegible] the 16th of [illegible] 17th.

Overall and Coombs to Open.

The batteries for the opening game of [illegible] Overall and Kling for the Cubs and Coombs and Livingston for the Athletics. Coombs recently set up a record of 53 innings without a run when the White Sox [illegible]. He's good. [illegible] very doubtful [illegible] fettle, will be a strong factor in fact were it assured that he was to pitch the opening game the odds would tighten up at least one point.

Overall, after a long lapse, is ready for the fray. That he will be on the mound for the Cubs seems an assured fact. Chance, who is probably the most superstitious ball player in the business, has used Orvie to open the series on every previous occasion, and I have his word that unless the big fellow goes sadly amiss he will face the Athletics in the initial battle.

[illegible] the recent White Sox-Athletics series in which the Sox won three out of four games [illegible] responsible for a considerable amount of this early play. The Cubs fans, who flocked to the South Side Park, were of [illegible] work of Mack's men. On the other hand the Southsiders, who are nothing if not loyal to the American League, were equally positive that Chance's aggregation has retrograded.

They also advance the argument that the law of tradition, as well as chance, must be overcome. Many, of course, will argue that tradition has nothing to do with it, but the smarter set—those who make a living by consistently putting two and two together—serve up a startlingly good argument to show why the Cubs, [illegible] felt the sting of defeat in a series since 1906, are in for a severe lacing.

Why They Support Athletics.

To this condition of expert opinion I attribute the plenitude of Athletic money. Everywhere one goes, where wagers are [illegible] abundance of [illegible] the Tigers one [illegible] support for the Jennings crew was almost two to one until the Tigers went East. This is better understood, too, when it is taken into consideration that Detroit is not a good loser [illegible] the sports of the City of Straits had in mind the trouncing of the previous year every time they wagered a dollar on the Tigers to trim the Pirates.

In a word it is not the bets of the piker—the rank and file—that causes the fluctuation in [illegible] but the [illegible] or [illegible] of "WISE" [illegible] all this play at present on the Athletics, other than "WISE" money.

WORLD SERIES WARM STUFF, SAYS DRYDEN

By Charles Dryden.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Is the world's series warm stuff? It is. The plain announcement of the dates by the National Commission has set the bugs fermenting in large masses. As yet no one knows what system of tickets will be used, but that does not stop the said bugs from clamoring for pasteboards.

All day to-day the phone in the Cub office buzzed with the requests for reservations, and [illegible] floated in bearing certified checks in their mitts. The first combat of the set is more than a week away and Al Campion, the urbane and gentlemanly office attendant, wished it was in Alaska, so far as his personal comfort was concerned.

At noon a chance caller sat at the phone while the over-wrought Mr. Campion went forth to inhale a bowl of soup. He then returned and continued in his best vein to inform anxious, not to say frenzied, bugs that he had no tickets to sell. That matter rested entirely in the hands of the National Commish, Mr. Campion said.

About two bells in the afternoon Mr. R. Cook [illegible] Doc) poked his map into the office. On learning of the large deal in tickets Mr. Cook beat it back to his cigar garage. We don't blame him. In addition to refusing money, Mr. Campion had to dig up refreshing news items for the evening papers. Mr. [illegible] C. Williams being absent at [illegible].

To one reporter the office attendant said Mr. Evers had applied to the Commish for permission to coach the Cubs in the series from a wheel chair back of third. [illegible] Tom Needham was to push the chair on account of the excellent [illegible] get in the soil.

Up to the hour of going to press we had seen no mention of the wheel chair item, so we take the liberty of printing it in this issue. That would be some novelty, believe us. Mr. Evers coaching in a combination wheel chair and plaster cast. The only question is, would the august Commish stand for it?

1911 SEASON TO END OCT. 1, SAYS JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—"I am only sorry that we have to wait so long for the opening struggle, and when the schedules for 1911 are drawn up I am going to insist on the season closing about October 1, and have the world's series to start by October 5 at the very latest," said President Byron B. Johnson of the American League to-day.

"The start this year will be the latest since the world's series games have been played." Then Mr. Johnson was shown the dope book by Assistant Joe Flanner, which showed that the first game last year was played on October 8 in Pittsburg, October 10 in 1907 on October 8; in 1906 on October 9, and in 1905 on October [illegible] [illegible] responded Mr. Johnson, "but here we have to wait until October 17.

"I am sorry that President Murphy and Mr. Robison of the Cardinals were not [illegible] to agree to move up their closing games. I was told that Mr. Robison asked for $5,000 for his end of the series. Certainly this looks reasonable to me and I can't understand why Mr. Murphy did not consent. But it is too late now and the teams will play until one wins four even if the clash until snow comes.

"The train service between the two cities will be excellent and I [illegible] saw that everything was completed with the railroad people. All the games will be started at 2 o'clock and the [illegible] train will leave at 6 o'clock, which will arrive in the next city at 10 o'clock [illegible] give the players ample time to rest [illegible] dine.

"I [illegible] special for the newspaper men and the leftovers, which will leave possibly three hours later. The baseball writers have complained that they will not have enough time to write their accounts and this train will be for their benefit so I hope all that worry will be [illegible]."

RIVAL GENERALS IN BIG DIAMOND STRUGGLE

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, is one of the most astute men in baseball. He is a bench manager and does not appear on the diamond. He is pictured, of course, without uniform. Frank Chance, head of the Cubs, is equally brainy. He runs his team from the field and is one of the best first basemen in the big leagues.

Brown and Bender Expect to Pitch The First Game

MORDECAI BROWN of the Cubs and "Chief" Bender of the Athletics are the pitchers being picked to open the world's series at Philadelphia a week from to-morrow. The two great twirlers are the veteran right-handers of the two teams. Brown is at his best in the tightest holes, while Bender won the only game the Athletics took from the Giants in the 1905 world series. The pitchers here tell of the deliveries on which they depend to win.

Brown Says "Hook" Is His Best Curve.

By Mordecai Brown.

I BECAME a pitcher because I decided that it was the best paying position and the first real game I ever pitched in [illegible] was after I had signed with [illegible] I guess I started in [illegible] and that has [illegible].

I was born in a little mining [illegible] and I [illegible] represented the Miners [illegible] seemed to like me and when [illegible] playing ball I was their favorite [illegible] would hire another man to weigh [illegible] to let me play ball with [illegible].

I was just a kid then and they had so much faith in me that I got to thinking I [was] about as good a ball player as there [was]. It was the confidence of a kid. They [urged] me so hard that Terre Haute offered me a chance. I never had pitched [illegible] at all except when our pitcher was [knock]ed out. I could throw a [illegible], had speed and I thought that was [illegible]. As a matter of fact I was perfectly certain that I could play any position.

Trains All Winter For First Job.

Some one told me pitchers were better paid than other players, so I decided to be a pitcher and signed with Terre Haute as pitcher. Having said I was a pitcher I wanted to make good, and not only for myself, but for the nine fellows, who believed I was the best in the world. I started training that winter, about Christmas, practising pitching curves. It hurts my arm to think of it now. By the time I had to report to Terre Haute I was in great shape, much better than the experienced pitchers and I guess that held my job for me.

They were going to let me go when the people got up a petition and threatened to boycott the club if I was released so they kept me. I worked hard and watched the other pitchers, studying their [illegible] and trying to learn to pitch. You know my hand is crippled and I found that by twisting it a little I could make the ball curve more sharply than most of them.

When I went to the St. Louis Nationals I was full of ambition.

I worked hard to learn to pitch and nearly ruined my arm by overworking it. St. Louis couldn't see me, but that club saved me, as it gave me plenty of rest and when I got to Chicago I was back in form.

An Overhand Ball.

I think my best ball is the curve the fellows call the "hook." I pitch it overhanded with a half-round arm motion, starting slowly and finishing with a fast snap with the hand and wrist bent. My next best ball is a speedy one. I always make the ball twist, no matter what I pitch. My first ball I let off the third finger on the side, but near the tip with the stub of the little finger pressed hard under the ball. I have a twisting slow ball, and a side-arm curve, also a fast overhand ball.

I think that the reason I have been so lucky is that I keep mixing them up and springing surprises on the batters. I seldom pitch to a batter's weakness. I want to know what his weakness is or his strong point, but very frequently I have the best success in pitching to the batter's strong point when he figures I won't dare do it. It is a guessing match most of the time, and I think I can guess fairly well by this time.

Bender Describes His Best Curves

By Charles Albert Bender.

ABOUT all the pitching I ever done before I went to Carlisle was throwing stones at squirrels and partridges. I had [illegible] lacrosse a[nd] [illegible] Carlisle I be[gan] [illegible] we had a lot of loyalty to the team and I wanted to pay for the school. I began to pitch, and the more I [illegible] against college teams the more I thought about what was possible to be done with a baseball. I left Carlisle and played with another college and began to see more and more in the game.

Before I had completed my college course the Athletics wanted me and I was just as anxious to pitch for them as they were to get me. I studied the [illegible] and watched them work and managed to stick to the job.

Best Ball Fast Overhand Curve.

I think my best ball is my fast overhand curve when [illegible] though I have had great success with a fast sidearm curve ball. When I have my right speed and the arm is feeling strong I prefer my fast ball pitched high and on the inside corner of the plate. I think that the curve ball, if it breaks sharply, is the most effective ball pitched and I never yet have seen a batter who could hit that kind of pitching all the time. Of course, they would hit anything a fellow pitches sometimes, but fast high pitching across a man's shoulders and a fast breaking curve ball will trouble any batter, no matter [illegible].

Mixed-up Pitching Counts.

It is mixing up the pitching, more than what the ball does in the air, that counts in winning. If a pitcher telegraphs his [illegible] the batter knows what to expect, then it does not make much difference what is pitched, as they will hit it. Let a batter get set and let him know a curve is coming, or a fast ball, and he will hit. A pitcher is forced to keep thinking what the other fellow is thinking and must keep trying to cross him.

I use fast curves, pitched overhand and side arm, fast balls, high and inside, and an underhand fadeaway pitched with the hand almost down to the level of the knee. These are my most successful deliveries, although a twisting slow one mixed up with them helps at times.

Corbett Wasn't Worried About the Ball Game

JOE CORBETT, Jim's younger brother, was the coolest ball player that ever lived.

They tell this story of ... during ... game between Baltimore and Cleveland in the Temple Cup series some years ago.

Corbett was ... for Baltimore and in the eighth inning the score was 3 to 2 in Baltimore's favor. Cleveland had only one man out, and, with two men on bases, Jesse Burkett, who was then the National League champion hitter, came to bat.

It was a scene of the wildest excitement—every one was insane except Corbett. He went on chewing gum as nonchalantly as ever.

Burkett hit the first ball that came along for a slow little bunt along the first base line.

Corbett picked up the ball, and as he was turning to walk back to the box the catcher took him by the arm and began to talk to him in a reassuring manner.

"It's all right, Joe. You've got 'em all going. Those men on the bags are afraid to move, and that big stiff at bat couldn't hit you in a month. Now, keep cool. Don't get nervous and we've got the game."

"I'm not nervous," said Joe, as he started away. "The only thing that's worrying me is whether I ought to wear a blue tie or a brown one with my new suit."

Now, children, answer this question: When is a Manager ... When he is not? Quite right, children. A Manager is not a Manager when he is not.

SEE the President. Is he a fat President? Yes, children, he is a fat President all the way up. What is he the President of? Is he the President of the United States? Dear me, no. He is the President of the American League. Who are all those funny little men? They are magnates, and they think they are on. Are they on? They thought they were on, children, until the President told them where to get off. The President is a great and wise President, is he not? Yes, so he is.

SEE the funny little bug. Is the bug crawling around and around on the ground? No, the bug is not a crawling bug. It is a standing bug. It is a baseball bug. It is almost human. Sporting Reminiscences—By 'Honest John' Kelly

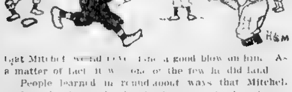
EVERYBODY knows "Honest John" Kelly. His name appears on nearly every page of the history of baseball and fighting for the past two decades, and for years he has been better known to Eastern sporting men than any other man.

Mr. Kelly was the first baseball umpire to desert the ... position behind the catcher and take his stand behind the pitcher, and his calling "all bets off" in the Corbett-Sharkey fight, which ... will never be forgotten. It was the first time that a fight referee had the courage to make such a move.

The true history of many memorable events in which Mr. Kelly has figured has never been told until now, and these personal recollections of his will therefore be read with interest by every follower of sporting topics.

THE greatest fight that ... between ... Corbett ... Mitchell. I never forget that fight for one thing. Mitchell ... up by Squire Abington, had ... that he would draw first blood from Corbett ... days that was considered a great feat, and there was more betting on that particular stunt than on the result of the contest.

It was along in the second round that he hit Jim on the nose and drew a little blood, winning the bet. It was the hardest ... at Corbett ...



... that Mitchell ... a good blow on him. As a matter of fact it was one of the few he did land.

People learned in roundabout ways that Mitchell made such a bet, and it has kept me poor buying stamps to answer letters that I have received asking me if the bet was made and who won, etc. I've received the query from all parts of the world. Why, it was only the other day that I wrote a letter deciding the matter for a party of sports in Australia.

I HAPPENED to give that "all bets off" decision in this way. Things looked a little queer in the round before I stopped the bout. I saw Connie McVey trying to climb into the ring, which would mean disqualification for Corbett. Inspector McLoughlin yanked him back. It was a plot to save Corbett at the sacrifice of thousands of good honest dollars. And sure enough in the next round in pops Mr. McVey. Under the rules there was nothing to do but declare Sharkey the winner and disqualify Corbett. I did so, and sent the men to their corners, and at the same time I yelled above the din: "All bets off!"

It caused a lot of wrangling, as a referee had never ... that before, but I had the satisfaction of knowing that I had saved bettors the country over fully a million dollars they never got no run for. That was all there was to that little affair.

THE thing about my baseball career that I am proudest of is that I was the man who really brought ... Kelly, the famous $10,000 beauty. I told ... made him purchase him for ... Mike ... and with him more baseball ... or players had ever dreamed of.

Mike was the greatest man the game ever saw, I ... He was the trickiest man I ever met on a ground. He had more of them up his sleeve than any ... men who have followed him. He was the bane of ... Not that Mike was a rowdy—say ... Mike was just a brainy, quick-witted wizard. ... was catching the great Jim McCormick in those ... Jim had a wonderful toss that they nicknamed ... "twister," and it was just as noted as Mathewson's "fade away" or Ford's "spitter." They couldn't ... that blamed ball half the time. Behind the bat where I stood, I often marvelled at the number of foul tips Jim put over on the other teams. In those days, you know, a foul tip was out, if caught.

One day the cat hopped out of the bag, and the secret of those foul tips was bared to the world. It seems that our brave Mike had been in the habit of putting bird shot in his mouth and so snapping them from between his tightly clenched teeth when a batter hit at the ball that it sounded for all the world like a foul tip.

The day of the exposure Mike had a good charge of the cuties in his mouth, and during an exciting play at the plate he let it slip down his throat. He began to choke and get black in the face. I thought it was to ..., and cracked him on the back to get it up. One of the smacks brought up the bird shot, and, incidentally, the secret of the foul tips. Mike confessed all to me right there on the home plate.

I THINK Mike was the first man to ever steal from third. It was in Philadelphia that Mike worked the trick. He deliberately romped home while the pitcher was getting the ball on the throw-back from the catcher to the wonderment of us all.

I was talking about the nerve of the fellow with Ferguson in the lobby of our hotel that night. Mike happened along just at that time, and we called him over.

"Nice trick you pulled off on that rum pitcher, Mike," said Ferguson, who by the way was one of the brainiest pitchers that ever lived. "You took advantage of a sucker twirler, Mike," went on Ferguson. "I'd have to be stone dead before you could get by me with a prank like that."

Mike smile and said: "I'll show you how I worked it, seeing as how you're to pitch against us to-morrow."

"What'll you bet that you don't get by with it?" asked Ferguson.

JOHNT T. KELLY, KNOWN TO SPORTING MEN THE WORLD OVER AS "HONEST JOHN."

"A hat," said Kelly. Then I spoke up and bet a hat that Mike couldn't pull it on Ferguson.

The next day Ferguson watched Mike like a hawk. He had to be watched, I tell you. It came to the eighth inning. The score was 1 to ... Mike by hook or crook got on third. Smiling his sweetest, Ferguson said:

"Well, my proud beauty, I suppose that this is the particular stage of the game where you are going to show me how you stole home on his nibs yesterday."

Mike didn't answer—just took another reef in his belt. The great Clements was catching. Mike took in every move the pair made. Ferguson had the ball. He smiled at Mike and then began to wind up. No sooner had he began the first move to wrap himself around the ball than our brave Mike was footing it for home like a streak of greased lightning. He was as fast as Cobb on the lines. Ferguson came out of his coil and snapped the ball to Clements. The ball landed squarely in his mitt when poor ... was ten feet from the plate. Mike, coming like an express train, suddenly stopped almost to a walk. He approached Clements in a ... trot and as he ... stuck out his chest to receive the tag of the ball that was to put him out.

"I might have known I couldn't steal ... two in success ..." he said, sadly, as he stuck out his chest even further to allow Clements to touch him.

Clements reached out lazily with the ball as Mike, ... ducked down between Clements's legs, went through ... like an eel and placed his finger tips on the home plate for a steal and a deciding run.

I never paid a hat bet with more of a grouch, and ... never forgave Clements.

KELLY was, as I've said, the trickiest man who ever played the game, and he is responsible for many of the existing ... to-day. He was always quick to take advantage of a play that would turn the game upside down ... missed such an opportunity. Cobb and Evers ... reputation of being quick thinkers ... pioneer in that department. He caused more meetings of the rules committee than any ... spikes.

One day in Boston, Mike was sitting on the bench and "Dimples" Tate was catching for him. The other side had three men on bases, two out, and it was the last half of the ninth inning. Their heaviest batter was up, and Mike's pitcher was seen to waver. It was a tense moment for everybody. The pitcher uncorked a fast one and the heavy hitter of the opposing team popped up a foul that was coming down near Mike's bench and entirely out of reach of Tate. Mike saw it coming, and like a flash, he was on his feet.

"Tate, you're out of the game," he bawled, and screening his eyes from the sun he scooped in the foul tip.

Well, the place was in an uproar. I'm bound to admit that the situation was a new one and a puzzler for us. According to the rules, Mike, as captain, had the privilege of taking out Tate or any other man just when he pleased, and he insisted that Tate had been replaced by himself. There was an awful rumpus over the play, but we had to allow it. It resulted in the rules being again changed so that Mr. Mike Kelly would be properly harnessed in the future.

I'LL never forget poor Pete Browning. He was the peer of all fielders, but he had the "Bugs" Raymond habit. But one thing in Pete's favor—he would take the pledge at times and keep it. The only thing about it was that you had to make Pete's pledge taking very impressive. He was on his bad behavior just at the time I was managing Louisville. In our desperation we resolved on this scheme.

While he was out clinking glasses we stole into his room and began to do a little private decorating. From the ceiling we hung bats, stuffed owls, Chinese dragons with green eyes, paper boa constrictors and skulls. Then we got a lot of toy animals, painted the elephants pink, the giraffes purple and the lions gas-light green, and arranged them in a wonderful parade that began at the keyhole of the door and ran along to the footboard of his bed. We got a couple of dark lanterns with green and red flashes and then we rounded up Pete and put him to bed in the dark.

We let him sleep for several hours and then the curtain was rung up. With fearful yells and the beating of gongs the boys made enough noise to awake the the dead. And Peter was one that awoke. As the lights flashed off and on he got glimpses of the improvised inferno. Pete turned a little gray in those few moments, but he likewise turned over a new leaf. If he reads this it will be the first time he ever knew what made him sign and keep the pledge for five years.

I WAS in a poker game in Louisville one night when one of the players, a friend of mine, told us that he had run across a "cheater" who had been telling him how good he was with the cards and that he could trim the smartest poker player in the world. We decided to see him work.

My friend pretended to be in league with the "sharp." They agreed that at a signal the sharp should receive a "cold" or stacked deck that would be fixed up so that the crowd would go broke on the hands dealt.

When the time came for the coup my friend slipped the cold deck under the table to the sharp and "little bright eyes" placed the deck before him and prepared to deal the hand that was to make up paupers. He placed his fingers around the stack as if to shuffle, and then came the funniest expression over his face.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I've handled many a cold deck, but never one that was frozen on me."

My friend had handed him a deck with all the cards tightly glued together.

YEARS ago umpires of ball games were selected by the team, and not by the league managers.

I seemed to be the favorite umpire with Pop Anson. He always believed in me except on the home grounds at Chicago. There, he declared, I never gave the boys a fair run.

Well, one day they had a big finishing game. A lot depended on it. Anson had a man on third and they needed that run badly. Finally the player made a dash for the plate on a short hit, and the ball was whipped to the plate to head him off. It was a pretty toss and a pretty slide. Anson's man was safe by a hair. When I called him so, in a loud voice, at a signal from Anson, the entire Chicago team flopped over on their backs on the ground, even to the bat boy. I was dumfounded, and I guess the crowd was, too. Finally Anson propped himself up on his elbows and with a smile said:

"John, old man, I often told you that if you ever gave us just one of those close decisions on the home grounds we'd all drop dead. Pipe, we're dead!"

Expert Candle Pin Men Dispute Superiority; Two More Leagues Open Play.

By Ed Cogswell.

TEN bowlers of the candlepins in Greater Boston are so closely matched in skill that it is a tossup which would win were they all to meet in a tournament for the championship.

Bill Galway, who has the best hold on the title through having beaten Paul Poehler last Spring, says this fact is true, while Poehler is credited with the same statement.

It is reasonable to expect that ere this season will have passed that even more matches between the cracks will have been decided than was the case in the previous one.

For a real live weeding out of the finest and the making of the champion of 1910-11 it is certainly up to the principal owners of alleys to arrange a tournament between these ten fastest bowlers, offering liberal cash prizes to the one winning and prizes of less value to the ones finishing second and third.

To the winner, too, should go an emblem representing the championship of Greater Boston. This trophy could be put up with the condition that the bowler first to win it three times would become its owner.

Bowling "Bugs" on Edge.

With, say $200, going to the victor of the tournament, $50 for second and $30 for third, there would be wonderful interest in the outcome. Both the bowlers and bowling bugs from every section would be right on edge from the start of the series till the end. Only bowling rooms having plenty of space could think of coming in on the plan, as at the best the spectators would be jammed into every corner.

Among the alley owners who might promote the plan and make it a success can be named the Boylston, Boston, New Boston, Adams Square, Imperial, Chelsea Square, and likely others. By having the matches after [illegible] charging the contestants an entrance fee, and making the spectators pay an admission, it seems the project is reasonable and would boom the sport.

Bill Galway has a novel plan of determining the best scientific bowler with the candlepins, which would come outside of the [illegible] tournament. [illegible] conducted over [illegible] alleys at the same time as an added attraction.

The idea is for the leading bowlers to play for single pins. Let each in turn, after one pin set on the No. 1 spot. When he gets this, then place a pin on No. 2 and so on till the bowler has knocked down a pin set on each of the spots around it, including No. 10. Of course, the bowler accomplishing the feat with the smallest number of balls used wins the prize.

Great Test of Accuracy.

"In bowling the element of luck is always with or against the player," continued Mr. Galway. "In tournaments, luck is really what makes the sport so fascinating, but my plan of single pin hitting is to find the most accurate bowler in Greater Boston, and is the only method I know to do so.

"In my tournament and match bowling I have found out it is the bowler who keeps plugging along when the pins are breaking against him or he is in hard luck, so often who generally pulls out the victor.

"I remember in one of my big matches how it seemed impossible for me to get a decent break in hitting the Nos. 1 and 3 pins, or 1 and 2 pins. The breaks were something miserable. I fell back on leading strings just on this account. In making up for a new string I told a friend that I was going to use the side break or 16 pins, for my first ball, even if I didn't get a string of more than 60.

"Do you know that right away with this break the pins began falling and spares coming, which with careful spare picking, won me the match. I [illegible] though, I only used the side break in the one string. After that I went for the head pin break, as usual, but the [illegible] gotten my ball to behaving as it should on the head pin proposition, which it had failed of before doing.

"I have been asked repeatedly why some days the ball seems to be off [illegible] just right, but there is no exception. The ball cutting right through the [illegible] with little damage, one getting [illegible] while another time balls hitting [illegible] in what looks the same place [illegible] for spare and often strikes.

"The reply to this is that [illegible] to the bowler, he is one day bowling a different ball. The time [illegible] execution he should try the side break, 3-6, for a string or so, and he is very liable to bring back the ball [illegible] the ball receives something, may be a twist, [illegible] which the ball cutting through."

Great Increase in Bowling.

It is estimated that last season there was an increase of 10 per cent in bowling, meaning that many more persons became interested in the sport. So far it looks like the same ratio of increase will again be marked this season. Not only are the old leagues coming back in full force, but new ones are springing up in every section.

To take care of this new business requires additional alleys. In the near future a big bowling palace will be under way in the business section, containing twenty or more alleys.

Many of the leagues are finding it hard in getting locations. In some instances, in order to accommodate the bowlers, one tournament starts at 6 o'clock so that another may have the alleys at 8.30 the same evening.

To-morrow night sees two more leagues get under way, the Odd Fellows and the John A. Ward. The officials of the Odd Fellows are: J. Haines Maxwell, president; William H. Brown, vice-president; George M. Power, secretary, and M. P. McPhee, [illegible] treasurer. Of the John A. Ward, Harry Chandler is president; Arthur Sufford, treasurer, and Gilbert Kelley, secretary.

TURF-FIELD-SHORE

By Dick Carpenter.

OUR big game friends who are waiting for the moose season to open before slamming down their desks, packing up and scurrying off to the woods sat back during the Summer days of the past weeks and laughed a raucous laugh at the thought of their sportsmen friends trudging through the dry and noisy Maine woods with the temperature [illegible].

Said they: "It's one thing to sit around of a cool evening and read a good hunting story, but it's another thing to forget that [illegible] some distance behind the horizon yet.

"Yes, sir, there will be plenty of deer and moose around later. These fellows who are lugging heavy guns around up in Maine these hot days are losing all the curves they put on in the last year and they'll find that when the weather gets more comfortable the deer will be right on hand just the same."

Some of which sounds like sense, too.

They're Getting Away With the Deer Now.

As a matter of fact, if the men down [illegible] big game of politics is only just now getting into its open season could know just how well some of the boys are making out, despite the heat, they might figure to start out just a little earlier than they had planned.

For instance, some of the Boston men have already nailed a half share of their deer. Up to noon yesterday the total of deer shipped into Bangor figured up around [illegible]. Some of the men who have [illegible] scored clean shots are W. J. Phelps, C. P. Hall, A. J. Blake, L. S. Blake, F. M. Greene, J. Leckton and J. T. Malley, all of Boston. W. H. Worcester of Haverhill also scored once.

10,000 Deer Will Be Shot.

But even if Summer underwear has been the vogue in the woods, our old friend Larry Smythe has not been forgetful that [illegible] few of us down here who want to know how things are looking up in the wilds. Larry has had his finger right on the trigger, and now that the season is underway has grabbed a handful of minutes and outlined the situation in about as clear a fashion as one could desire. [illegible] his own personal [illegible] and jabs, he says:

Bangor, Oct. 8.

My Dear Carpenter: I've been thinking of you this week, for now that the law is off on the red deer I knew you would be anxious to know all about it. Got the same old fever, eh? Well, don't get too excited about the vacation trip up here. The past week has been so hot that a lot of the fellows [illegible] out of the woods and been trying out on the quail and so on. But don't worry. The 15th of December is a long way off, and before that time I think some 10,000 deer will be shot.

As you know the moose season opens [illegible] next week. Many of the hunters who came up early for the bird shooting are in the northern and eastern parts of the State busy getting [illegible] their two deer. [illegible] of the visiting sportsmen [illegible] who want nothing but moose will begin to come in perhaps next week, but I don't look for any of the old crowd before the first of November.

Conditions in the woods are fair. There has been much less than the usual rainfall lately and the forests, while not dangerously dry, are yet [illegible] to be too "noisy" in many places for successful still hunting.

Supply Is Sufficient.

As for the game supply, it is said that deer have neither increased nor decreased since last year, but have about held their own, while moose [illegible] gaining somewhat, although the bulls are mostly too young to make good trophies, and the big fellows with the heavy antlers will be just as hard to find and just as expensive to get as ever.

There have been no changes whatever in the laws since you know so well two years ago. As you know it was: One bull moose over one year old, and two deer are allowed to each hunter, penalty for killing deer illegally fine of $40 each, for moose, $500 fine or three months in jail. Men who hunt moose usually have enough money to pay a fine, and there is no record of a visiting [illegible] hunter going any time in jail. Natives hunt free, while outsiders pay a license fee of $15.

[illegible] a shooter and eager [illegible] have been given [illegible] game fed [illegible] than [illegible] one thing on earth [illegible] First [illegible] of all comes the enthusiastic statistician of the [illegible] board of trade who declares that [illegible] big game hunting is worth millions every year to the State.

These [illegible] estimates range to the way from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year, and only the other day one writer [illegible] perfect [illegible] optimism, predicted that the [illegible] near when the State will realize $100,000,000 a year from her game.

[illegible] the [illegible] about $10,000,000 in value [illegible] of all descriptions [illegible] real estate [illegible] doesn't [illegible] the cheerful game [illegible] the least. They go [illegible] figuring the profits, and [illegible] present rate there will have [illegible] the money in the country in a few years.

What Becomes of the Deer.

I think you will agree with me when I say that about 10,000 deer and 300 moose are killed in Maine yearly. Of the deer, about 5,000 are transported by rail, and of those perhaps 4,000 are killed by non-residents. The [illegible] deer for consumption in the woods, or merely for the sport of it, and 8,000 would be a liberal estimate of the total killed by non-residents.

Now, it is pretty generally agreed that the cost of getting a deer is about $100 for non-residents, this including railroad fare and all other expenses. Many of the visitors spend much less than $100 for their entire trip. At the rate of $100 each for 8,000 deer, the total would be $800,000.

And now for the moose. Of the three hundred moose killed in a season, probably two hundred and fifty are killed by non-residents. The cost of getting a moose may be a little more than a deer, but it is likely to be very much more. A fair average would be $500 and at that rate two hundred and fifty moose would represent the expenditure of $125,000, making with the money spent on deer, a grand total of $725,000 for big game. Possibly the total may reach a million, but it would be hard to figure that much out of the industry.

In years past, also, the papers used to print stories telling of the "army of sportsmen" that came to Maine from other States every October to shoot deer and moose. Some estimated the army as high as twenty thousand; none less than ten thousand. Were these figures anywhere near correct, and each of the army spent a few hundreds of dollars, it would be easy to see where the millions of revenue came from.

As it happens, a few years ago the Legislature passed a law providing that all non-residents should pay a license fee of $15 for the privilege of shooting big game in the State, and then came the show-down.

In the first year of the license law just 1,763 persons paid the fee, and as the penalties for evasion are very severe, and the advantages of the license very great, it is safe to say that few or none of the visitors failed to comply with the law. So, [illegible] instead of an army of ten thousand to twenty thousand visiting sportsmen. In subsequent years even fewer licenses have been taken out.

Many of the visiting hunters are young men from the large cities who know little or nothing about the woods or the game. They come for health and recreation and [illegible] to kill their full allowance of deer, get the guide to do the shooting for them. That is partly what guides are for, although they don't advertise the fact.

This year about eighteen hundred guides registered in Maine. They are charging on an average of $3 a day.

The best moose guides are already [illegible] up at fat salaries to take parties of the wealthier class of sportsmen.

There will be a close watch on game shipments, to see that the "market hunters" do not smuggle deer and moose out of the State in wholesale lots. It will be hard to get anything by the wardens on the railroads, but some game is always [illegible] out of the State by coasting.

As I have always [illegible] the best game country is [illegible] east of Bangor. This year [illegible] deer and 176 moose were shipped out. Sincerely yours, LARRY J. SMYTHE.

From all which you may draw the same deduction which I did. And that little thought was that there is going to be some fine game brought down up in the preh[illegible] country this year.

After Moose in New Brunswick.

They are right after the moose up in Sunbury County region, N. B., already. The first one which came into Maine was that of Parker Waite of Lewiston, who sent home a dandy a few days ago. The big animal when received weighed 1,100 dressed, having a perfect head with a spread of fifty-three and one-half inches.

There are, of course, the accidents, too, which will crop up. You can tell some hunters a hundred times to quit wearing khaki colored clothing, and five minutes after you agree with them they go out and buy a suit which at 100 yards gives them every appearance of an animal in the underbrush.

Walter Scott, a well-known sportsman of Saugus and Lynn, was killed accidentally near Pittsfield, N. H., and Alfred Lane was also a victim of a friend's mistake at Harrisville, Me.

Should Farmers Kill Deer?

I have heard considerable comment about the fining of a farmer at Orange $20 for failing to notify the game and fish commissioners of the killing of a deer within twenty-four hours of the fact. Most sportsmen I have talked with recently feel that it would be a good thing if the [illegible] a farmer to kill a deer on his land when the animal is destroying his crops should be repealed. It is their contention that in many cases the deer is far more valuable than the crops injured.

The sportsmen say that the law should allow a farmer to collect damages through the game commission for the [illegible] suffered. A law like this [illegible] logical in a case like this [illegible] the farmer was fined for on his own testimony, it was brought out that the deer weighed little over ten pounds.

And I imagine that [illegible] just such instances as these which the Massachusetts Gunners' Association will [illegible] when they get busy before the Legislature in the next session.

New Sportsmen's Club.

But here let us give a word of praise to the Greenfield Sportsmen's Club, which this week received its charter for incorporation. The organization, like the Gunners' Association, has undergone a renovation and promises to wake things up in the western part of Massachusetts. They own their own club house and grounds and say they are going to run their membership up into the hundreds.

Good Week for Birds.

Don't think from this talk about the Maine woods and the gossip of the game, that we have forgotten the men who like the bird game.

It has been a good week, despite the fact that the warm weather has not caused the [illegible] to continue as the open[illegible].

Duck Shooters Aroused.

As usual we find trouble. This time it's brewing along the Vineyard Island duck hunters, some of whom are talking about taking the case into the courts. It is the outcome of the action of Captain William H. Proctor in building a jetty out into Great Herring Pond in the town of Edgartown. The gunners say that Proctor had no license to build the jetty. They claim his act will surely put a stop to duck shooting there, since Proctor himself will be [illegible] who will have a chance to get a shot at the birds when they light.

The matter may be taken up to the Harbor and Land Commission. Proctor says the jetty was built to protect his land which was washing away, but it is alleged ducks will likely be shot from a stand on the end of the jetty. The jetty is opposite Swan Neck, where the ducks come in to feed.

Geese Out at Lakeville.

But let's forget trouble and listen to the good cheer from the Middleboro section.

The first geese seen at Lake Assawampsett in Lakeville were sighted early in the week, and although the gunners at the Jeremy's point stand tried always with the decoys to get them in they were unsuccessful. As a rule the geese don't fly over that section much before the middle of this month, but the gunners at Jeremy's are on the watch now.

With such shots as "Captain" Chandler and Bert Hackett there seems to be but a slight chance for a flock getting away whole. The factories at Middleboro are closed this week and the stands at Assawampsett will not be lonesome.

Duck Opening at Tispaquin.

The duck stand at Tispaquin Pond in Middleboro was opened last week. The stand is owned by Erving Brackett of Brockton, William Thompson of Rockland and Frank S. Thomas of Middleboro. It is protected by large bushes, and is one of the best I've ever seen.

Quail and Partridge a-Plenty.

I find the outlook for a good quail and partridge hunting is good out in Rock and South Middleboro villages. I walked through a wood road and ran into a flock of quail and seven or eight good plump partridges.

HARTFORD RUBBER CO. HAS NEW HOME

The new home of the Boston branch of the Hartford Rubber Works Company at 8?? Boylston Street was taken possession of by Chase Langmaid and his large corps [illegible] last. The change from the quarters lower down on Boylston Street was demanded by the great increase of business done by the Boston branch during the past four or five years while Mr. Langmaid has been the chief executive.

The Hartford Company was among the first of the automobile or kindred industries to take possession of an establishment on what is rapidly becoming Boston's motor rialto, and while the quarters then secured were considered amply large enough for the local trade they soon proved woefully inadequate for the great growth of Hartford business.

The new building is a Hartford from [illegible] constructed of re-enforced [illegible] in a manner entirely [illegible] with the business there conducted. REDUCTION OF PRICE IN TWO MOTOR CARS

E. M. F. Co. Makes Big Reduction in Selling Price of E. M. F. and Flanders.

The E. M. F. company of Detroit is out with an announcement of a sweeping reduction in the prices of the two standard cars manufactured by it for the 1911 [illegible]. The reduction is to take immediate effect.

The E. M. F. "thirty," which has heretofore sold for $1,250, has been reduced to $1,000, and the Flanders "twenty" has been reduced from $750 to $700.

Walter E. Flanders, president of the company, is responsible for the new order of things and in taking the [illegible] he very frankly discussed the details of the situation.

"Let me say to you," he said, "that we will be able to make the same margin of profit at the reduced cost as we were two years ago. We now have an investment of $7,000,000, every cent of which is paid, and we enjoy unlimited financial resources. In addition to this we have a highly developed manufacturing and selling organization and we are able to turn out every day eighty cars of the 'thirty' type and 125 Flanders cars, so you see we are not carrying any burden.

"Again, we are very heavy buyers of raw materials and enjoy facilities [illegible] that which very few companies [illegible] It has always been my aim to produce the best value possible for a reasonable price, and the fact that there are now 18,000 'thirty' cars in use indicates that we have succeeded pretty well. We make our own drop forgings, motors, bodies and [illegible] do our own stamping, so we are absolutely independent. In producing a perfect car in large quantities the manufacturing cost has been reduced and we found that for 1911 we could reduce the price and maintain the standard.

"I have never believed in changing the shape of a door or using different colors of paint in order to bring forth a so-called new model. We add any improvement just as soon as its worth is proven, but it goes with the car. Our aim has been to produce a standard car and we have reached a stage where we guarantee our cars for a year. The reduction in price takes immediate effect and to-day we have not a car on hand. Although we are busy [illegible] if there are any unsold cars in the hands of dealers."

It is hinted that the E. M. F. Company has in process of construction a seven-passenger car which will sell for less than $2,000 and which will compete with any car regardless of cost, but this is evidently a state secret, as none of the officials would say anything about it.

NEW HOME OF THE FAMOUS BRUSH CAR

The Boston branch of the Brush Runabout Company is now established at No. 98 Massachusetts avenue, where F. C. Dole occupies the managerial chair. Mr. Dole has for years, and [illegible] since motor cars were first placed on the Boston market, been closely identified with the industry. He has been associated with some of the leading, some of the highest powered, and some of the highest priced cars on the market. He gave up a most excellent position to assume charge of the affairs of "Every Man's Car" here in Boston.

BOSTON TO HAVE A MOTOR RACE MEET

Oldfield, the Daring, to Come Here for Record and Competitive Work.

Interest in the coming event of the auto world, the race meet at Readville Park on next Friday, October 14, is growing steadily. Boston is taking a firm hold on the proceedings and the list of officials for the event will be composed of all of the local men that are interested in the trade.

The cancellation of the Grand Prize aids the coming event materially, as there are a number of entries that will come up for the big one-hour race. A great list is already [illegible] with the added Grand Prize possibilities, which will be heard from Monday. Readville Park will be the scene of one of the world's most famous motor battles.

The [illegible] Barney Oldfield, the world's speed king, driver of the famous Blitzen Benz, which he shot over the Florida sands at the rate of 132 miles per [illegible] of Barney's ability to push his car to the front.

Oldfield's entry gives the meeting a natural aspect that would not be gained otherwise. He is coming to Readville mainly with the spirit of breaking the world's [illegible] records and setting them where they will go unbeaten for some time.

In the one-hour race Oldfield, present holder of the one-hour world's record, will be a strong contender, figuring with the remainder of the field in the three combat [illegible] to old [illegible] of the stock Benz [illegible] and Fred Belcher will [illegible] the wheel of a small [illegible]

LINSCOTT PLEASED WITH REO PROSPECTS

J. M. Linscott of the Linscott Motor Co. recently returned to Boston from a flying business trip to the Reo factory at Lansing, Mich., and to other Western points, and reports a very [illegible] outlook for 1911. Never before was the Reo selling organization in a stronger and more hopeful attitude that at the present time. There are now [illegible] Reo dealers in the United States and [illegible] of these have [illegible] their 1910 contracts for 1911 Reos and [illegible] the privilege of increasing their 1911 specification from 50 to 100 per cent before May 1, 1911. Mr. Linscott [illegible] new Reo engineering building [illegible] facilities for every piece of material [illegible] Reo [illegible] to insure [illegible] maximum economy [illegible] Reo's [illegible] during the coming year. Since the Reo recently [illegible] run from New York to [illegible] in ten days, fifteen hours [illegible] thus lowering the previous record by nearly five days [illegible] of new [illegible] have already [illegible] for this popular winning 1911 Reo [illegible] and the daily inquiries are constantly increasing.

ALCO

TWO TIME WINNER

OF THE

VANDERBILT CUP

It was won by Harry Grant with the same six-cylinder, sixty horsepower stock car in both 1909 and 1910. The average speed for 278.08 miles was at the rate of 65.16 miles per hour. This breaks all records for long distance road races in America.

Other cars were entered in teams and practically relayed against the ALCO, but this lone entry beat all the combinations. It beats all.

It was the exclusive ALCO steel and iron and ALCO construction methods that did the trick. These are the same in all models.

MAPPING ROUTE FROM THE ATLANTIC TO THE PACIFIC

Pathfinder to Leave New York on Transcontinental Trip To-morrow.

For the first time in the history of American motoring a trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast is to be held under the auspices of an automobile organization for the purpose of compiling accurate data regarding road conditions and all other details necessary for the comfort and success of a pleasure trans-continental motor tour.

This long distance run of 6,000 miles or over will be made by the Touring Club of America.

The start of this unique cross country tour will be made to-morrow from the headquarters of the club. The club's official Premier car will be used on the entire trip and "the man in the car" will be A. L. Westgard, chairman of the Committee on Tours and the originator of the Touring Club.

Lieutenant-Governor Horace White who last week became the Governor of New York State, will give the word to start Mr Westgard on his long and interesting journey across the plains and mountains of the United States. Logan Waller Page, director of the Office of Public Roads of the United States Government, will also witness the start as well as many representatives from automobile organizations and clubs.

The route to be followed will be the Sante Fe route, which is the only feasible one during the latter part of the year offering at this season an equable climate and prospects of reasonably favorable traveling conditions all the way from New York to California. Mr. Westgard's objective point is Los Angeles but on arriving there he will continue northward to San Francisco. The trip which is made in a [illegible] manner, occupying at least sixty days as its prime object is directed toward the accuracy and future serviceability of the information to be collected.

With the prophetic eye of the motorist who sees that the ever-increasing popularity of the automobile will in vitably lead to a very general desire for long distance touring from the East to the Far West and vice versa, the time for making the present trip has been selected so as to appeal to the great army of [illegible] motorists who spend a part of the Winter on the California coast. With a route carefully mapped out, with the latest information concerning hotel and other accommodation [illegible] with the assurance of [illegible] during the Autumn [illegible] way to Los Angeles what better method of traveling to the delightful resorts of the Pacific coast could be presented than a pleasure trip across the continent in a good car offering exceptional facilities for seeing many of the wonderful and interesting parts of the country?

The [illegible] is confidently believed [illegible] for an [illegible] trip [illegible] in any other way, and, anticipating this fact the touring club has planned the present trip so that exact information of every mile on the [illegible] journey may be ready [illegible] wanted.

Leaving New York Mr. Westgard will go up the west bank of the Hudson to Kingston and then cut across the State to Delhi, Binghamton, [illegible] and Rochester to Buffalo. From the latter point the route will be by Cleveland to Chicago. From Chicago the tour through the West will be by way of Davenport, Des Moines, Omaha, Lincoln, Kansas City, Topeka, Hutchinson, thence into Colorado with stops at La Junta and Trinidad thence to Raton, Las Vegas, Santa Fe, Albuquerque, New Mexico, Holbrook, Flagstaff, Prescott and Phoenix, Arizona, to San Bernardino and Los Angeles in California. For picturesqueness and variety it is a tour that hardly could be equalled anywhere in the world.

BOSTON AMERICAN MOTOR TRUCK TEST DETAILS SETTLED

Gasolene Motor Truck Men Are Planning for Strenuous Campaign.

With the date for the holding of the [illegible] Truck Contest [illegible] Boston American less than two weeks [illegible] interest in [illegible] reaching fever heat. The announcement of the course to be followed has increased travel in that direction, and there are very few of the entrants who have not already been over the course and sized up the situation.

As a rule, they are very much in favor of the course, and are looking forward to one grand contest, a contest which will demonstrate to the business men at large the entire practicability and economy of motor-driven trucks. There is not one of them but what is confident that [illegible] will bring forth a great deal of benefit to the industry, as a whole, [illegible] than any other argument the great possibilities and the great saving [illegible] using motor trucks in a commercial manner.

The gasolene men are thoroughly [illegible] way things now look the entry list will reach at least forty before the closing of the entries on Saturday next. It is known that at least a dozen trucks, not already entered, are figuring upon competing in this event.

PRIZES HAVE BEEN SELECTED.

The prizes for the several classes have already been purchased, they being furnished by the Smith, Patterson Company the well known jewelers of Boston, which is a guarantee in itself of the excellency of these trophies.

It does not seem as though the electric vehicle people will be strongly represented in the run. In fact, it is doubtful, from the view taken by certain members of the electric vehicle industry of Boston if there will be any in this run.

Manager Day Baker of the [illegible] tric Company in an interview [illegible] a financial paper of Boston some few weeks ago, took occasion to announce that none of the electrical vehicle manufacturers represented in this city would [illegible] run. To quote Mr Baker, who [illegible] represents the electrical makers, he says: "The electric [illegible] facturers cannot see that any [illegible] sults will be shown by such a [illegible] seems to us to be laid [illegible] view to pleasure car conditions [illegible] test of actual freight [illegible] drawn to the attention of [illegible] and the matter being talked [illegible] Baker, resulted in the [illegible] ing sent to Mr. Baker:

Boston, Mass., [illegible] 1910.
Mr. Day Baker, General [illegible]
State street, Boston.

My Dear Mr. Baker—[illegible] our telephone conversation [illegible] yesterday, I hereby formally repeat [illegible] proposition I made at that time.

Inasmuch as the electric [illegible] manufacturers whom you [illegible] consider the Reliability Run of the Boston American as now proposed is more [illegible] to pleasure car conditions than as a test of actual freight haulage [illegible] for electric vehicles, owing to the distance of the run, we will hold a contest subject to rules adopted by your committee and satisfactory to the contest board of the American Automobile Association on the same dates as previously decided, October 21st and 22d. We will offer the same prizes now offered for the electric vehicle division of the run as at present scheduled.

Yours truly, BOSTON AMERICAN.

Up to the time of going to press [illegible] Mr. Baker nor any other electric vehicle representative [illegible] acknowledged the receipt of the letter. Even with one [illegible] out of the running there is no question [illegible] success of the run. The [illegible] who have [illegible] faith in the [illegible] of the [illegible] cars, will be represented [illegible] goodly numbers. They have shown a [illegible] to [illegible] the contest with [illegible] should be the best commercial vehicle [illegible] and economy test that has ever been held.

The committee having in charge the details of the [illegible] have got things pretty well [illegible] and a week before [illegible] announce the [illegible] instructions as to drivers and contestants.

The great difficulty seems to be to induce the private owners to enter cars for this run. The motor vehicles have be[illegible] valuable and so necessary [illegible] men who have used them in their business that they are fain to lose the use of them for the period necessary to compete in the test. One man said: "To give my truck up for two days means a loss to me of at least $50 a day. My customers have got so that they realize that we [illegible] quick deliveries, and therefore ex[illegible] the same. We would like very much [illegible] to the tour, but our first aim is to please our customers."

Manager Gene Fowle, of the Wolf Tavern of Newburyport, has sold the hotel proposition, and feels confident that he will be able to take care of all the tourists on the run. In order to do this, however, he has been forced to go outside of his own house and secure accommodations wherever he may. All this he has [illegible] in order to be sure [illegible] the men engaged in the run [illegible] as many of those who will [illegible] same as non-contestants.

The bona fide number of entries up to date is twenty-three, [illegible] fifteen other cars [illegible] already been [illegible] trucks. [illegible] along the route.

In order that the residents and business [illegible] of the several cities may [illegible] the trucks [illegible] the contest [illegible] Lowell, [illegible] Salem and [illegible]

[illegible] start of the tour [illegible] will be weighed in at the [illegible] Haymarket [illegible] that scale having agreed to perform [illegible]

J. W. Bowman Dwells on Everitt Constructive Features and Price.

The Everitt car distributed in Boston by the J. W. Bowman Company has proven [illegible] most popular [illegible] vehicle. The 1911 [illegible] now in this city, is as strong [illegible] and fully as capable as its [illegible] predecessor and is meeting with great favor. GETTING READY FOR BOSTON AUTO SHOW

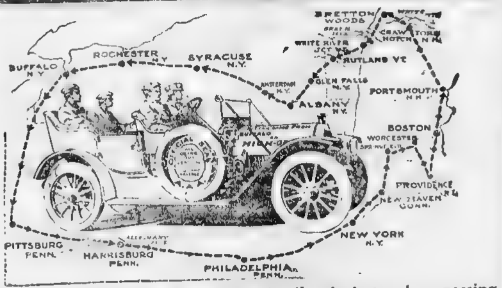
At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association held on Friday afternoon, many matters of interest affecting the forthcoming show were gone over in detail.

There are, in the hands of Secretary Chester I. Campbell applications for more space than he has at his disposal, and that, too, although the Boston show is almost six months away. This, however, is entirely in keeping with the experiences that have always been encountered by the committee of the Boston show, so that they were not, by any means surprised.

The thing that troubles them the greatest is their inability to furnish all the exhibitors with the space that is desired. The applications for space came from almost every section of the country, and there is no doubt that every manufacturer of importance will be represented in the forthcoming Boston Automobile Show.

THOMAS FLYER

Victorious in High-Gear Test



A 6-40 Thomas has just completed a 2000-mile trip in ten days, passing through eight States and the towns shown, ENTIRELY ON HIGH GEAR, the other speeds being eliminated and the transmissions sealed by A. A. A. officials. Sounds extravagant no doubt. It would have to us two years ago.

The Alleghany, White and Green Mountains, with their numerous water breaks, were no obstacle and the car swept over those with ease. Anybody was privileged to drive and this feat on HIGH GEAR is unprecedented, proving that whoever drives a THOMAS makes no difference, where you go is no barrier, the distance is immaterial.

The most difficult Glidden tour or record breaking Vanderbilt race could not compare with abuse received by this stock Thomas machine.

The average motorist would say these feats are impossible, and so it would be with most cars. In fact we do not know of another car which could equal this showing.

We are far-sighted enough to realize that the LONG-STROKE, LARGE-VALVE MOTOR used practically exclusively abroad, is the most efficient, most powerful motor made, and, combined with six cylinders, is as near perfection as the science of man has yet attained.

To go into details about this trip would fill a page.

As further evidence of the 6-40 Thomas flexibility one of our stock cars has been making a similar high gear test among the congested traffic on Boston streets the past three days.

SPEED UP! SLOW DOWN! How often do you suppose these requests are made during the course of a single year by automobilists at large. We venture to say thousands upon thousands of times, and only the six cylinder long stroke Thomas is capable of instantly obeying these commands always on high gear, a great motor improvement that all high grade cars must eventually adopt. A phenomenal saving mechanically, physically and mentally.

TO MEN WHO KNOW MOTOR VALUES it is scarcely necessary to point the moral. The elimination of the necessity for gear shifting removes the one barrier to the complete enjoyment of motoring. It avoids the jerks and jars that distress everyone when running in congested traffic. It avoids the rasping noise incident to gear shifting, so trying to one's nerves. It makes smooth, steady, comfortable riding possible under all conditions of travel if your car is equipped with proper springs.

REMEMBER These features are found exclusively in THOMAS CARS, which alone have the great motor improvements that all high-grade cars must eventually adopt.

Answer this Question:

When shown positive proof that a 6-40 Thomas will perform as no other can isn't it the car for you? Then read this letter, one of many:

September 5, 1910.

The design, material and workmanship of the Six Forty, 1910 Thomas must be perfect, for my machine certainly gives one of the smoothest, quietest and most restful rides experienced in any motor car.

The supreme test has been through the White Mountain region, covering several weeks' touring. Another Thomas Six Forty owner strongly recommended this car and commended the policy of your company to me. He did not exaggerate. In my estimation you manufacture one of the best of motor cars. Yours very truly,

Apparently Dietz surrendered only after a wound had incapacitated him for further defense of his home. It appears that the outlaw of Cameron Dam, not able to use a weapon himself, refused to allow his wife, second son and younger daughter to continue without his aid.

Roaches--Waterbugs--Typhoid

Few people are aware of the spread of disease by means of germs carried by different pests.

As a result of my own investigations, in seeking their hiding places, I have always found them in the foulest parts of dwellings, where germs are sure to thrive.

I have found food supplies tainted by them, partly by excrement, partly by a dark fluid exuded from their mouths or from the scent glands, which have an important bearing on the spread of that dread disease—Typhoid Fever.

Heads of families should see to it and get rid of this grave danger.

Martin's Pest Exterminators for Waterbugs, Roaches and Ants are ... in powder form. Odorless, safe ... only 50c and $1, postage 5 and 10 cents extra. For powder, name pest.

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES

It is truly remarkable how Cadum, the new remedy, causes pimples to disappear. Bad cases are frequently helped in a week and sometimes even sooner. Cadum causes pimples to dry up and fall off, leaving the skin as soft and smooth as a baby's. Pimples are a disease of the skin, and are not caused by bad blood, as many people suppose. Cadum helps those annoying and disfiguring facial blemishes because it can be applied direct to the trouble, and its soothing, antiseptic and healing powers stop the itching at once. Cadum is equally good for rash, blotches, scaly skin, chafings, eczema, sores, eruptions, acne, psoriasis, etc. 10c. and 25c. per box at druggists.

NEVER ANY INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA OR SICK, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your Stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating or your food lies like a lump of lead ... you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear or discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

RECORD OF CITY SALES LAST WEEK THE BEST FOR MONTHS

Women's Clubhouse Building and Score of Other Important Sales Recorded.

MANY BIG DEALS PENDING

Suburban Estates and House Lots Conitnue to Attract Investors and Homeseekers.

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

WITH the sale of the Women's Club House Building on Huntington avenue, which is valued at over $200,000, and over a score of other large sized and important properties throughout the city reported sold during that time, the past week made a record that is the best for several months.

Practically all these large sales in the city were to investors and speculators, especially the latter, and this fact is sufficient basis for the assertion that the market is gradually recovering from its lethargy of the past few weeks. There is not so much talk now of poor business and apparently brokers are doing more to stir up trade than in wasting time telling one another how bad things are going with them.

Plenty of good deals are under way and one of these, which contemplates the purchase of a big factory in one of the suburbs and the consequent employment of thousands of workmen, is expected to be closed successfully during the coming week.

The same reports of brighter times are coming from the suburbs, and the sales of all kinds of property in these districts made up a large part of the total of transactions last week ... ban land developers are still catering to a large throng of investors in house lots and there has been but little dropping in such sales, notwithstanding the advent of Fall.

Among the sales reported yesterday was that of the property at No. 44 Joy street, near Myrtle street, Beacon Hill, comprising a four-story ... and ... square feet of land ... for $28,500 has been purchased by Julia ... from Rose ... The land is rated for $9,100.

Wakefield Activity.

Despite the fact that the tax rate jumped from $19 to $20.50 this year, there has been no apparent let-up in the building activity which Wakefield has been experiencing since the Spring of 1909. In the last eighteen months the selectmen have issued more than three times as many building permits as were ever before granted in a corresponding period, and fully two-thirds were for new dwelling houses costing from $2,000 to $5,000. In addition to this there have been additions built to three large mills and factories. Three of the most extensive buildings under construction in Wakefield at the present time are a $40,000 eight-apartment house on ... avenue, and $35,000 and $15,000 dwelling houses on Prospect street.

... are being built by Miss E. E. Bolt, the ... for her niece, Mrs. Clarence G. Howes. The selectmen at this week's meeting granted ... permits for new dwelling houses in the ... wood district, and Crozier Latimer will apply next week for a permit for a three-apartment house in Lincoln street. Three large tracts of land in Wakefield, one near the Montrose district, one in Greenwood and the other at the head of Lake Quannapowitt, near the Reading line, are being opened for residential purposes. Eight houses are being erected in Swain court, a new street recently opened from Pleasant street.

REAL ESTATE MARKET IMPROVES FAST

Less Pessimism and More Hopeful Talk Will Soon Bring Still Better Trading.

The real estate market is showing improvement. This statement may be challenged by those pessimistically inclined, but inquiry among brokers makes it certain that more interest is being taken in real estate propositions now than at any time since last Spring. Had there been less idle talk about unsatisfactory industrial conditions earlier in the year there is hardly a doubt that the real estate and all other markets would now be much more active.

When there is so much money available for bond investments it is evident that there is plenty of money for real estate buying. But it will not come out so long as pessimistic talk is so general. While there has not been much actual basis for it, such talk, if persisted in, will tend to bring about actually unsatisfactory conditions by making lack of confidence widespread and timidity more general. That optimism will bring about exactly the opposite result, if taken up generally, is quite probable.

Real estate brokers who are talking hopefully are getting business, and are infusing confidence in realty investors and speculators. To a large extent they turn to brokers for opinions as to the realty situation, and also consult brokers as to whether it is advisable to buy.

The broker who takes a blue view of the outlook imbues his customers with like views, and thereby annuls any inclination his customers may have to buy realty. And all the while there is nothing radically awry. It would seem as if it was time for a halt to be called on so much exaggerated effusion about hard times now or soon to come. Such pessimism, if persisted in, will bring them, whereas hopeful talk, backed up by more confidence, will soon make a better realty market and will bring about a decided change for the better in all lines.

TO SELL HOUSE LOTS AT NIGHT AUCTION

This Innovation of New York Broker May Be Adopted in All Large Cities.

For the first time in this country an auction sale of house lots at night will be held in the Bronx, New York, on next Tuesday.

This innovation in the selling of real estate has been made by Joseph P. Day, the well-known New York real estate man, and he declares it to be his opinion that night auction sales will become an institution in all the large cities of the country when their convenience is understood and appreciated.

In giving his reasons for this move Mr. Day says: "My reason for holding a night auction sale of real estate is for the convenience of the public. If I were selling ... property or apartment houses, which interests principally the big investors or men of affairs, the natural place to offer such parcels would be at the Exchange salesroom.

"Inasmuch as the sale of these lots will principally interest those who want to buy a home site or for investment with future profit, I am of the opinion that more people will attend this sale than if it were held in the day time, for the reason that the average man cannot get away from his business or his employment ... several hours at ... sale without incurring the displeasure of his employer or at a sacrifice of valuable time in routine of business.

"I am sure that by holding this night auction sale in a central part of the city that hundreds of people will go there who could not spare the time to go to the Real Estate Exchange.

"To be sure it is an innovation, but one must not overlook the fact that for years all the important auction sales of art, paintings, also auction sales of the highest class of furniture and art objects have been held at night, either in art galleries or in big meeting places.

"I am pioneering, and it will be as interesting to me as many others to see the outcome of the sale. I am quite positive that there will be a big attendance, because the property I am offering is of the very highest ...

"There is one thing I like about all others, and that is that man and wife can come to the sale together; they can bid on the lots; they can consult with each other; they can discuss the prices as they are being bid up, and there will be no regrets after the purchase has been made. They will approve of it mutually and that, of course, will be very much to my satisfaction.

"Another thing: Money is frequently taken from the savings bank for the purchase of a home site or property for investment. The wife has helped her husband in the accumulation of his money, and both should decide on the future policy of their surplus money."

BIG REAL ESTATE SHOW FOR BOSTON

Boston Exchange Favors It and Also Protests Against Further Congestion at Park Street.

The directors of the Boston Real Estate Exchange ... the following vote on subway stations, a copy of which has been sent to the joint commission considering the matter: "Voted, that in the opinion of the directors of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Board, the efforts of the public authorities should be to so plan and lay out all new subways and extensions of present ones, as to prevent any increase in the present congestion in the Park Street Station, and, in so far as the public requirements will allow, to so plan lest yearly increasing numbers using the subways should be distributed through different stations, in order that any undesirable concentration at one point may be avoided."

The committee on the proposed Real Estate Exposition of Metropolitan Boston, consisting of Secretary Viaux, Mark Temple Dowling, Stephen W. Sleeper, A. Dudley Dowd and Paul M. Hamlen, has reported unanimously indorsing the project and favoring the holding of such an exposition under the auspices of the Exchange, and the matter has been referred back to the committee to formulate and report ... plans therefor.

Similar expositions are to be held in St. Louis and Pittsburg this month and in Cleveland next Spring under the auspices of the real estate exchanges of those cities. The New York Exposition is to be repeated with increased exhibits at the Madison Square Garden April next.

The matters of separate tax bills for gypsy moth destruction and the advisability of including all real estate taxes in one bill were discussed by the directors and the question was referred to the legislative committee for consideration and report.

BUYS MORE LAND.

J. W. Wilbur Purchases Several Large Suburban Tracts.

J. W. Wilbur, the well-known real estate developer of No. 89 State street, reports the purchase by him of some more large tracts of out-of-town land. He has purchased two large tracts just outside the city limits of Syracuse, New York. One is known as the Ellsworth and the other as the Noble property. He has also purchased part of the George E. Foss estate on River street, Haverhill, having a large frontage on the Merrimac river. He has also bought a large tract from Messrs. Perkins and Brown and Eliza H. Brewer in Methuen, formerly part of the Bradley Farm. He will develop it at once and place it on the market. In Shrewsbury he has purchased ten acres, located on the Shrewsbury and Holden turnpike. A. ... Rustig ... was the grantor. It adjoins present holdings of Mr. Wilbur.

Deeds have gone on record conveying from J. W. Wilbur to Nathan F. Woodbury and Annie E. Woodbury, his wife, the Dingley homestead on Forest avenue, Portland, Me., and running back sixteen hundred feet on Belle avenue. The house is a large twelve-room building, and a stable, barn and other buildings are located on the property. Mr. Woodbury buys for occupancy.

"PINEHURST" IS SOLD.

Fisher Ames Buys This Charming Bedford Estate.

Fisher Ames has purchased the charming "Pinehurst" estate in Bedford, near the centre of the town, but still retired from the public road, approached for nearly a third of a mile by magnificent macadamized way. Upon this estate of about forty acres are many rare ornamental trees and shrubs and lily pond.

The buildings, which include delightful country house, coachman's cottage, stable and garage, occupy one of the highest points of land upon the estate, and are almost completely obscured by the artistic arrangement of the trees. The grantors, James R. Poor et ux, who have their town house in Brookline, have used "Pinehurst" as their Summer home.

The sale of this property by Edward T. Harrington Co. has removed from the market one of the most attractive nearby acreage estates.

INSTALLMENT PLAN FOR TAX PAYMENTS

New York Real Estate Board Advocates a Change in the Present System.

CITY MAY GIVE IT A TRIAL

Quarterly Payments Would Help Small Property Owners and Serve to Steady Values.

A PLAN whereby property owners will be able to pay their taxes on the installment plan instead of in a lump sum as at present, which may extend to this and other large cities throughout the country, has just been started in New York. Real estate men there are in favor of it and Controller Prendergast before whom it has been placed, is said to favor it, although he has not yet made a decision on the matter.

The last issue of the official "Bulletin" published by the Real Estate Board of Brokers of the city of New York, says: "Necessarily we must soon come to the time of partial payments on our taxes, as the tremendous amount of money the New York city treasury has at present paid to it [illegible] for city taxes means a huge dislocation of funds and a feast or famine policy prejudicial to decent and orderly [illegible] procedure.

"The city of New York has been to both good and bad credit at the same time. Its bonds have generally ruled high in price, and the interest thereon has always been promptly paid. This prompt payment is also true of city employes' salaries, but it is not true of other city creditors. The amount of red tape necessary to examine the check and recheck and recheck with the normal dilatoriness makes a delay highly prejudicial to the city's credit and interests.

"Fundamentally considered, the errors in city financing and its delayed payments arise from the inferior method by which the city collects its moneys.

"This is an installment age. There is nothing from a cradle to a coffin that cannot be bought to-day on partial payments, without this modern business [illegible] and the interchange of commodities would be reduced possibly one half.

"[illegible] the present system of collecting taxes [illegible] amount yearly is archaic and out [illegible] is but stating a truth recognized [illegible] There is no need of [illegible] we admit it, therefore what is [illegible] remedy for a confessedly bad [illegible]

"The present errors in method may be summarized as:

"A feast or famine condition in the city treasury.

"[illegible] of bank funds at critical financial periods of the year.

"[illegible] the city to borrow money in advance [illegible] approximately $6,000,000 per annum [illegible] for the use of [illegible]

"Delays in contracts and payments for necessary improvements, owing to inadequacy of funds, leading to unbusinesslike treatment, by the city, of the business community it subsists on.

"If partial payments of taxes be considered wise, they must be made at definite, recognized commercial periods. We must have them at either monthly, quarterly or half yearly periods.

"To have payments monthly is too close and pressing and troublesome.

"To have them quarterly would bring funds in at reasonal periods of the year when contracts would be taken up and payments made, in accordance with the city's necessities, and all these things considered the quarterly period would seem to the writer the proper time for the payment of taxes.

"The half-yearly period makes the payments too far apart, and does not cure the evils of the yearly period; only mitigates them.

"We, therefore, suggest to the present controller and city administration, if a proper scheme of quarterly tax payments can be inaugurated, it would serve to steady real estate values and be a distinct betterment to the city, the banks, and, the least thought of one of all the property owner, would be distinctly benefited. Now in the purchase of real estate, the party buying and closing title before the first Monday in October assumes all the real estate tax, a matter often lost sight of in the preliminary negotiations of a sale but it is [illegible] an important charge for the purchaser [illegible] taxes for a period he does not own the property taxed.

"The [illegible] real estate owner is not a man of [illegible] but one who has to economize [illegible] the heavy charges incident to real estate ownership here. He [illegible] interest on his investment as a rule, and, at times, by neighborhood changes [illegible] can come out with an excellent profit which changes sometimes [illegible] loss, but it is always more profit than loss, as the city is expanding always and values always tending upward. The average owner is a prudent, careful citizen, having a use for every dollar he makes and the best consideration the city could give him, in its charges against him, would be to make the tax payments at such intervals as will serve to lighten the burden on him as an individual and a citizen, and this also would be of decided economic benefit to the city at large."

GERMANS PLEASED WITH LAND DEAL

As the years go by the Germans are becoming more pleased with a land trade with England, which they made ten years ago. At that time the people severely criticised the emperor's government for turning Zanzibar and Pemba over to England and taking insignificant little Heligoland in return.

Heligoland is a small island on the North sea, off the mouth of the Elbe river. The keen eye of the Emperor had seen its strategic importance, and it is now regarded as the German Gibraltar. If there are any Heligolanders older than 100 years they will have lived to change their nationality twice. They were Danes until 1807, Britons until 1890 and Germans since then.

A great event in the history of the island was the arrival of a horse and one old woman fainted from emotion. With the exception of a wheelbarrow and an occasional perambulator, there were no wheeled vehicles on the island. There were a goodly number of sheep and goats, but no cows in permanent residence. Every summer a couple of cows were brought over from Cuxhaven, and their milk was retailed at the apothecary's shop to invalid visitors. At the close of the sea bathing this highly favored pair returned to the mainland.

Then came, in 1890, the famous bargain between the English and Germans, by which England took over Zanzibar and Pemba, and gave them Heligoland in return. As was to be expected, there were people in both countries who thought the bargain unfair. There was a good deal of grumbling in England, and on the other side the German colonial party complained that no territory had been acquired in which any large number of emigrants could live.

Since then, however, the Germans seem to have come to the conclusion that from their point of view the bargain was a very good one, and they have, more or less cheerfully, spent millions of dollars in turning it into an advanced torpedo base.

HOMES OBTAINED BY THRIFTY WORKERS

Cambridge Man Addresses Vienna Congress on Building and Loan Associations.

The methods of building and loan associations, better known locally as co-operative banks, was the subject of a recent address made by John Nolen, city planner of Cambridge, before the International housing congress in Vienna.

"The main benefit of building (or savings) and loan associations," he said, "is the ready, practical and economical means which these associations afford to acquire a home of one's own. The report of the United States Department of Labor shows that the 4,414 associations from which reports were secured were the means by which 814,755 homes were acquired by their shareholders, and that in addition to these the members acquired 28,450 other buildings. Here we have a means of self help which can be easily applied almost anywhere among thrifty people. Its merits and steadily increasing contribution to the solution of the housing problem can scarcely be overestimated.

"The facts are convincing and they point clearly the way to a wider and wider application of this fruitful use of the principle of co-operation. There is no philanthropy, no charity in the ordinary workings of building or saving and loan associations. They provide a straight, clean, safe economical and well-regulated business [illegible] which may outstrip charity wherever it can be applied.

"It is gratifying to note that the losses sustained by these associations by reason of inadequate security are not only infrequent, [illegible] inconsiderable. Surrounded as these associations are to-day by rigid restrictions and regulations, it is doubtful if any other class of financial establishments renders such uniformly beneficial rewards to the wage-worker or so perfectly meets his needs as a means of saving and home gaining."

BUILDINGS BETTER BUILT.

Records for Six Months Show Fewer Fires Than Ever Before.

The fire losses in the United States and Canada for the month of June are computed by the Journal of Commerce at $13,183,000 and the total for six months ended June 30 reached $99,228,900. When this is compared with the totals of the first six months of previous years a marked difference is noted. The following table gives a comparison of the losses during June, 1908, 1909 and 1910, together with the losses by months for the first half of those three years:

	1908	1909	1910
January	$29,582,000	$22,735,000	$15,175,400
February	18,160,700	19,134,000	17,450,850
March	[illegible]	13,795,400	18,465,550
April	26,000,000	16,745,500	18,091,800
May	14,181,500	17,303,400	16,923,200
June	19,512,000	14,335,000	13,183,000
Tl. 6 ms.	$125,497,500	$103,803,000	$99,228,900

As will be noted, the total fire loss of the first six months of 1910 shows a remarkable decrease for the same period of 1909 and more than $25,000,000 less than the aggregate for the first half of 1908.

Much of this decrease may be laid to the fact that people are beginning to realize the advantages of fireproof building construction.

BUNGALOWS INCREASING.

Its Charms and Conveniences Are Making It the Popular House.

The popularity of the bungalow is an evidence of the influence of the American woman upon the art as well as upon the cost of living, says the Western Architect in an article discussing the increasing use of this style of dwelling. The increase in the suburban habit, following better facilities of local transportation, has multiplied these residences within the zones of cheap railway fares surrounding large cities. They are numbered by thousands, for example, in Long Island, and they are multiplying in the readily accessible environs of Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. The bungalow appeals as much to the housewife as to the husband. It combines the privacy of a house with the stepsaving conveniences of the apartment. Taste counts more than money in making the bungalows attractive and economical, even though wealth may indulge in fanciful and costly variations. Among its peculiar attractions are counted broad verandas and an interior living room which may be as lofty as the roof, with a surrounding gallery, giving access to bedrooms.

BUILDING PERMITS SHOW DECREASE

Due to the Approach of Winter; Nine Months' Total, However, Is a Record.

With the approach of Winter, permits for new building construction in Boston are showing a gradual decrease. During September 116 permits were issued at the local building commissioner's office, a decrease of 12 from August, and 78 from the high figure of 194 in April.

During the first nine months of 1910 permits for new construction were issued to the number of 1,206, the largest in that period for several years.

The following shows the number of permits issued during each of the first nine months of 1910:

January	29	14	43
February	[illegible]	9	83
March	138	53	191
April	135	59	194
May	121	38	159
June	118	40	158
July	83	48	131
August	94	34	128
September	86	30	116

No Meddler Ever Wore Medals

By Herbert Kaufman

Copyrighted, 1910, by Herbert Kaufman.

Stop peeping through your neighbor's fence and throw the tin cans out of your yard. Quit spying through the next-door window and clear the dirty dishes from your table.

Perfection begins at home. You can't set standards unless you set examples—if you're aware of all the cobwebs in the flat above and all the dusty mantels of the parlor below, you've wasted the necessary hours to keep your own "house in order."

When Curiosity sneaks through the keyhole, Industry vacates the room.

Busybodies always dwell in glass mansions with unwashed panes.

No meddler ever wore a medal or proved a model.

Stop criticising your competitor's methods and morals and analyze your own—cease damning your rivals and you'll have time to dam your leaks and trace your creaks.

You can't manage more than one machine and keep it sound and bright and clean.

The moment you try to oversee more than your proportion of the world's work, you'll overlook some flaw in your special share.

The freaks of Chance are uncounted. Men have stumbled into fortune through innumerable vagaries of circumstance. Many types of humanity have achieved unexpected successes, but you can turn the pages of your library and the pages of your memory, without ever finding trace of one Smart Aleck who ever set a pace.

You can't play the other man's position without losing sight of the ball. Unless you stick where you belong, and watch your field, you'll never share in a winning game.

There's always a "man behind" who isn't squandering his moments and his thoughts on things which don't concern the concern. If you don't concentrate your ideas and focus your attention on your set duties—if you don't make a point of not missing a point—he'll get your place.

Knockers and gossips harm themselves oftener than they hurt others. Critics must show clean hands and accurate tallies. Plaintiffs must enter court prepared to court investigation. The insinuator must prove his case and prove his sincerity.

We have been engaged in the business of living long enough to conclude that slanderers are congenital pulings—too ignorant to properly estimate conditions and performances—too bigoted to be impartial, or too cowardly to be fair.

Men of breadth and brain and courage are so occupied—so constantly in action—so intensely interested in their enterprises—that they not only lack the leisure, but they are too intelligent to constitute themselves jurymen-at-large—they possess too much commonsense to sit in judgment and form opinions from circumstantial evidence and vagrant rumor.

NONE BUT MEAN, INCOMPETENT, SELF-COMPLACENT, BEAN-HEADED ASSES ASSUME THE RISK TO WRONG THE RIGHT.

Parent, Are You Doing Your Full Duty Towards Your Child?

This Nice Piano $74

IF YOU DON'T OWN A PIANO IT IS YOUR OWN FAULT

Does your son or daughter ever remark to you how well your neighbor Smith's child plays the piano? Hasn't your wife oft n told you, could not understand how, with a salary double Smith's, she cannot have a piano in her home, and you have always been at a loss to explain how Smith can accomplish so much? I am going to put you wise. Smith has taken advantage of my low prices and my ability to fight the big combination, the Piano Trust, to bring the cost of pianos within his reach. I want you, Dear Reader, to become economical like Smith. I ask you in all fairness to your family to come in this week and see with your own eyes to what levels I have dug piano prices. I have been fighting this big unfair Piano Trust singly for 7 years on an uphill fight. I want your support to continue the fight. Come in this week. I'll give you the trade of your life. Your own terms.

SPECIAL THIS WEEK

I don't want your money now—just your order. During the past month the bankrupt stocks of several small dealers forced to the wall by the Piano Trust have found their way to my store and will be sacrificed at your own price.

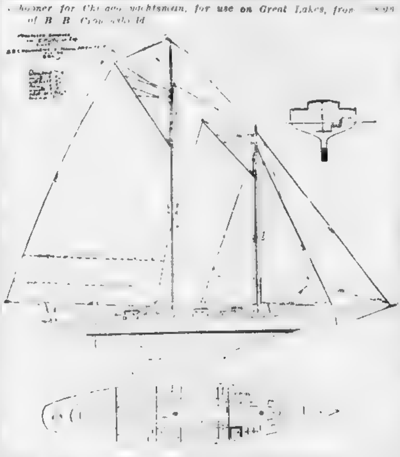
YACHTS AND POWER BOATS

Schooner for Chicago yachtsman, for use on Great Lakes, from designs of B. B. Crowninshield.



F[illegible]

Swasey, Raymond & Page have prepared designs for a ... steam yacht ... the property of ... commodore of the club. The yacht is sixty-five feet over all and will have two one hundred horsepower, triple ... motors and will be built for speed as well as comfort.

The same company are working on plans for a large steam yacht for a Boston yachtsman, and have received orders for a ...-foot speed boat for Jack Neilson of Newport.

The power boat Maybelle, owned by F. F. Thompson, left this week for New York, where her owner will go aboard with a party and cruise to Florida for the Winter.

The ... steel schooner being built at Lawley's is ready for launching at any time now.

The new steamer George O. Hibbard, being built to replace the old John Howard by the city of Boston, will probably be launched at South Boston next week.

A fifteen foot ... association is being talked over at Quincy and from present indications it will be formed and will prove to be a lively organization in the game. Classes at the races of the Y. R. A. of M. being arranged. The class will be a popular one, as the cost of such a boat will not run much over $100.

The two fast eighteen foot knockabouts Answer and Mona have been sold by the owners H. P. Rowland and H. N. Bloomfield to Rhode Island yachtsmen, and will race in Narragansett Bay, where that class is popular.

H. N. Bloomfield will probably build another boat of the same type, as this class bids fair to be a good one next season, several new boats coming in. If nothing unexpected turns up during the racing season next Summer the Bonito, Dorchen II and the Aurora will probably go into Rhode Island looking for trophies as the representatives of the Massachusetts Bay Eighteen-Foot Association.

Trade Notes.

B. B. Crowninshield has designed a schooner yacht for a Chicago yachtsman to be used on the Lakes. The plans call for a ... boat and the lines give evidence of a speedy craft. The schooner's dimensions are as follows: 58 feet over all, 38 feet 2 inches water line; 12 feet 9 inches beam; 8 feet 2 inches draught; ballast or keel, 6 tons and it has a sail area of 1,827 feet.

Arthur N. Smith of Portland, Me., has written to John L. Shellington of this city, who has the Hartford engines, that his new 1911 special Model X Hartford is turning up eighteen times an hour in a twenty-eight foot boat. This is one of the newest models of gasoline engines.

Another new boat that will be seen next season is a motor yawl, designed by A. P.

$4,500,000 HOE ART COLLECTION ON SALE

Library Alone Said to Have Cost the Inventor Over $2,000,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—With the season of art auctions approaching the definite announcement is at last made that the great and varied collection of paintings and art objects of many sorts made by the late Robert Hoe is to be dispersed at public sale here this Winter. There has been much speculation as to whether the collection would be sold here or in England, but the executors have finally determined upon New York as the best place under the direction of the American Art Association.

The art property which is to be put up for the public's competition comprises the most diverse groups and represents an investment by Mr. Hoe of more than $2,000,000, as nearly as can be ascertained. This is exclusive of the library, which, it is said, exhibits a total of expenditures by Mr. Hoe on it alone of at least $2,500,000, so that the aggregate of his purchases of books and art objects is therefore about $4,500,000, according to all that can be learned as to the figures.

Mr. Hoe bought lavishly, not to say ravenously, in all parts of the world. The executors have not yet decided where the library is to be sold, but inasmuch as they wisely opened their eyes to the fact that New York these days brings out the highest prices for art productions put up at auction as against any ... heretofore made for some of the European cities there seems to be ... among those who follow the great book sales that the library too will be sold through the same organization which has handled the largest ... that have been sold at auction in this country.

One of the ways that sent up the figures of Mr. Hoe's library expenditures was his indulgence of his penchant for having books elaborately adorned. He took pleasure in buying a book which cost perhaps $25 or $30 and then expending $200 or $300 in having it bound by some famous binder. In view of such a practice of course it could scarcely be expected that his library will bring anything like the sum he paid for it.

There is, however, the keenest interest in the library, and as most of the things in it are those that are bought at liberal figures of American collectors those who follow these matters think that the executors will hardly determine to send the books abroad and run the risk of the "knockout" which has such sway in London auction rooms and which on the other hand has been successfully thwarted in New York's chief auction room.

Interest in the general art collection which Mr. Hoe made is also keen, for while it has long been known that he was spending large sums on it comparatively few people have been permitted to know just what composed it. ... of it that even the comparatively small number of people who ... to his house to see it have ... the whole of it ... to show them much at a time. A glimpse only can be given here of its vast and varied components.

In Chinese porcelains there is an important collection of blue and whites ... numbering nearly 1,000 objects. By reason of pairs and garniture, however, these will probably be reduced to something like 600 items in the catalogue of the sale. Of the decorated porcelains there are between 400 and 500 pieces dating from Early Ming to Chienlung. Some of them stand in Louis XV and Louis XVI mountings. The collection of old Chinese cloisonné is the largest, it is said, that has ever come under the hammer. Most of them are described as Ming pieces.

D'Y'EVER EAT SHARK? THEY SAY IT'S A DELICACY

Whole Lot of It Sold Right Down Here at T Wharf This Season, Too.

IS shark meat edible?

Everyone connected with the T wharf fish establishments, however remotely, has been asked this question innumerable times during the Summer just past, as stories appeared in the newspapers anent the bringing into the T wharf market large numbers of sharks, which seemingly found a ready sale.

Shark meat is edible. Not only edible but said to be delicious—certain species. The common, or garden variety, of shark is edible, but not delicious. The meat is soft and wholly unattractive, but it finds a ready sale, especially among Italians, who have been accustomed to eating shark for generations.

By "common shark" the reader will know at once that the elasmobranch fish of the order of plagiostomi is meant. Those common on the American coast are generally known as the carcharhinus obscurus and the carcharhinus caudatus, although they are sometimes referred to by the deep sea scientists on T wharf as "dusky" and "blue" sharks respectively.

These sharks are often brought to T wharf and sold as food. As many as fifty or sixty are sometimes brought in on a single vessel and readily disposed of at good prices. It is probable that not less than 10,000 pounds of shark has been disposed of during the Summer at an average price of about 5 cents a pound, which is more than codfish or haddock have brought.

But the shark meat which finds the readiest sale, and which, it is said, everybody will be eating as a delicacy one of these days, is the horse mackerel. This fish is sometimes called mackerel shark, but erroneously. The mackerel shark is a true shark, sometimes called porbeagle.

The horse mackerel's flesh is firm and dark red in color. Cooked, it somewhat resembles swordfish in looks and taste and texture. It is now served only in a few Italian restaurants, but people who have eaten it [illegible] that it will become popular among all classes as soon as it gets scarce enough to sell for 25 or 30 cents a pound.

CONGREGATIONALISTS TO HOLD SESSIONS

SEVEN HUNDRED delegates representing 730,000 men and women, are to attend the opening session of the National Triennial Convention of Congregational churches, which opens at Tremont Temple to-morrow night. One of the first questions to be taken up is that of the future policy of the church in dealing with trade unions.

Professor Graham Taylor of Chicago University heads the industrial committee. It also includes such noted labor advocates as the Rev. Wallace M. Short of Sioux City, Iowa, the only minister in the country ever selected as an honorary member of the Bartenders' Union, as well as Mayor James Logan of Worcester, and the Rev. Charles T. Macfarland of South Norwalk, Conn. Bayard [illegible] Harrison of Malden, at one time an active worker in the trade union movement, is secretary of the committee in this State.

Union Men Invited.

It seems to be an open secret that the Congregational Church, through its industrial committee, is going to adopt a very liberal policy toward the trade unions at this convention. In fact, the committee itself has gone so far as to invite almost every union in Greater Boston to be represented at the convention when this question comes up for discussion. These invitations bear the union label, and they have a printed heading with a [illegible].

The Rev. Washington Gladden of Columbus, Ohio, is the principal speaker at this meeting, his subject being "The Church and Industrial Progress." The Rev. Charles Stelzle of New York, a Presbyterian minister, who carries a "good standing" card in the Machinists' Union, also will deliver an address, his text being, "Can the Church Make Good With Organized Labor?"

Governor Draper will give the welcome of the State to the Council. Mayor Fitzgerald will speak for the city of Boston and the Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad [illegible] the Park Street Congregational [illegible] will make the address for the [illegible]. The response will be made by Hon. Thomas C. MacMillan, moderator [illegible] Chicago lawyer and was a member of both branches of the Illinois Legislature [illegible] for many years clerk of the United States District Court of Illinois.

Next Wednesday in connection with the centennial anniversary of the American Board of Missions at the council [illegible] historical pilgrimage will be made to Andover and Bradford by a special train leaving the North Station at 9:15 a. m. At Andover the dedication of the monument near "The Missionary Woods" will take place with historical statement by the Rev. Edward Y. Hincks, D. D., and an address by the Rev. Robert [illegible] D. D., of India.

The dedication of the [illegible] at Bradford will be on the spot where the American Board was organized in 1810 and addresses will be made by the Rev. Everett S. Stackpole and John R. Mott, LL. D., of New York.

The other services in connection with the centennial of the Missionary Board will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in Tremont Temple with overflow meetings in the Park Street and Old South churches.

Changes in Management.

The work of the secretary must be better equipped and enlarged to meet the growing demands of the church. There will be discussions on the [illegible] and administration of the Congregational church; there are many changes to be made about the management of the [illegible] and these will be frankly debated by such men as Rev. REPRODUCTION OF COVER DESIGN, EXACT SIZE

It contains 61 full page drawings—the choice of Bud Fisher, himself—the best that have appeared in the Boston American, including many of the "Abroad" series, the "Trip to Reno," and many of the best "Race Track" pictures.

The book is 5½ inches deep, 15 inches long, bound in heavy brown boards, printed on the finest heavy glazed paper, and will make your mother-in-law laugh till her jaws ache.

PREFACE

NO book is a regular book without a preface; hence this bundle of junk. A dedication is supposed to give class to a book, and Mutt is always on the job with the classy stuff. Sometimes one starts a preface by exposing the author's real name, but I shall cut that out, for were I to impart my real label, I might get six months for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Books are published for two reasons:

First, to get the author's name into print.

Second, to get money into the author's pocket. (Of course, the publisher gets some, too, but the author is not supposed to know that.)

This book is different. There is only one excuse for putting it before the public—to get the money. (Thank you for buying this one.)

The Mutt and Jeff cartoons have been running daily in the Hearst papers for three years, making a total of close on to one thousand pictures. It can readily be seen that it would be almost impossible to place this entire collection in one book. If such were done, this publication would look like the city directory of Greater New York and a truck would be necessary to move the book from the store to the purchaser's home, which would greatly handicap its sale. Not desiring to put the crusher on the marketing of this flock of debris, we have been forced to make a selection of a number of the most representative pictures, selected from the various periods of Mutt's career. We give some of Mutt's earlier adventures and end with his most recent, thereby covering the most important events in the life of this eccentric gentleman and his side kick, Little Jeff.

And now if the people who read this crime have as much fun as I did in drawing its contents, I shall be satisfied.

INTERESTED MEN DISCUSS THE BILL TO RECOMPENSE INJURED EMPLOYES

EXPRESS VIEWS ON COMPENSATION ACT

THE recent hearing by the Commission which is to report to the Legislature a bill to compensate dorkmen for accidents revealed that there is a wide difference of opinion among employers, labor men and the public generally as to what is adequate compensation and whether a practical law can be placed on the statute books. Practically all agree that the present law is unfair.

...cautions and the employes being careful to obey the rules made for their own protection, accidents can be reduced to a minimum. I think it is possible to frame a law that will bring about a decrease in the number of accidents.

With the important States handling this matter in the same way, [illegible] one State will have an advantage over others. Manufacturers in Massachusetts at present are [illegible] with laws that do not exist across the line in Rhode Island or New Hampshire, and such a condition is a handicap to Massachusetts manufacturers.

I do think that the National Government should keep out of this compensation for accident matter. It is beyond human power for a government in a country as big as this to do the things the National Government is trying to do. It has [illegible] enforce and manage a [illegible] compensation law, while [illegible] states are equipped to handle just such matters. And since seven States [illegible] appointed commissions to discuss and study this question I think that uniform legislation is quite probable.

NEWS OF LABOR IN AND NEAR BOSTON

Don't giggle if, when attending your favorite moving-picture performance during the coming week, you chance to notice that Claude, the brave young hero of moving-picture fame, overcomes Desperate Desmond by striking him over the head with a union label for daring to accost sweeet Rosamond.

It does not necessarily follow that the fair haired Claude belongs to the amalgamated [illegible] league. The emblem of organized labor merely will be used to show that the man behind the film machine is a good standing member of the recently formed Moving Picture Operators' Union of this city.

The label itself has a sort of five-pointed star in the center, with clasped hands underneath, and contains this statement: "This machine is operated by a union member of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes of the United States and Canada. In union there is strength. Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor."

Its adoption, locally, follows a suggestion made by Bernard Corbett, business agent of the Boston local, who declares that with one exception every moving picture house in the city now employs union operators exclusively. He also asserts that, in addition to showing that union men are employed by the houses having union-label pictures, the emblem in question will guarantee that so far as skill can prevent it, no accidents are likely to occur in such places. This is accounted for by the rigid examination all men are subjected to before being admitted to the union.

John J. Barry, international president of the general organization, is president of the Boston local, which has established permanent headquarters at No. 724 Washington street. The union label has been just procured and will be distributed immediately. Desperate Desmond will get "his for keeps" in a few days. Brave Claude and fair Rosamond can't help but win when backed by the strong arm of organized labor.

J. A. Prout of New York, international organizer for the Bookbinders' Union, with a special committee appointed for that purpose by Bookbinders' Union No. 16 of this city, is drafting a wage-scale and working condition agreement for presentation to the employers of Greater Boston. Mr. Prout says that no radical changes will be demanded, and that he hopes to avoid any trouble by working along conservative conciliatory lines.

Arthur M. Watson, secretary of the Carpenters' District Council and one of the most widely known labor men in the Commonwealth, is being treated at the Charles Street Eye and Ear Infirmary for a disease of the eye that the specialists there pronounce serious but not incurable. Although partially blind in one eye and while both eyes are affected, the specialists say that in time he will be wholly cured if no further complications set in while he is undergoing his present treatment.

With seven candidates nominated for the position and less than only one week away, a red-hot but good-natured contest is being waged for the office of vice president of the Boston Central Labor Union. William H. O'Brien has no opposition for the position of president.

"In the school and the ballot lie the hope of labor's future," declares Daniel J. Tobin, international president of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, speaking editorially in the current issue of the union's official journal. Mr. Tobin formerly resided in this city.

Ten thousand one hundred dollars in death benefits alone were paid out by the grand division of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers during the last thirty days reported on in their official journal just received in this city. Since first instituted the order has paid $640,681 in death benefits.

Calls are out for the quarterly convention of District Assembly No. 30, Knights of Labor Original, at Roughan Hall, Charlestown, one week from to-day. District Assembly No. 30, Knights of Labor Incorporated, holds its quarterly convention on the same day at Clyde Hall, No. 1001 Washington street.

Pre-convention sessions are being held at the Franklin Hotel, Worcester, to-day by the executive committee of the Massachusetts State Branch of the A. F. of L., and the credential committee, in preparation for the opening of their annual convention in that city to-morrow. The convention will be held in Hibernian Hall. A large number of local labor leaders leave this city to-day so as to be there in time for the opening exercises.

Although not scheduled to take place until Thanksgiving Eve, all arrangements have been completed for the annual ball of N. Y., N. H. & H. Freight Handlers Union No. 70, at Paine Memorial Hall. The affair is in charge of the following committee of arrangements: John J. O'Keefe, Daniel Mahoney, Timothy Regan, Timothy Callahan, Michael Twomby, Patrick Hayes, Timothy Donovan, James Galvin, James Tarpy and Jeremiah Murray.

Bartenders' Union No. 77 resumes its Winter schedule of meetings to-day, and from now on will meet twice a month, on the second and fourth Sundays. Rich and W. Garrity, president of the local, states that to-day's meeting is one of the most important held by that organization for months past.

Teamsters' Union No. 25 holds its regular meeting to-day, at which time a special report containing important recommendations from the local executive board, will come up for action. The committee requests all members to be present and record their votes on the recommendations.

Coremakers' Union No. 428 holds a big jubilee meeting and smoke talk at No. 995 Washington street Tuesday evening. It was [illegible] large turnout is looked for. Moulders' Union No. 106 holds a smoke talk the same evening and the Ladies' Felt and Straw Hatmakers' Union banquet also comes off on that date.

New England Branch of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance and Bartenders' League meets at the Hotel Franklin, Worcester, to-day, with representatives from the Boston locals in attendance.

Division B of the Shirt Waist Makers' Union, the English speaking branch, holds a special meeting at the Warrenton street rooms of the Woman's Trade Union League Thursday evening. More than a hundred new members have been added to this local within the last month.

Worcester Central Labor Union has voted to request the State Branch, A. F. of L., to create a fund with which to erect a monument over the grave of Representative James H. Mellen, who was one of the pioneers in the trade union movement in Worcester as well as an active worker for labor legislation when at the State House.

Machinists' District Council No. 10, made up of thirty local unions in this State, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, meets at No. 724 Washington street one week from to-day at 12 o'clock noon. The executive committee of the council meets at the same place next Saturday night.

Garment Workers' Union No. 1 meets at No. 724 Washington street to take action on important trade questions to-morrow night. The union officers desire a full attendance.

Dont Take The First Step Down!

It Is Easy, Even for the Best, but When You Come to Retrace It You Will Find That You Have Gone Farther on the Downward Road Than You Ever Dreamed You Could Go.

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

VERY slight is the difference between right and wrong—at first. A ship deviating from her course but a fraction of a compass point at the beginning will go far astray.

Often the difference between a human success and a human shipwreck is due to one wrong step in youth.

Often one temptation ignored or resisted will make a man's career for him. The same temptation, if yielded to, will make a failure of his whole life.

For most of us who begin life the way is laid down. We need not grope or hunt for it It lies in plain sight before us.

But one step off the path—one step down—and the whole maze of misleading pathways is before us. Some estrays go back to the right road, but it is hard, bitter work. Far better keep it once you are in it.

We build prisons and reform schools and insane asylums and poorhouses, largely for those who but for a misstep at the beginning might have been useful citizens.

The man who has never been tempted cannot understand the man who has been and who has yielded.

It is so easy to yield—the consequences seem so far away, so hard to realize.

The bank clerk who "borrows" a little money from his employer—how innocent the action seems at the time!

If he wins on the horse race he proposes to bet on, repayment will be easy, detection impossible. If he loses—well, he can save from his salary for a few weeks and make repayment before he is discovered.

But the first sum is quickly gone, and the borrowing of a second seems but a trifling affair.

Before he made up his mind to dip into the till the first time, he had to lie awake nights, bracing his nerve.

For a time his conscience made clumsy objections.

But after the first step down one's conscience becomes weaker. Finally it ceases altogether from troubling.

"Borrowing" a little more and a little more each time, the young man at last becomes hopelessly involved. Then there is nothing for it but confession or detection. After that a course in a penitentiary that makes him an accomplished criminal and a permanent enemy of all mankind.

So, too, with the drunkard. Taking the first drink is easy. One drink never lost a man's wits for him. And after the first debauch comes the same line of argument:

One "drunk" never hurt a man. Look at the successful men who are known to be hard drinkers. Nobody classes them as drunkards or avoids them because they sometimes take too much liquor.

And so the amateur drunkard argues, defending himself in each successive step downward, till the craving is in his blood and bone—till alcohol means life to him, the lack of it misery worse than death.

Down he goes, lower and lower. When his decent friends forsake him because his habits make him impossible, he finds others, more tolerant, but not so decent.

Presently he becomes obnoxious, even to these. Then he finds companions in the gutter, and sinks lower and lower, till perhaps the love of a heartbroken mother or a wretched and despairing wife are the only links that bind him to respectability.

Do they ever "come back"—the criminals, the drunkards, the worthless wretches who go wrong after the first step downward?

Sometimes. But if you could know how infinitely hard is the struggle to get back—how many obstacles must be overcome, how terrible is the suffering and how dreadful the contempt of untempted mankind, you would never want to follow in their footsteps.

There is nothing very complicated or very serious about existence, if you start in right and keep in the right way. Mankind is inclined to be friendly—to take you pretty much at your own valuation—to believe that you are honest and capable until you prove yourself dishonest and incapable.

The way to average success is easy, as the thousands of average men who have attained it will testify.

Take the man who runs the corner grocery store and who owns three or four houses in the vicinity. He earns enough money to support and educate his children. He lays by a little money every month. He discounts his bills, pays his debts and his taxes

Yet he is a very ordinary man—no especial talents, no exceptional intellect.

Success for him is easy, BECAUSE HE STARTED RIGHT AND KEEPS GOING RIGHT.

If early in his career he had met with a great temptation it might have been different.

Perhaps between him and the man behind the bars in the jail around the corner there is no real moral difference. Possibly the man in jail is even better equipped mentally.

But the man in jail didn't know enough not to take the first step down, and the grocer did.

When the grocer was asked to join convivial friends he declined. He dreaded that first step down.

The other man told himself that wherever a man went there was a way back. And he kept on indulging in this self-deceit till he discovered that although there was, indeed, a way back, his whiskey-blighted character was not strong enough to take it.

And so from drunkenness he took to crime, and went to jail. When he is out of jail there will be little left him but more crime.

For society, meaning in its heart to be sympathetic, is merciless to the man who has gone wrong. If he wants another chance he must wrest it from the unwilling hands of his brother men. They will never give it to him of their own accord.

Of course, if we might all be delivered from evil and led out of temptation during our stay on this planet there would be no drunkards, no criminals, no failures

But temptation exists, and sooner or later it must come to every man

It comes sometimes openly; sometimes in disguise. Sometimes it is in the form of seeming opportunity; sometimes it takes the guise of ambition.

Always it seems innocent—at first The first step downward never seems very harmful.

A country boy coming to a great city is warned by his parents to keep out of temptation; to do nothing that would make his mother ashamed.

He forms companionships thoughtlessly. He discovers that his new-found friends make the rounds of the gambling houses at night

The thing looks innocent so long as he does not gamble himself

"It is life," he tells himself "He never can be a real man unless he knows life."

Presently the lure of the thing gets him, and he risks a few dollars himself If he wins there is suddenly revealed the possibility of gain without work—the something-for-nothing bubble which thousands of gambling maniacs are pursuing through their wretched lives.

If he loses he thinks it will do no harm to make another try—just to get his money back.

In a month he is a confirmed gambler—and remember this, a confirmed gambler will do anything on earth to get more money to gamble with—lie, cheat, steal—anything. Honest gamblers do not exist, for gambling itself is an advanced form of dishonesty.

The first step down has made this boy a gambler. Good advice at first might have atoned for natural weakness of character. If he had stayed on the farm he might have grown up into a steady, prosperous farmer—a man respected by his neighbors and truly useful in the world.

But he took the first step down. The rest—to soul destruction and suicide—was easy.

Now, there are thousands of country boys who come to the great cities every year and who do not become gamblers or drunkards.

Far from that, they remain to do the work of the cities. Their country constitutions are equal to the tremendous tasks that city men often fail before.

Bringing with them honesty and character, they keep both intact. For them there is no first step down, and there can be no further steps without the first

Watch for that first step. Whether it leads to a pleasant afternoon in a barroom, where new and wonderful drinks are served and where the strange spell of intoxication seems to paint the world in rosy colors; in a gambling room, with its excitement and appeals to greed, or at a race track, where all humanity seems to be rejoicing, remember that it is a step down.

Go along as you are going if it is on the road to decency and honest ambition, and your way will not be difficult.

In the world are more people who will help than hinder you. You need thrust no one aside to climb into their places. There are plenty of good places unoccupied, plenty more that you may create for yourself.

But turn once aside and you tie a ball and chain to your foot—a load of sorrow and trouble that must be dragged for weary miles before you can shake it off, and, older and half as confident, begin life all over again.

Cares you must have, sorrows you must know. No man that walks the earth can hope to escape them.

But for every man there is a chance to succeed and to know more happiness than grief, and that chance can only be thrown away by taking the first step down.

CAMERA MEN BARRED FROM RACE TRACK BECAUSE THEY TOLD SECRETS

English "Beauties" Complain That Unposed Pictures Make Them Look Like 'Guys.'

ERRANT HUSBANDS SPOTTED

Jockey Club Raises Mighty Row by Banishing Newspaper Knights of Kodak.

By CHESTER OVERTON.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct 8.—The press photographers of London are preparing a petition to be presented in a few days to the Jockey Club in regard to a circular issued by the stewards of the club banishing the camera from the enclosure at all race meetings under their control. This order, which is the result of hundreds of complaints from men and women who have been snapshotted, does not refer to photographing horses, but only individuals.

The trouble originated at Ascot, where Lord Derby and one of the stewards of the club pushed a photographer aside, telling him to "get out of the way." The photographer responded with expletives. "Who are you?"

Lord Derby growled: "I'll soon show you," and he has kept his word. The other stewards are Lord Durham and Captain Greer.

The complaints have been due to several causes. Some famous beauties were caught in the act of looking at a horse with the sun in their eyes and have appeared as perfect guys in the newspapers. Then there have been cases of divorced men snapshotted with a casual female acquaintance as Lord and Lady So-and-So; while the ladies who told their husbands that they were going to sit with a sick friend found their photos in the half-penny papers next day walking with a man they had promised never to speak to.

Society Is Divided.

The Duchess of Roxburghe, who photographs badly, strongly favors the Jockey Club's action, but the Duchess of Marlborough supports the newspaper men.

Venice has suddenly become the vogue among Americans this Fall. Mrs. George Cornwalle West will go for the remainder of July immediately after the wedding of her niece, Miss Clare Frewen, to Wilfried Sheridan, on October 15.

The Duke of Marlborough had taken a charming house on the San Maurizio Canal, and because he is too busy to live there himself has rented it to Mrs. West, who intends to spend some time there writing a play.

The Countess of Essex, who was Miss Gerard, is another Venetian enthusiast who will go next week. The famous English beauty, Muriel Wilson, was one of the first society women to make Venice fashionable as a place of residence.

Among the many other well known Americans in Venice are the indefatigable Mrs. Arnaud Moore, who divides her time usually between London and Paris; the Princess Radziwill, formerly Miss Deacon, who goes everywhere with her mother, Mrs. Baldwin; the Perry Belmonts, who will return to America for the Winter; Mrs. Appleton, who entertains on a gorgeous scale, and Miss Vanna, daughter of the late Consuls, Duchess of Manchester.

Skating, Venice Fad.

The social centre in Venice is the skating rink, of which the acknowledged queen is Lady Helen Vincent, the sister of the late Duchess of Leinster, and who is considered a perfect type of English beauty and a remarkably clever skater.

London is in fact becoming deserted by Americans. Except Mrs. Anthony Drexel, who has given one or two luncheons and Lady Granard, who will be in town for part of the Parliamentary sessions, there are not likely to be many prominent Americans here for a month.

The American ambassador will give a special reception to American delegates on Thursday, at Winchester House. Mrs. Reid is expected to return from America on the 20th.

War Office and Aeronauts.

Colonel Capper, for seven years chief of the army's aeronautical department at Aldershot resigned on Saturday and Sir Alexander Bannerman of the Royal Engineers, succeeds to the post on Monday. Colonel Capper, for the past two years, has begged and implored the War Office to allow him sufficient funds to enable him to experiment with aeroplanes, but the Army Council persisted in its attitude of ignoring the importance of aerial scouting and it was left to the American Colonel Cody, now a British subject, to do most of the experimental work for the army. The ingratitude disheartened Colonel Capper.

The French army manoeuvres and the voluntary flights of Captain Dickson during the British manoeuvres, have at last produced the effect, and British officers who attended the French manoeuvres have personally interviewed War Secretary Haldane. The result will be seen in a few days at Aldershot, when haugurs will be erected for at least a dozen aeroplanes of different design.

STINGY NOBILITY WILL BE REBUKED

Tradesman to Entertain Children That Duchess Sent Supperless to Homes.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Next week there will be a scene of great gaiety at the beautiful little town of Arundel in Surrey, where the Duke of Norfolk, the premier peer of England, reigns supreme as feudal lord of the manor. A tradesman of the town intends to give a big tea party and a general treat to all the children of the district and behind this apparently fame announcement is a story of almost incredible stinginess or thoughtlessness, which has aroused the little town to a wild state of indignation.

Some weeks ago the Duchess of Norfolk celebrated the birthday of her baby son, the Earl of Arundel and Surrey, and requested that all the school children of the district be given a half holiday. The liberated children were then invited to spend the afternoon at Arundel Castle. Many of the youngsters came long distances to attend the promised and rare treat. After the children had played on the grounds for two or three hours the Duchess appeared and remarked:

"Now you can all go home and have tea and then come back here and run races."

The wretched children, tired, hungry and thirsty, were not offered even a glass of water. Of course, many never returned, but the few who did ran races. Then the Duchess, who had sent a footman to the bank to change a ten-shilling goldpiece into coppers, distributed the prizes, the first prize being sixpence.

The affair created such indignation in the town that the Mayor of Arundel, a tradesman, invited all the same children to a party which cost him $50. This rather deliberate hit appears to have had no effect, hence a second tea party is organized for next week. The Duchess was a daughter of the late Lord Herries and was raised in such genteel poverty that her friends say she cannot even now realize she is the wife of one of the richest peers in England at the present moment. The Duke, who is one of the simplest men and very kindhearted, supports several of his wife's relations. It is believed he knew nothing about the arrangements of his wife's famous children's party.

LONDON HEARS FIRST.

News of Portuguese Uprising Sent to English Capital.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—It is very interesting to note that the first official diplomatic news of the revolution and proclamation of a republic in Portugal was sent by the British minister at Lisbon to Sir Edward Grey of the Foreign Office in London. The contents of this dispatch were immediately phoned to your correspondent in Paris. The news created the most intense excitement in this city, where the poor King of Portugal has been a recent guest, enjoying a hunt and a hot honeymoon.

The young King made many friends in Paris. He was greatly admired by men and an especial favorite with the ladies. Many anecdotes of him are remembered in Paris. It is well known that he had the ambition to mount the throne. His great love in life is music and painting.

TO POLISH EGYPT'S NEEDLE.

Obelisk and Granite Pedestal to Be Examined and Cleaned.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Thorough examination is to be made by the London County Council's architect of the safety and present condition of Cleopatra's Needle, the thirty-second anniversary of the erection of which on the Thames Embankment has just passed.

It is supposed to have been erected at Heliopolis about 1500 B. C., was brought to London (after being lost in the Bay of Biscay on the way) in 1878, at the expense of Dr. Erasmus Wilson, who gave $50,000 for the purpose.

The granite pedestal on which the obelisk stands will also be cleaned by a chemical process. The obelisk, sixty-eight and one-half feet high and weighs 180 tons.

STANDARD OIL WAR STIRS ALL BRITAIN

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—English oil magnates say that the war declared between the Standard Oil and British oil interests will be fought to the last ditch. The feeling in financial circles is that the Standard's action is not hostilities will certainly destroy the confidence of the British investor in foreign oil and fuel undertakings. The fact is made all the more serious because it is known that in addition of an autumn boom big coin companies have been matured and are ripe for flotation.

The declaration of war will kill about a dozen new companies in which British capital is to be invested. The companies already floated and which will be the most deeply damaged number ninety, are operating mostly in Russia and represent a total of $100,000,000. Scotch interests will also be seriously damaged. The Standard is represented by the Waters-Pierce Oil Co. in Mexico, is carrying on hostilities against the Pearson interests in that country, and Lord Cowdrey is now in Mexico consulting with his chiefs as to the best methods of circumventing his American opponents. Cowdrey, to say the least, is considerably worried and soon will sail back to England, having heard that the Waters-Pierce combine expects to carry the campaign into his own particular preserves in his native land.

The developments between the British millionaire peer and the Standard's Mexican company are bound to be thrilling, as Lord Cowdrey has declared he will spend his last dollar to win the fight, and he has a good many dollars, too.

LORDS' REGILDED HOUSE.

To Become Most Splendid Legislative Chamber.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The House of Lords is in the hands of the decorators and builders, and the Peers will assemble after the recess in what may be described without exaggeration as the most magnificent legislative chamber in the world.

The solid brass outer doors of the House of Lords will glow with such glorious effulgency that they might be readily mistaken for gates of pure gold.

The crowns surmounting the two figures over the gates will also be regilded; while in the vestibule new gilding will be laid on in the delicate traceries and the white wonder of the stone effigies will be brought out afresh.

DREXEL WILL FLY IN MEET IN U. S.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct 8.—Young Armstrong Drexel left for New York to-day to participate in the eliminating trials for the aviation contests at Belmont Park. He said to the International News Service correspondent:

"I am making over my two racing Blerlots, as well as the fifty horsepower machine I used in the Channel flight. I hold on October 22 the actual race will be on the 29. I want to emphasize although I shall be in America only ten days and then return immediately to England. I want to be one of the American chosen for the actual contest. The British competitors are already in America, Grahame-White, Ogilvie and Raley. The French competitors Latham, Latham and Labouchere—leave Havre in a few days."

Mr. Drexel spent the last six weeks at Reuilion in the New Forest, where, with W. E. McArdle, he has at last got an aviation school on the lines of the famous one built by Count de Lambert. There he has three huge hangars erected with eleven Blerlot monoplanes. He has eight pupils at present receiving instruction. The course lasts merely six weeks and forty hours in the air are guaranteed. The fees of tuition amount to $400.

TAXI DRIVER'S REVENGE.

Deliberately Runs Down and Kills Policeman Who Caused Arrest.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 8.—Crowds promenading in the vicinity of the Zoological Gardens witnessed a taxicab approach at a terrific speed, making directly for a policeman who was regulating traffic with the result that the officer, having no time to turn aside, was knocked down and killed, his body being horribly mangled. The taxi driver, who was immediately arrested, is in a confession, in which he said that the policeman on several occasions had been instrumental in getting him fined and that he had determined to have his revenge.

London's Good Health.

LONDON, Oct. 8. The general health of London continues very satisfactory, the death rate varying but little. Last week it remained at 10.8, the three preceding weeks it having been 10.2, 10.8, and 10.8. For the four weeks ended last Saturday the rate was 10.4, being 3.0 per 1,000 below the mean of the corresponding periods of five years 1905-9.

DEMOCRACY WINS ALL OVER EUROPE

Dr. John B. Haynes of Los Angeles Finds Old Order Changing.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Dr. John B. Haynes of Los Angeles, is now in Paris stopping at the Hotel De France, after a long tour through Europe, for the purpose of studying democracy in the various European centres. Dr. Haynes says that every time the German Emperor opens his mouth he makes a thousand Socialists.

It is true that since the speech in which the Kaiser said he was Emperor by Right Divine, the Socialists have won nine elections in quick succession. So the War Lord is said to be somewhat worried. Dr. Haynes has been in Denmark, and he finds Copenhagen almost as, or more Socialistic than Milwaukee. He thinks Denmark is winning all round the line, and that John Richmond's prophecy that the House of Lords is doomed.

During his visit to various European cities, Dr. Haynes has been endeavoring to find some means of diminishing the terrible mining mortality in the United States. Roughly speaking, there are four times as many killed in American mines every year as in the average European country. With the Haynes party are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sartory, Mr. Smith, and Mrs. C. Porter, all of Los Angeles.

TRY NEW GUNS.

Weapon for Warships to Shoot at Aeroplanes.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Secret experiments will begin next week at Portsmouth with a new anti-aircraft gun which is to be attached to one of the new Dreadnaughts. It has been designed by naval officers to destroy aeroplanes at a great height. Experiments will now be at the head of a real live department, thoroughly understands the science of modern warfare. He becomes the Japanese army during the Russian war and has made a profound study of the subject of aerial flight.

SNAPSHOTS IN COLORS.

Royal Botanic Society Fellow Discovers a New Process.

LONDON, Oct. 8. A new method of producing photographs in natural colors, which promises to be a great advance on the process hitherto in use, has been discovered and perfected by Edwin T. Buttress, a Fellow of the Royal Botanic Society.

After many experiments with ordinary cameras Mr. Buttress has found that it is possible to obtain photographs in natural colors with an instantaneous exposure. A snapshot in color can now be obtained with an instrument no larger than an ordinary hand camera.

The finished photographs are produced on paper like the ordinary photographic paper. Photographs in natural colors have hitherto been impossible except on specially prepared transparencies.

CHURCH ST. HELENA BUILT

Believed to Mark the Traditional Scene of Sermon on the Mount.

LONDON, Oct. 8. From Jerusalem comes news of an interesting discovery on the Mount of Olives. Remains of an extremely ancient Christian Church have been unearthed in the grounds of the Convent of Peter Nostre on the summit of the Mount. The ruins are believed to be those of the church built by St. Helena, mother of the Emperor Constantine, who erected two other churches on the Holy Land, the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem and the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

It is believed that the site of the church marks the traditional spot where Christ preached the Sermon on the Mount.

MIKADO TRICKED BY GERMAN DIPLOMAT

Former Colonial Secretary Received With Honors as a Possible Chancellor.

By COUNT VON ELPBERG.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

BERLIN, Oct. 8. Unbounded amusement has been created here by the astute way in which the Mikado was deceived by His Excellency Herr Dernburg, the ex-Imperial Secretary of State for the Colonies. When Dernburg vacated his office this Summer and decided to visit the Far East, by means of indirect inspirations it was carefully and ruminatively conveyed to the Japanese embassy in Berlin that Dernburg had excellent prospects of becoming the next Imperial Chancellor after the fall of the present Chancellor Herr Von Bethmann Hollweg, whose term of office was expected to be brief.

None of Dernburg's chief friends whispered this important information into the ear of the Japanese ambassador by way of giving that diplomat an early and friendly hint of the trend of events in the Kaiser's capital. The Japanese ambassador conveyed the information to Tokio and none of it was taken by the Japanese Foreign Ministry. The result was that when Dernburg arrived in Japan he was received with truly royal honors. The Mikado almost bowed to him and all Japan was at his feet.

Dernburg had the time of his life. The amusing part of the hoax is that Dernburg's prospects of attaining the Chancellor post in the empire no longer existed the moment he reached Japan, and perhaps by some chance of being chosen by the Kaiser, but at the time of his resignation he offended the Emperor by saying in effect things in a newspaper interview. It is well known in court circles that his final influence with the Emperor after his resignation was limited to twenty-two seconds during which the Emperor said: "I am pleased to have seen you. All good bye."

Dernburg had no chance to say anything at all.

The Kaiser seems to bring bad luck to his favorites and proteges. King Manuel's fate is another addition to the already long list. For some time not much love was lost between Lisbon and Berlin, the reason for the Kaiser's displeasure being Princess Patricia's very intimate relations with England. Latterly, however, the Kaiser gradually changed his state of affairs, and he was busy paving the way for a rapprochement between Germany and Portugal with the intention of playing off Portugal against Spain as an ally of France and England, to the advantage of German trade in Southwest Africa.

King Manuel was invited to visit Berlin in August and was to have arrived in three weeks ago. The report that he was to marry the Kaiser's daughter, Victoria Louise, was not believed in Berlin, but it is said that Emperor William the Kaiser had taken the young monarch under his wing. Now he is a fugitive from his own country.

The instances of ill luck to those whom the Kaiser has favored are numerous. Quite impulsively during the Japanese war he decorated Kuropatkin and Stoessel with the highest Prussian order of the Black Eagle. Kuropatkin almost immediately after fell into disgrace and Stoessel a sad downfall quickly ensued.

The Kaiser's declaration that Zeppelin is the greatest man of the twentieth century was followed by disasters to all the Zeppelin airships.

The disgrace of the Kaiser's personal friend, Count Eulenburg, is still fresh in our memories.

The Parseval airship had made many successful voyages when the Kaiser summoned Major Parseval to bring the vessel to Potsdam. On this voyage the airship fell and was wrecked.

Dog Gets Gold Medal.

When the judges of the Canina Sebastian dog show awarded the gold medal to Miss Daneshevsky's "Paisley," the sportsmanlike young King Alfonso and his English Queen Ena were the first to offer their hearty congratulations. Then the Queen Mother followed the example of the royal pair and all [illegible] Paisley.

Queen Ena seemed to remark a similarity between the pure scamp "Paisley" and the Irish terrier which so pleasingly decorated the lap of the King Edward's dear dead. It transpired that both these terriers are of the same blood and [illegible] King Edward's faithful dog, by the by is now at Copenhagen with Queen Alexandra and he said to be still grieving for his dead master.

Miss Daneshevsky and her mother were spending the season at Biarritz when it occurred to them that "Paisley" might win a prize over the border. This she did, carrying off all the first honors and reaping the golden laurels for herself and her happy mistress.

All this, of course, was before the revolution in Portugal and the shakiness in Spain.

Unearthing a Tragedy.

Friends, relations and onlookers are worked up to a high pitch of excitement over an impending lawsuit by Mrs. Walker Fearn, a cousin of the late President Grant, to obtain, according to the terms of the property of her niece, Mrs. Wilkinson, whose mysterious death was the sensation of Paris some months ago.

If interest is now intense because very direct evidence of poisoning has been discovered the discovery, following so close on the attempt to poison Madame Claude Jean, the daughter of Dr. John L. Phibbs of this city and Seattle, has caused people to look to number of the previous cases in the usual way of getting rid of American women in Paris. The high standing of Mrs. Wilkinson's family, who belongs to one of the oldest families, is a presumption in her favor.

Seek New Evidence.

So far is the matter at hand to push the case to [illegible] trial, Mrs. Fearn and her daughter, Mrs. Barton French, have taken an apartment in No. 11 Avenue Victor Hugo. It is [illegible] that Mark Hewitt Wilkinson's fortune went to Count de Montgaillard and his family, connected by marriage with Mrs. Wilkinson through the marriage of her mother with the well known Mr. Mortimer Harris, and a part of that [illegible] Mrs. Walker Fearn [illegible] and the Count de Montgaillard [illegible] Mr. Wilkinson [illegible] the said [illegible] Mrs. Wilkinson [illegible] her death, [illegible] Mrs. Wilkinson [illegible] result, has [illegible] been discovered. Accusations against her are very grave, for the evidence goes to prove that she administered a fatal dose of morphine and strychnine to the dying woman.

Nurse Was Dismissed.

Miss Marshall was dismissed by Mrs. Wilkinson shortly before she died. The nurse then took refuge with the de Montgaillards. The chemist who filled the fatal prescription is also known. He lives in Avenue Kleber, directly opposite the dead woman's house. The physician who wrote the ordonnance is Dr. Fisher of the Avenue Montaigne. It has been learned that Mrs. Wilkinson was kept sequestered for some time previous to her death and that even her friend, Princess Marie of Saxe Meiningen, the aunt of the German Emperor, was refused admittance to the house.

Since the death of Mrs. Wilkinson, the Count de Montesquiou, who was once president of the Jockey Club, has died, but even so, Paris will not be deprived of its "cause celebre."

Asquith With Irish.

Premier Asquith and his minority are [illegible] to the cause of Ireland. Mr. Asquith said in his speech at Albert Hall [illegible] solution to the Irish [illegible] Charles Stewart Parnell [illegible] the his[tory] [illegible]

It took a [illegible] and much labor to wake up the British masses and arouse them against the House of Lords. It is [illegible] year that the tongues of flame [illegible] to leap through the heather. The masters of privilege, blind as bats, took no notice of the curling smoke and went calmly and contemptuously upon their way.

But each day the smoke and the flame grew thicker and stronger. Then came a wave of radical reform, the highest and strongest in all English history since the days of Cromwell, and that wave has swept the British and Irish democracies into a common cause against the hereditary House of Lords.

When Redmond found himself at the head of the pivotal force in the House of Commons he lost no time in self praise or in dreaming about what was to be done. He made up his mind to improve the situation to the utmost limit, and taking his sledge in hand, he went to work upon the red hot iron of his opportunity. Asquith, the prime minister, was at first inclined towards timidity and compromise. But neither timidity nor compromise was in Redmond's lexicon, and the prime minister was compelled to adopt a square, clear-cut attitude and policy upon home rule and the veto power of the Lords.

The Lords' veto must be shackled first, as all the majorities in the House of Commons [illegible] the peers is restricted.

Writing not long ago [illegible] American author of "Ireland Yes[terday and] To-day," Mr. Redmond said:

"The Irish people [illegible] more, perhaps, than [illegible] America [illegible] in existence. When I [illegible] not mean merely Irish [illegible] Ireland naturally [illegible] sentimental and material [illegible] as a whole, the [illegible] of the Irish movement for national self government.

DEDICATE ST. MARY'S GYMNASIUM OCT. 24

Leaders in Church and State Invited to Ceremonies at Cambridgeport.

THE members of St. Mary's Association of Cambridgeport are holding frequent meetings to further the arrangements for the formal dedication of their new building. The ceremony will take place on Monday evening, October 24. Those invited to attend as guests of the association are Archbishop O'Connell, Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald, Mayor Brooks of Cambridge, Senator Lodge, Senator Crane, Congressman McCall, the Catholic pastors of Cambridge and other prominent citizens of the University City.

General Thomas H. Barry, who is in charge of West Point, the nation's great military training school, is a native of New York, and a Catholic officer who worked his way up from the lower grades by his pluck, bravery and executive bility. He is still a young man, but he has been tried in various positions of trust. He has served in the cavalry and infantry in the Philippines, in the Boxer rebellion in China, and with distinction as commander-in-chief of the army of pacification in Cuba. As a patriot and soldier, Gen. Barry is a credit to his race, his country, and his religion.

Impressive Figures.

In his lecture on "The Church and the Family" Father O'Rourke gives some startling statistics. He said: "Statistics of the last census show that in Maine for every six marriages there is one divorce; Indiana for every seven marriages one divorce; Massachusetts, one divorce in every sixteen marriages, showing the predominance of Catholic teaching in this state, in Ohio, for every eight marriages there is one divorce; in Vermont, one divorce in every ten marriages. One marriage in every twelve in the United States ends in a divorce, and the present average is eight divorces every hour in the United States."

Orphans Cared For.

Twenty-seven children were received into the Harrison Avenue Home for Destitute Catholic Children during the week ending on September 29, and forty-two were placed in families or restored to relatives.

Judge Reappointed.

Judge James W. McDonald of Marlboro has been re-appointed by Governor Draper a member of the board of trustees of the Lyman School at Westboro in recognition of his efficient service during his term just ended.

STAGE DIRECTION IS OFTEN RESPONSIBLE FOR SUCCESS OF BOTH ACTOR AND PLAY

Producers, Authors, Managers and Stars All Take a Hand in Bringing About Perfection on the Stage.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

IT is not often that the quiet, virtuous routine of our theatrical life is ruffled by the presence of any of the giants of the drama who hang their hats in New York—at least, not until recently.

Strangely enough, however, for the past few weeks Boston has been something of an excursion point for the men in New York who pull the strings while actors in every city in the country dance to the pulling. It has not always been this way, for it takes no wide stretch of one's memory to go back to the days when we constantly stood at the front gate waiting for some sign that would let us know that the men at the throttle in New York really believed Boston was on the theatrical map.

But something has taken place. It is a dull week nowadays that doesn't yield at least one producing manager for a few hours, and last week we had two. Charles Frohman dropped in on Tuesday to see how Marie Doro was getting along in "Electricity," and on Monday George C. Tyler, the head, shoulders and waistline of Liebler & Co., ran in for a minute to see that "The Dawn of a To-morrow" was given a proper boost forward.

Besides Mr. Frohman and Mr. Tyler, we have enjoyed visits during the last two weeks from Lee Shubert, William Harris and William A. Brady, all of which indicates that Boston is now receiving certain personal attention which, under the former arrangement of theatrical things, was missing.

Curiously, none of the men of might took lodgings here. Each visit was simply an astonishing example of a quick "getaway," made possible by the excellent evening train service on the New Haven road.

The visit of Mr. Brady who worked in his shirt sleeves to whip "The Cub" into shape, and Mr. Frohman, who wanted to see for himselff what the exact matter was with "Electricity," recalls that the one phase of hard labor on the stage is practiced by the man who directs the rehearsals—and it is to be noticed that most of the big men of theatricals roll up their sleeves to this work themselves. During Mr. Brady's visit the stage at the Globe Theatre seemed like a factory working overtime. Mr. Brady has stage directors of his own, but he likes to feel the machinery move under his own guiding fingers. His efforts in the case of "The Cub" were wasted so far as Boston is concerned, for the play will retire from the Globe on Saturday evening.

MR. FROHMAN AS A REHEARSAL FIEND.

Mr. Frohman is something of a rehearsal fiend himself. Very few even among theatrical people, have any idea of the immense amount of time he spends at rehearsals. Not a single play appears under his management on the American stage that does not receive his personal direction at rehearsals. When the number of his stars is considered, also the number of productions which he makes without stars, it would seem that he had time for nothing else but rehearsals. It is no infrequent happening for him to direct three different rehearsals in one day. And this does not mean simply looking at a rehearsal. He is alive to every detail of the acting, every bit of stage "business," every reading of a line, and he will have the lines repeated over and over again until they satisfy him. He is usually keen, too, about the matter of dress in all of his plays. Not a gown, a costume or a suit is accepted until it has his personal approval. It is said of Mr. Frohman that at rehearsals he is patience, kindness and consideration personified.

But few people realize that Julia Marlowe is one of the brightest and most resourceful stage managers in the country. She is usually thought of as a splendid actress and a fine woman, but it is in stage direction that she does her most effective work. Miss Marlowe knows every line of every part in every Shakespearean play in which she appears. Not only does she study her own character, but every character in the piece and every effect to be made by all of those characters. She does not repress individuality; she does not try to bend a player absolutely to her own views, but she has a marvellous faculty for showing him clearly how to get the best out of every scene and every line. She will sit quietly at a rehearsal and in her own way speak each line with the players. Suddenly she will rise—a signal for the rehearsal to stop. She will take an actor in hand who has not caught the spirit of his character and deftly show him where and how he must change his style of delivery and acting.

Miss Marlowe has a curious way of dressing at rehearsals of plays in which she is to wear trailing gowns. She winds a sheet of white linen around her waist, so arranged that it will fall on the floor exactly as her skirt will fall in the play. She explains that she does this to accustom herself to the weight of the train.

Since Miss Marlowe and E. H. Sothern have formed their partnership the details of rehearsing their big productions have fallen upon Mr. Sothern, but Miss Marlowe is always on the side lines, loaded to the firing point with suggestions and advice.

"STRONG ARM" OF THE DRAMA.

Probably A. L. Erlanger holds the record for heavyweight stage direction. He is the strong arm of the drama at rehearsals of the K. & E. productions. Mr. Erlanger believes that the way to get to a thing is to get to it, and he conducts rehearsals in that style. To see Mr. Erlanger at a rehearsal you would think he was in a gymnasium, for he frequently gets down to business under a huge sweater. He treats the stage at a rehearsal as if he were an instructor in physical culture—at least, that is what the actors say.

The late Clyde Fitch, so far as his own plays were concerned, was a marvel in stage direction. He gave minute explanations in his manuscripts regarding every scene and situation, but the touches which he gave his plays during rehearsals were innumerable. Bits of excellent "business" would come to him on the spur of the moment and were immediately incorporated. He never lost either his patience or his temper with his players; he was perfectly familiar with the ability and personality of each before the first rehearsal. He, and he alone, selected his players from everywhere—from the Broadway theatres, from the variety houses, from schools of acting and from the ranks of amateurs. He was constantly on the lookout for personalities to fit his imaginary personages. Once he found a personality, his wonderful drill would do the rest. It is related that he once persuaded a well-known New York society woman to appear in one of his plays. She was just the type he wanted. He pleaded with her and he flattered her; he used every imaginable argument until she gave in. She made a hit, just as he knew she would, but she lasted only a month. At the end of that time she told Mr. Fitch that all her friends had been to see her act, that there was no longer any novelty in being on the stage and, besides, her engagement interfered terribly with her social plans.

FITCH STRONG FOR DETAIL.

Mr. Fitch was a stickler for detail. He rigidly demanded every "if" and "but" in his dialogue, and he demanded that they be given their precise value and exactly the right intonation. He regulated the gestures, the raising and falling of the eyebrows and the length of time a smile should be continued. Playgoers who have seen Fitch plays on first nights will admit that he obtained wonderful results. And it was due to patience, combined with a marvellous knowledge of the stage and an equally marvellous knowledge of actors.

The "wizard" among stage directors is David Belasco—at least, that is what the public has been calling him for years. Mr. Belasco probably spends more time on the proper production of a play than any other stage director living. He insists on detail and absolute perfection. For months before a production he haunts furniture stores, antique shops, curio places and the like, hunting for atmosphere. He directs his players a good deal after the fashion of Sousa directing his band—and he gets results.

George C. Tyler, who puts his finger into every Liebler production, although he has stage directors on his payroll, says that a man to succeed as a director does not necessarily need to be an actor. Mr. Tyler is not an actor, and he points to the greatest stage director of them all, Augustin Daly—he was a newspaper man.

* * * * * * * *

Among the new plays of the week, "The Lily" is supported by the biggest reputation. It will be offered at the Hollis, and Mr. Belasco will be here to enthuse the performance with the dignity of his presence. Of the plays that linger, "The Arcadians" continue as the musical sensation of the town, and "The Fortune Hunter" has hit a happy gait at the Tremont that keeps a constant line at the box office. "The Dawn of a To-morrow," at the Shubert is too good a play for the early season, but that may be overcome if the temperature falls.

Hollis Street Theatre.

David Belasco has an unbroken record of twenty-five years of success on the American stage. Small wonder, then, that the theatregoers from ocean to ocean have learned to look upon his name in connection with a play as a real stamp of merit. In his latest and biggest success, "The Lily," which comes to the Hollis to-morrow, Mr. Belasco has added more than ever to his great reputation. "The Lily" in the original French, was written by Pierre Wolff and Gaston Leroux. Mr. Belasco made the English adaptation and [illegible] who have seen both versions of the [illegible] say Mr. Belasco has improved materially on [illegible].

[illegible] cast this season is practically the same as that which [illegible] "The Lily" [illegible] Nance O'Neil is playing the [illegible] of "The Lily." Julia Dean is still the pet [illegible] little sister. Charles Cartwright is again the stern and selfish father. Alfred [illegible] plays the avaricious son. Oscar Eagle is the same lovable and [illegible] the family friend, and so on down [illegible].

Castle Square Theatre.

It is one of the best of Clyde Fitch's comedies that the John Craig Stock Company will present at the Castle Square this week. "Girls" is a light, airy, wholesome series of humorous scenes, centring about the experiences of three bachelor maids [illegible] are seeking their fortunes in New York and who vow that they will win [illegible] fame and fortune without the [illegible] of any man. Is it [illegible] that they find themselves [illegible] more than one man comes [illegible] and that long before the [illegible] the masculine element is as entertaining as the feminine? [illegible] will be the pictures of life [illegible] flat as portrayed by the [illegible] and charming also will be the three [illegible] maids and the other leading characters as they are represented by [illegible] Gertrude Shirley, Florence Shirley, [illegible] Colford, Marie Curtis among the women of the company, and by Mr. Craig, George Hassell, Donald Meek, Bert [illegible] Young, Walter Walker and Al [illegible] among the men.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

[illegible] McIntosh, who, for several seasons [illegible] making the success of his career in "A Gentleman from Mississippi," will present at B. F. Keith's this week a new sketch written by [illegible] called "Out Yonder." Another [illegible] same bill will be the famous [illegible], the extemporaneous comedian, always springing surprises on his [illegible]. Still another strong combination [illegible] Elphye Snowden and Earl [illegible] who won such popularity with [illegible] of 1910" and "Little Nemo" [illegible], another musical comedy favorite [illegible] with "Dick Whittington," [illegible] bill, and other features will [illegible] Brothers, in their wonder [illegible] work, Valerie Bergere's Play [illegible] "The Sultan's Favorite;" Merritt, the college boy from Ipswich [illegible] a new specialty.

Globe Theatre.

"Annie Laurie," a romantic drama of [illegible] life, will be the attraction at the [illegible] Theatre this week. The play, written by a Boston lawyer, has met with [illegible] wherever it has played, and with [illegible] cast and superb mountings there [illegible] little doubt that the engagement at [illegible] will prove popular. [illegible] the engagement of "Annie Laurie" matinees will be given on Wednesdays [illegible] Saturdays.

Grand Opera House.

Barney Gilmore, in "Kelly of the Emerald Isle," is announced as the attraction at the Grand Opera House this week, with an extra matinee on Columbus Day. "Kelly of the Emerald Isle" is a new play, written by Mina Shirley for Mr. Gilmore, and giving this young Irish actor, it is said, more scope for his abilities than any play in which he has been seen for some time. The role of Gerald Kelly, a lovable young Irishman, is that in which Mr. Gilmore will appear. Mr. Gilmore will introduce several new songs of his own composition. In his support will be seen Mina Shirley, Elsa Williams, Alva McLaran, Emily Green, May Eustace, William Morgan, George Germain, Ted V. Armand, Will Long, Jr., Maclyn Wood and Charles Peples.

Shubert Theatre.

To-morrow night Miss Gertrude Elliott will begin the second week of her engagement in "The Dawn of a To-morrow" at the Shubert Theatre. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The play is one which every playgoer should see. It is interesting from every dramatic standpoint and holds the audience in tense attention.

Boston Theatre.

"Girlies" at the Boston Theatre has realized and justified all of the promises that were made for it in advance of its coming. Frederick Thompson's big musical production with a huge presenting company and its score of novelties has scored about as solidly as anything in this line of stage entertainment ever disclosed to theatregoers of Boston and vicinity.

Park Theatre.

Marie Doro continues in her marked personal success at the Park Theatre with "Electricity," and night after night fashionable audiences are the rule to see her work in the comedy written especially for her by William Gillette. Charles Frohman has given her an unusually strong company for her support, and the staging under the painstaking care of the author is a model in every particular.

Colonial Theatre.

"The Arcadians," at the Colonial Theatre, continues with the large audiences which have been the rule since this musical comedy first came to Boston. London set the fashion, New York adopted it and Boston fell in line with great promptness and as a result [illegible] are being broken with uniformity, and hearty applause gives indications of its popularity.

Tremont Theatre.

Rural plays always seem to be enjoyed here in Boston, but it might have been imagined that all would be of the "hayseed" type. "The Fortune Hunter" has proved that this is not the case, for it is the story of life and love in a country village, and gives something entirely new in this line of entertainment. The marked personal success in the engagement is made by John Barrymore.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

There will be an entertaining programme at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. The flickerless feature display which is already widely known will be continued and several top-line artists will be in the vaudeville section.

The trips of the steamer King Philip to [illegible] grounds are as heavily patronized in October as earlier in the season, [illegible], probably, that the sport is just as invigorating.

Satellite Trips.

The steamer Satellite makes daily trips to the fishing grounds, where a day's sport may be found with the lines. Deep sea fishing is always popular with those who have once tried it.

MAY IRWIN, FARMERESS!

Rehearses in City, but Pines for the Country.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10. May Irwin, the farming actress, arrived in town yesterday.

Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson have been after her to come to town. They wrote a play for her called "Mrs. Jim," and they say it's about time she was playing it.

Miss Irwin wasn't any too well pleased at having to leave Irwin-Island in the Thousand Islands.

"Cheer up," said Kurt Eisfeldt. In addition to that, he is her husband. He promised she should have all the comforts of home, even if she was in New York.

"Very well," said Miss Irwin, at the first news stand she came to, "gimme Hoard's Dairyman."

The newsman stuck up his nose.

At the next stand, Miss Irwin said: "Give me the Farm Journal."

The newsman sneered right in her face.

At the third stand, Miss Irwin said, "Give me the Poultry World."

The newsman ran for a policeman.

At her own hotel, Miss Irwin called down to the clerk to get her the Country Gentleman.

He sent up a cigar.

Miss Irwin says they don't treat her right in this town.

MISS ROWLAND IS SAD.

Can't Find a Man to Dance with in New Comedy.

Miss Adele Rowland has an unusual complaint to make. She is singing and dancing in Sam Bernard's play, "He Came From Milwaukee," and she declares that it is as hard to get a stage sweetheart as to find one off the boards. Not that this latter could possibly mean anything to the young woman, but it is her own way of expressing the situation.

What it all appears to be about is that she had five men engaged to dance with her before the right one could be found to take a part in the new Casino play. Worst of all, she affirms, that the ordeal was so severe upon her that she lost twelve pounds.

You have heard musical high brows pour words of contempt upon rag-time. Of course you have, because it is the proper thing in high musical circles to look upon rag-time as an outcast child, motherless, fatherless and altogether be[illegible].

[illegible] Marie Doro [illegible] working about [illegible] music—Miss Doro is rag-time's [illegible] broad, liberal way, you're just [illegible] to listen to Miss Doro and believe [illegible] emphatically for [illegible] she is talking [illegible] atmosphere of the dullest classics with a reverence that makes George Cohan's love for "Grand Old Rag" compositions look [illegible] Miss Doro [illegible]

When Miss Doro [illegible] me that she loved rag-time I knew she was utterly human, and it was a joyous sensation to discover one friend of the higher musical classics that was not too timid to confess a liking for melodies that are sometimes barred in symphonic neighborhoods.

"Of course I love rag-time" she even repeated her words so there would be no misunderstanding. "It's just great—when it is [illegible], and we do get some good rag [illegible] and then. The reason musicians [illegible] take themselves seriously frown upon rag-time is not so much because they are so sure it is bad music as it is their mental inability to grasp it. You may not know it" and I frankly admitted that I didn't before she explained what it was "but rag-time is one of the oldest forms of music. Syncopated time—the lost beat that marks rag-time—is found in the very earliest of musical compositions. It is the tempo that thrills and arouses emotion as no other style of composition can. Rag-time, well written, of course, has a place in the world of music that cannot be displaced, and all the scoldings and frowns of the serious minded musicians can never crush it.

When I was studying music I had a perfect mania for rag-time [illegible] often amused myself during the les[illegible] instructor's piano. Of course I promised never to tell on him, and from pupil I became instructor on a minute's notice.

FITCH'S LAST JOKE.

Made Fun of Channing Pollock as He Sailed for Europe.

Channing Pollock, who has a number of successful plays behind him and several others that are soon to appear, told the other day of what is probably the final joke that the late Clyde Fitch made before he left America for the last time. It appears that Mrs. A[illegible] Marble Pollock, the wife of Channing Pollock, and who is now the press representative of the Hippodrome, had just completed a sketch that had been accepted and has since become well known in vaudeville. With justifiable pride Pollock told his friend Fitch about it.

"I am so glad" said the author of "The City." "It must be so nice to have one playwright in the family."

MANY NOVELTIES TO BE HEARD AT OPERA

Metropolitan Opera Company Offers Several Extra Series of Performances.

SYMPHONY SEASON IS ON

New Prima Donna Selected for Boston Performance of "Girl of Golden West."

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

If you were a subscriber to the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York and had your season tickets and felt assured of seeing all the opera that was worth while, since Hammerstein was out of business, how would you feel if you read the following announcements of things that will happen on evenings and matinees when the subscription tickets will not be good?

Premiere performance of "The Girl of the Golden West."

Series of Wagnerian operas on holidays and complete Nibelungen Ring on matinees.

Special performances of "Hansel and Gretel."

Series of ten performances by the Chicago Opera Company of modern French opera.

Series of classic operas including "William Tell," "Orfeo," "Der Freischutz," "Don Giovanni" at matinees.

Considerably more interesting performances on non-subscription occasions than on subscription nights.

All Kinds of Performances.

The Boston Opera subscribers will be given everything that the local company can give them. There will be popular priced performances to be sure, but these will consist of works already presented on subscription nights. The premiere of the "Girl of the Golden West" will be the only production of the season upon a non-subscription evening, and after the first performance the opera will be given on each of the various subscription nights in order that all may see it.

It is possible that Springfield and Providence may enjoy opera during the course of the season. A guarantee for two performances has been given by Springfield parties, and it may be increased to one evening a week for four weeks, while Providence people are endeavoring to raise a guarantee for several performances during the course of the season.

The Italian publishing house of Ricordi which controls all the operas of Puccini, as well as most of the modern Italian operas, prevented Geraldine Farrar from creating the role of Minnie, the Girl of the Golden West," which is to be produced at the Metropolitan Opera House in December. The Metropolitan management felt that an American singer should have the honor of singing the soprano role in this opera upon an American subject, but Ricordi decreed that Destinn should create it.

The Metropolitan Opera Company has been styled an opera trust, but the meek way in which it obeyed the mandate of the Italian publishers was not at all characteristic of a monopoly.

It was not expected that the House of Ricordi would interest itself in the Boston production of that opera, but it had done so. Alice Nielsen, a Western girl and [illegible] popular with opera goers, was expected to create the Girl of the Golden West in Boston. Her hopes have flown [illegible] from Milan comes the announcement that Carmen Melis has been selected to sing Minnie in Boston. The Boston management has concurred in this decision. Carmen Melis is a good artiste, but it is not likely that Henry Russell on his own volition would have selected her for the most important role to be performed in Boston during the coming year.

Miss Abbott's New Role.

The opera of "Ysobel," in which Bessie Abbott will star during the coming season, was written by Mascagni around the story of Lady Godiva of Coventry, who, as every one knows, rode through the streets of that town clad only in her hair because a tyrant had decreed she must do so in order to save her lover's life.

Such a theme presents no difficulty to the composer, but to the dramatists, especially the author, who has American audiences in mind, it offers insurmountable obstacles. Great curiosity has been expressed as to the manner in which these obstacles are overcome, and now it is learned that they are not overcome at all. The librettist has flunked, foozled, fallen down flat. Just as the ride is about to commence he rings down the curtain and the audience is asked to imagine the rest, with the assistance of Maestro Mascagni. Mascagni is famous for intermezzo. The intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" was written to connect two acts, nothing more. In "Ysobel" it is up to the composer to describe how the heroine, robed only in her golden tresses, traveled through the streets of the silent town.

If he makes his auditors see the picture he is successful. If he does not he has failed, no matter how lovely his intermezzo may be. It is descriptive music with a [illegible]

[illegible] Max Fiedler, who comes [illegible] is German exchange professor, [illegible] the music department of the University of Berlin and an authority upon musical matters in Germany. The Boston Symphony Orchestra last night opened its season with a Schumann program in honor of the 100th birthday of Robert Schumann. One of the last acts of Professor Friedlander before leaving Germany was to attend the opening of the Schumann Museum at Zwickau, the birthplace of the composer.

First Symphonic Novelty.

The first symphonic novelty of the season has been placed on Mr. Fiedler's second program to be played on next Friday afternoon, October 14, and Saturday evening, October 15. This will be Rachmaninoff's Second Symphony, in E minor, opus 27. When this eminent Russian composer was engaged for his appearance in Boston a year ago he expressed a very earnest wish that this Symphony should be put on the program instead of his symphonic poem "Toteninsel," but it was found that with the symphony and his concerto and the other works that Mr. Fiedler proposed doing, the program would be too long, therefore the honor of the first performance of this work fell to the Philadelphia Orchestra, which played it at its home concerts on November 26 and 27 of last year. It was later played in New York, and in both places it made as profound an impression as his "Toteninsel" did in Boston.

The soloist will be Francis MacMillan, the American violinist, who appears for the first time with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is well and favorably known in Boston through his appearance here two years ago in recital. He will play the seldom-heard concerto in A minor by Goldmark, which was last played at a Symphony concert in April, 1906, by Jacques Hoffmann of the orchestra. The other number will be the familiar "Oberon" overture by Weber.

Subscribers to last year's Symphony concerts in Sanders Theatre, Harvard University, have until next Wednesday in which to renew their subscription for the coming season with the guarantee of securing the same seats they had last year. No promise can be made that those who renew after that date will be able to get their old seats. Such seats as are unclaimed will be placed on sale at George H. Kent's University Book Store, Harvard Square, Cambridge, on next Saturday morning.

GERTRUDE ELLIOTT, STAR, MISSES HER HUSBAND

"It Was Not Easy to Leave Him, Nor to Quit England."

GERTRUDE ELLIOTT.

By GERTRUDE ELLIOTT.

It was not easy to forsake England, happily situated as I was at my sister's charming country-house in lovely Bushey Heath, with the children playing about and my husband serenely doing his best to obey their orders—to ponder upon going back anywhere—even to the America of my childhood's days.

But of course, I can never forget that I am by birth an American, a "State o' Maine" girl, and if it is true that "once an actress, always an actress," it is still more true, I think, that once an American always an American, however much one may love another country. And, like so many more good Americans, assuredly I do love England,—its peace, its poetry and repose—very much indeed. And I have good reason for it! Mother England has been very kind to me personally and as an actress, and she has given me a husband of whom I am glad to say my native land approves. Nothing could be more delightfully gratifying than their reception of him in "The Passing of the Third-Floor Back."

But in spite of my happy home-life abroad, my memory has often gone back to earlier days in America, where years ago I made my debut on the stage in "A Woman of No Importance," with Rose Coghlan, who, I am very interested to hear, is a prominent member of the New Theatre Company.

Some Amusing "Breaks."

An amusing thing happened that first night. I remember so well, my sister playing the delightful part of Mrs. Allonby was haranguing a group of women on the subject of the ideal husband, standing in the middle of the stage. Suddenly she stopped, and looked calmly round at the rest of us, waiting for someone to go on (never dreaming she ought still to be going on herself), when from the corner a small voice piped up reminding her of the next words. And I shall never forget the saucer-eyes she used on little sister for a second, and then went on with the scene. But the self-possession I felt the first night deserted me completely on the second night, when "Diplomacy" was the play, and I had to take my sister's slipper on the stage at a certain cue. I forgot the cue, forgot that I had to go on again till I heard them calling me, when I started to go on at one entrance, then, thought 'No, that isn't right," and ran up and down between the two. When I did go on, I found the two characters, mother and daughter in the play, with their backs turned to me, so I thought, I had better go off the stage, which I did, not realizing my mistake till the curtain had fallen, when my sister's agonized voice said "Gertrude, why didn't you bring my slipper on?" She had to stamp a bouquet under a shoeless foot, not to mention a gay little fandango executed with one shoe off and one shoe on, just to cheer the mother up. It was a frantic evening!

Another play that Miss Coghlan did was "London Assurance," in which she played Lady Gay Spanker, my sister played Grace Harkaway, and I played the maid, Pert. The next season I was in Miss Marie Wainwright's company, playing the ingenue parts, after which I joined my sister and Mr. Nat Goodwin in a repertoire of plays and went with them to London. Here I appeared as Midge in "The Cowboy and the Lady," and as Georgia Chapin in "An American Citizen," but on their return to the United States I was left behind to play the Princess in "A Royal Family" and Ethel Carlton in "His Excellency the Governor," by that exceedingly clever and witty dramatist, Captain Robert Marshall, who alas! has recently passed away in his prime. Then came "Lady Huntworth's Experiment," my engagement by Mr. Forbes-Robertson to play the leading parts in his autumn repertoire, and my marriage to him at the end of the same year—a very busy one! That was in 1900, the only date I can ever remember. There is a reason for it!"

Since then where he has gone, I have gone. And for the future! Well, we shall not be separated for long.

But the part of Glad in "The Dawn of a To-morrow" appealed to me so strongly that I could not resist the temptation of Mr. George Tyler of Liebler & Co., to appear in this fascinating character.

It is the most strenuous part I have ever played, though it takes much less out of one, so to speak, than if one had little to do in the piece—so much more interesting, therefore less tiring is it to be active than passive. Not that I am in the least fragile or delicate.

Wants to Join Husband.

As is of course well known, the character is an expression of the new thought which is helping so many people nowadays. I have seen people filled with doubt and fear till they discovered this faith, and realized the power of this gallant optimism. Personally I will never be pessimistic again! And there, it seems to me, is the real secret of the great success of Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's play: it is such a vivid expression of faith and courage.

Under the circumstances my husband thought it wise to give me a chance of appearing as a "star" on my own account so from behind the big planet will emerge I fear me, a very tiny twinkler.

Our tours in America are being booked by a thoughtful Providence on more or less parallel lines.

But I hope it won't be long before we are acting together again. For I want to play Ophelia once more to his Hamlet, Portia to his Shylock, and, whisper it very gently, I should dearly love to appear just once as Juliet!

And then—"The Rest is silence!"

ITEM FOR VAIN WOMEN.

Read It and Settle a Dispute Between Two Horrid Men.

There is no place in the world where woman's vanity comes to the surface and where feminine nature is better on display than in a photographer's studio, claims Jesse Lasky, who gleaned the material for his new sketch, "The Photo Shop," from several studios about town.

On the other hand, Albert Bernard is strong in the belief that a hat shop is the greatest place on earth to study idiosyncrasies of femininity. Here woman is her natural self, and realizing what a tremendous amount of happiness will depend upon the hat she wears, and dreaming of future conquests, she quite forgets to be upon her guard.

BELASCO IN EVENING DRESS AT THEATRE

Always Faultlessly Attired; a Different Person From Belasco at Home.

David Belasco, in a big loose dressing gown, feet encased in roomy, comfortable slippers and his great shock of snow white hair uncovered, is an altogether different figure from the David Belasco the public knows. At night when the famous "wizard of the stage" attends a performance at one of his own theatres or the theatre of some other management, he is invariably in correct evening attire. In fact, he wears evening dress every day after 6 p. m. He goes to his dinner that way. It is force of habit with him. And he insists that all the employes of his theatres or companies wear evening dress when on duty. If, at one of his own theatres, he has found a flaw in the performance, he hurries to his studio in that particular theatre at the final fall of the curtain, leaving word, meanwhile, for the members of the company to wait in the stage for him for a minute or two. In an incredibly short space of time he has rushed from his studio to the stage "dressed for work," as he terms it.

Magnetic Personality.

He is a wonderfully magnetic man, is this Mr. Belasco, the closest student of the stage in the world to-day. He is the man who has revolutionized theatrical performances. He is the man who is given to the stage "atmosphere" and the kind of "realism" which goes without "scenery chewing" and bombastic, flamboyant speech. All he asks of his actors is that they act and walk and talk like human beings. He will put in the quiet, deft little touches which strike home so appealingly to the world of theatregoers. And there is no man known to the dramatic profession who will work so patiently and with such good results in perfecting a scene in one of his plays.

When he appears on the stage "dressed for work," he has mapped out what he wants to do—what he means to change. We will say, for instance, he is attending one of the first performances of "The Lily." There is not the slightest hesitation. The flaw he has discovered in the play is laid out for dissection and "rearticulation." If the flaw is in a scene in which three or four or even half a dozen players appear, Mr. Belasco recites the lines of each role in absolutely correct order.

Will Go Through All Parts.

He will give the old lines new intonations, he conveys new meanings by facial expression and gesture, and he gets an entirely novel effect into the scene. His is an almost uncanny figure in his peculiar working dress as he darts about the stage. Under that wonderful heaped-up shock of white hair are the two keenest, brightest black eyes that were ever set in human head. The players watch those eyes as a hungry hawk watches a young rabbit. In those eyes can be read every slightest transition of feeling inspired by the lines of the play and the effect he wants to give those lines. He knows every line in a play before he begins to rehearse it, so it is never necessary for him to carry a rustling manuscript about, hampering his hands. He has studied the play—every possible angle—and he knows at the first gathering of the players for that company just how he wants each scene to be played.

AMBITIOUS MISS PALMER.

Is Going to Desert Musical Comedy to Uplift Legitimate.

Clara Palmer of "The Deacon and the Lady" has gone on record to the effect that she is going to desert musical comedy for ever and ever.

"I feel that I have graduated from the ranks of musical comedy and am worthy henceforth of a place on the dramatic stage," she says. "It is said that an actress only becomes great through suffering. If suffering were the only necessary requisite to mold a dramatic artist then the majority of those serving time with musical comedy would surely be fitted for dramatic work.

"The way of the musical comedy chorus girl becomes gradually more and more difficult. Each year she must add something new to her work; not only is she required to dance well, she must have a voice and a cultivated one, at that, and she must also be something of an actress. The demand made upon one in the straight dramatic field is not nearly so exacting."

PIGEONS ACT IN NEW PLAY.

Audiences at The New Theatre, New York, are much mystified by the way in which the live pigeons used in the production of "The Blue Bird" are controlled without injuring them. Before the play opened the officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals were asked to inspect the method by which this was to be done, and it met with their hearty approval. The pigeons are supplied with a jacket which fits over the body and under the wings. This is attached to a ring which slips over the finger of the person holding the bird. In this way several may be held by a single person. In the "incantation scene" the birds seem for some minutes to be dead, then, suddenly, they come to life with a vigorous flapping of wings. Just how this is done The New Theatre does not disclose, but it assures the public that the birds are not hurt in any way.

ABRAHAMS STAR OF DOG IMPERSONATORS

Has Won Triumphs Here and Abroad in His Animal Portrayals.

David Abrahams, who in the role of Blitzen, the pet dog of Prof. Oscar Spiel (Joseph Cawthorn) in "Girlies," is one of the distinct "hits" of Frederic Thompson's big musical show is without question the most famous animal impersonator on the stage. He has enjoyed the position of eminence in his particular field of endeavor ever since his portrayal, quite some few years ago, of the cat in the original London production of "Dick Whittington."

One of his big triumphs was the playing of the squirrel in "Little Nemo" as originally planned. The part was afterwards cut from the cast, and so Boston theatregoers had no opportunity of witnessing one of the most amusing and at the same time one of the most skilful bits of animal impersonation the American stage has ever know.

Abrahams is an Englishman, whose age could never be determined by his face; he might be twenty and he might be forty. He weighs in the neighborhood of 100 pounds and silence is a habit with him. To hear him say more than three words at any one time has come to be considered an unusual privilege.

His love for animals and an almost uncanny knowledge of their habits and mental movements—particularly of domestic animals—is in a great measure responsible for his adoption of his present peculiar calling. As a faunal naturalist he would in all probability make even Theodore Roosevelt appear as an amateur.

Vanity has no part in the make-up of the diminutive Abrahams. He is an actor, who has been appearing in roles of comparative prominence for years, and yet, because of the costumes with which the characters he portrays are necessarily clothed, it is doubtful if any one of the thousands of theatregoers who have laughed at and applauded his efforts would know him were the actor to be encountered face to face in broad daylight. For some reason Abrahams has an antipathy for photography with himself as the subject. Portraits of him, except in his all-covering stage costumes, are as rare as his sentences during a conversation.

"MANAGING" IN 1832.

Historian Relates Some Professional Woes in Early Days.

William Dunlap, in his "History of the American Theatre," published in 1832, wrote very interestingly of the conditions in the theatrical business of that time. In speaking of the annoyances to which the theatrical managers were subjected, he dwelt strongly on the frequent applications of would-be authors to have their plays produced, and amateur actors who desired to enter on a professional career. He said: "Sometimes the applicants are vexatious and sometimes ludicrous." He relates the following story of a young man applying for a position:

"Are you the gentleman that takes in play-actors?" asked a youth of seventeen or eighteen, slender, awkward, neatly dressed in a short bole jacket, striped waistcoat, pantaloons of nankeen and half boots. The reply was: "I have the direction of the theatre."

"Do you want any actors?"

"Any person of extraordinary talents would find employment. Do you know of anyone wanting to engage as an actor?"

"I want to go on the stage myself."

"You! Did you ever attempt to go on the stage?"

"Only at the Academy."

"You are an American?"

"Yes."

"Where were you educated?"

"At Goshen."

"What plays did you perform in at the Academy?"

"Why, we played the Catos, and Tamerlanes, and such."

"And what did you play?"

"I palyed Cato and Balazet—and in the 'Bold Stroke for a Wife' I played the Colonel. I was the biggest boy, and so I played the biggest parts."

DROUGHT IN TEA.

Newest British Importation Has Her Troubles in New York.

Wish Wynne, the clever vaudeville artist who recently came from England to make such a good impression at the American Music Hall here, has been having a difficulty that probably many other actresses from the British Isles have experienced. She wants her tea at 5 o'clock each afternoon and she finds it hard to get. The other day she told several of her new American friends of some of her experiences. She would leave the theatre after her matinee performance and seek a tea place. Sometimes she went west and landed in some strange restaurant where they wondered what tea was.

Again she would go toward the centre of town and find a restaurant where they let her off at about "five shillings for a cup and a muffin." She has some pride in being able to take care of herself, and it was only after several such experiences that she confided to a friend that she would like to be shown some place where she could get a cup of tea in the afternoon without causing astonishment or the demand for immense prices.

TOLD BY ROBERT EDESON.

Wonderful Manager Who Talked Instead of Paying Big Salaries.

Robert Edeson, who is now appearing in "Where the Trail Divides," was talking the other day with a friend about a theatrical manager who was prominent some years ago. Mr. Edeson said:

"Well, there was one thing about him; he was a wonderful man at painting rosy futures. So capital was he at this game that if he had possessed the same ability as an artist in oils, he would take a young actor and talk to him about the glorious future that was in store for the young man and dilate so wonderfully on the unquestioned ability of the youth that when the finish came the boy would accept any sort of salary, so enthused was he by reason of the descriptive powers of the manager."

"Yes," replied Mr. Edeson's friend, "that's very true, but the strange part of the whole affair was that the picture was never finished."

PICTURE ACTRESS WAILS.

No Inspiration in the Work, Declares Pearl Bickford.

Those who complain of the hardships of stock work should take a course in moving picture stock work, declares Pearl Bickford, who is at present engaged by one of the large moving picture concerns to act before the camera.

"An ordinary moving picture stock company is required to give two productions each week and two performances daily. The actors must study two new plays each week and provide new costumes for each, but that isn't all. The performance they must give before an unresponsive audience is most unsatisfactory and wearing. There is no spontaneity, no return of applause for their labor, which soon gets to be a sort of drag. There is a lack of force and thrills to spur one on, and where a woman can play in stock year after year, about two years of moving picture stock work will finish the average actress."

"LITTLE DAMOZEL" IS WORTH SEEING

Alan Dale Finds New Play by Monckton-Hoffe Far Out of the Ordinary.

By ALAN DALE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—In that "mythical island of social democracy where 'pals' and 'chums' abound" Mr. Monckton Hoffe has laid the scenes of a cunning little play, that was produced at the Comedy Theatre, under the title of "The Little Damozel." Pictures of the purely imaginative realm known as Bohemia, where the men are all bad but lovable and the women all worse and more lovable, led us there unconventionally and somewhat charmingly. And if we were sent home, at the conventional ending, with i's dotted and all t's crossed—we were unable to rebel.

For it is not safe to be consistently unconventional, and playwrights, after all, are working for the many and not for the few. And the many prefer to go home, knowing that all the tangles have been unravelled, and that He has married Her, and that they will live happily ever after. They won't, of course, but the playwright must not hint at this.

There is a good deal of unusual material in "The Little Damozel." It has a "plot" that is out of the ordinary. What I liked about all these characters was that they all spoke out, and concealed nothing. The "waster," who has been paid $75,000 by the villain to marry the little damozel—whom the villain once loved, and to whom he wrote damaging letters—gives the whole thing away in the second act! The lovely girl who is to marry the villain discovers that the "waster" has previously been engaged to her. She instantly gives it all away.

Is a Short Play.

In the last act the little damozel is told that the "waster" is going to commit suicide. Instantly she tells him what she has heard, and gives away her authority. There are no cross-purposes. There is none of that inane concealment that makes a play, with three acts, last for five. What they have to say, they say. There is no beating about the bush. That was quite refreshing.

"The Little Damozel" was so short that to eke it out a musical program was rendered by a sextette from the Russian Symphony Orchestra. Delightful! I did not hear the Russian Symphony Orchestra, because I went out [illegible] ... "blings" of a play.

There [illegible] make it [illegible] "The Little Damozel" [illegible] plays now on the [illegible] con-densation [illegible] Monckton Hoffe's. This is the principal situation, and it [illegible] The waster who has been paid $75,000 by the villain to marry [illegible] permit this villain to marry [illegible] And it was Sally whom the waster [illegible] loved—ten years before, and [illegible] separated by [illegible] circumstances."

Heroine in Black Dress.

After that the little play became conventional. Julie left the man whom of course she had learned to love, and appeared in the next act actually dressed in black! Honestly, the black dress almost demolished the unconventionality of "The Little Damozel." How much a little stage manager as Edward Fitzgerald [illegible] could have prevented Miss May Blakley to come a [illegible] wronged dress suggestive of deepest melodrama is a mystery. I suppose that in the hearts of all stage managers there is a secret admiration of tradition [illegible] that prescribes black—pure black—for every woman who goes out into the night. Even a white satin ball dress would have been less [illegible] than this. I herewith beg Miss May Blakley to remove her black dress and to trust us to believe that a woman could suffer even in pink!

One episode in "The Little Damozel" amused me immensely. It was Sally's discovery of her fiancé's identity by means of his cigarettes [illegible] of these [illegible] years before [illegible] never [illegible] when she sees [illegible] these cigarettes terribly [illegible] Finally she is so mystified by the aroma of the weed that she picks up the box from which [illegible] taken and recognizes her own gift to Recky seven years before.

Cut Out the Tobacco.

To know a man by his cigarettes is a novelty. To hate a man for his two-for's is much more plausible. The detection of Zicka in "Diplomacy" by the perfume of her gloves is easy compared with the unmasking of Recky by the scent of his cigarette. What was the brand? Why didn't the program advertise it? What sort of cigarette smoke is it that lingers in the nostrils of a sweet girl for seven years? I am never unduly jealous, but I should love to know this.

If "The Little Damozel" ever carries weight, well, I shall be careful what you smoke when you are whispering sweet nothings into the ear of Dulcinea. Better avoid tobacco altogether. It is more moral and less dangerous.

There was some particularly good acting in "The Little Damozel." It is a long time since New York has seen such an excellent actor as George Graham. Mr. Graham [illegible] the part of a humorous Bohemian [illegible] absurd things and he played it beautifully. "I once loved a girl who loathed me so that she used to shiver when I came near her," was one of his many absurd things that tickled. But in the last act when Mr. Graham becomes serious he was just as good. And his curtailing was perfect. He made a distinct hit.

So did Cyril Keightley as Recky. It was a sterling performance, and it got "between the surface." Frank Lacy, Henry Wenman, Harry Fraser and [illegible] were all wonderfully good. Miss May Blakley played the heroine, and she was better in her emotional than in her lighter scenes. For the small part of the servant was well played by Harry Child.

"The Little Damozel" is worth seeing. Everything is worth seeing that is a bit out of the ordinary.

MISS SNOWDEN TO MAKE HER BOW HERE AT KEITH'S THEATRE

ELPHYE SNOWDEN.

MISS SNOWDEN IS NOW ON STAR LIST

Do you remember the pretty girl who danced so gracefully in the weather factory scene in "Little Nemo" two seasons ago? Well, she's in Boston again, this time a full-fledged vaudeville star. She is making her first vaudeville appearance in Boston at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week.

"I suppose you know this is my first venture into the two-a-day field," declared Miss Snowden, "but there really isn't much difference between vaudeville and musical comedy nowadays. In fact, some of the biggest successes in which I have played during the last three years have been nothing but vaudeville shows with a thin [illegible] The managers take a number of clever vaudeville artists [illegible] throw with a chorus of pretty girls, gorgeous scenery and charge the public just twice as much as they would have to pay to see the same acts in a regular vaudeville house."

DANCING HARD WORK.

Theatre Audience Doesn't Realize the Years of Study.

Marme Gebrue, whose authority on the subject of dancing is indisputable, declares that while dancing is an art of the highest type it is also manual labor of the hardest kind, and combines the vocation of the man who builds the house and the artist who paints pictures to hang on the walls.

"I often wonder if there are many who realize what it means when a woman comes out on the stage and gives some pretty little dance that seems all simplicity and naturalness," she says. "I wonder if they ever stop to think that it has taken years of hard work and study on the part of the artist to be able to appear at ease?

"The trials of a dancer, after learning the art, are many. The most graceful woman may be able to do a wonderful dance of her own creation, and when she comes to rehearsal the stage director will have ideas of his own which he wishes her to follow. Of course, she must obey instructions, and then, in the majority of cases, she is going to be awkward.

"It is rather discouraging after a woman has trained for years and worked to a point where some degree of confidence is felt to have to undergo the annoyance of having some one, whose experience has been gained for the most part in training buck and wing and chorus dancers, tell her she doesn't know anything about her work and must learn something. The path of the dancer is strewn with anything but roses."

IS NOW AN ACTRESS, ONCE GIRL REPORTER

Eleanor Stuart of "The Deserters" Studied Types While Taking Daily Assignments.

Eleanor Stuart, who portrays the character of Molly, a frequenter of the San Francisco slums, in the second act of "The Deserters," was formerly a newspaper woman, and in her quest for types has visited and made a study of many of the famous "dives" of this country and Europe. Some time ago she wrote a series of articles for a prominent paper [illegible] the types she found in the slums of New York with those seen in the [illegible] district of London.

"While 'The Deserters' was under rehearsal," said Miss Stuart, "Mr. Harris, Sr., was present one day when some argument came up concerning Molly and the way she should act. I ventured a suggestion with which Mr. Harris did not agree. 'Those women do not act that way,' he said.

"'I think I ought to know,' I answered. 'I believe I have been in every "dive" between San Francisco and New York.'

"'Good,' he exclaimed, 'I had no idea we had that kind of a woman in the company.'

"But the study of these women has been a very interesting one; there is all the difference in the world between the types found in America and those of London. Over there they are far more degraded than in this country; there seems to be no limit to the depths to which they will sink; but in America they draw the line. For instance, their business seems as well to be to lure others on to drink and dissipation, while they themselves usually manage to keep a sober head."

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1910. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1910

DAY OF THE DEBUTANTE BRINGING GLADNESS AND JOY TO THE SOCIAL SET

Happy Maids Make Plans for Functions to Follow in the Wake of the First Preliminary Events of the Season—Beauty to Reign Queen of Younger Element, and Gowns and Hats Will Play Most Important Part in Pleasures of the Winter.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

THE "day of the debutante" is close upon us, and rarely in its social history has staid old Boston produced such a gay and alluring array of fair young damsels as will come trooping before us, demanding and commanding the attention of the whole social world, within a very few weeks.

Already the older members of the smart set are sizing up the situation and pleasantly prospecting as to which of the buds will carry off the laurel leaf for beauty; which will be the first to announce her engagement, and which will excel in the matter of elaborate frocks and lavish entertainment. Such a lot of beauties as they are and such gay times as they are having already, getting into line for the whirl ahead, it is only to be hoped that the realization will bring them half the joy that does the anticipation.

For they are plotting and planning to make their season the most brilliant ever, and there is hardly a doubt of their ultimate success.

I met a group of these happy maidens the other day in town seeing to the details of some of their gowns and chapeaux in which they will grace the earliest of their functions.

During the first portion of the budding season their affairs will be, for the most part, sub rosa—just a preliminary canter, as it were—to give them a chance to try their wings before bursting into the full glory of debutantes, when they will be most formally introduced at either a large ball or reception and tea.

One of the first of the buds to bloom—formally—will be pretty Miss Dorothy Thatcher, who will make her initial bow on the first day of December at a tea which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Thatcher, are to give in her honor. Mrs. Thatcher will also give a ball for her daughter a little later in the season and, judging from present prospects, festivities in her honor will follow thick and fast. Her ball will take place at Copley Hall on December 12.

A debutante who will take first place among the beauties of the year will be Elizabeth Thomas, daughter of the Isaac Rand Thomases, whose formal bow will be made at a ball to be given in her honor at the Somerset two nights later than Miss Thatcher's ball.

She is a dainty, slender bit of a miss with pretty brunette coloring.

Her frocks are bound to be in the most exquisite taste. She is popular as well as pretty. She is an expert horsewoman, one of the finest in the exclusive New Riding Club, and she plays golf and tennis with some of the most expert of our amateurs and is, besides, an excellent linguist. Her brother is Arthur Thomas, who married Betty Bliss last Winter. The Thomases have been passing the Summer at Buzzard's Bay, where they occupied their handsome villa, "Crow's Nest," and where much entertaining was done in honor of the prospective debutante.

Another winsome debutante who will make her debut at a Somerset ball in December will be pretty Katherine Ayer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer of Commonwealth avenue and Pride's Crossing. Miss Ayer has spent part of the Summer with her parents at their pretty Summer villa on the North Shore. She was also a guest at the home of her sister, Mrs. George S. Patten, Jr., who was a bride of the early Summer and who, upon returning from her European honeymoon, went to reside in the West at Fort Sheridan, Ill., where her husband is stationed. The Ayer ball will take place the 29th of December.

A debutante who gives promise of being among the most feted girls of her set is pretty Edith Prescott, daughter of Mrs. Linzee Prescott of Gloucester street and a favorite niece of Mrs. Roger Wolcott. She is a distinctly attractive girl with a petite, graceful figure and winsome manner. Her gowns, too, will be among the handsomest worn by any bud, as I hear they are all to be imported, Miss Prescott and her mother having been abroad all Summer and at last accounts in Paris busying themselves with ordering the frocks for the coming season. Miss Prescott will no doubt carry off the palm for popularity.

Conspicuous among the beauties of the year will be Miss Lillian Sears, the pretty blonde daughter of Herbert Sears, who is giving a large ball for her at the Somerset on December 8. Miss Sears has had a delightful Summer of it and is bubbling with enthusiasm over the prospect of such a gay Winter. She has been for part of the season in Europe, where she ordered some dainty frocks, and the rest of the Summer has been spent on the North Shore, where she has been enjoying a foretaste of the many joys to come. Mrs. Bryce Allan, Mrs. Preble Motley and Mrs. Guy Norman are among her numerous relatives who are planning some brilliant festivities in her honor.

Miss Marian Lovering, a cousin of Miss Sears, is also to be introduced this season, and as the girls are the best of chums, they are planning that many of the hospitalities given by relatives will be shared jointly. Miss Lovering is charming and winsome and is her cousin's close second in point of good looks. She is a daughter of the Charles Loverings.

A girl who one social prophet declares will carry all before her is that interesting young miss, Helen Hooper, who, as young as she is, bears the distinction of being the wealthiest heiress in Boston society. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, and is at present at her Manchester estate, where she plans to remain until the latter part of the month. She will be introduced formally at a ball to be given at the Somerset late in January. Miss Hooper's pretty head isn't turned in the least, despite the fact that she is pampered and petted and has at her command all the best the world can give. She is bright and clever and has a strong interest in philanthropy.

UNCONVENTIONAL PHOTOGRAPH OF LEADING SOCIETY WOMEN

MRS. REGGIE VANDERBILT — ELLANORA SEARS. PHOTO BY G. F. RADWAY.

TWO of the most conspicuous society women at hte Brockton fair the past week were the much-heralded Eleonora Sears and that charming young matron, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, Jr. Miss Sears may be said to be always where the Vanderbilts are, and is always on hand to drive their entries and show them to the best possible advantage. Her engagement to Harold Vanderbilt is a pretty generally accepted fact, though as yet, no formal announcement has been made. There is one thing sure about it, however, and that is that the Vanderbilt family is more than pleased with the choice of young Harold. Mrs. Vanderbilt is a most attractive young woman and her devotion to her husband and her home are quite remarkable for one in her set, where the social demands usually make such a drain that there is little time left for the demands of the home. Though Miss Sears's people have returned to their house on Beacon street from their Summer home on the North Shore, Miss Sears will not be settled in town for some time yet as she is to make a round of visits on the North Shore and in New York.

They were married by the Rev. Charles Page of the Dudley Street Baptist Church. This was an unusually pretty home wedding with about seventy-five friends and relatives present. A reception until 10.30 followed the ceremony. Autumn leaves banked by palms formed the decorations, and a [illegible] furnished music for the evening. The bride, who is a petite [illegible] blond, was radiantly beautiful in an exquisite Spanish lace gown over messaline satin. Her flowers were bride's roses. The liveliest three-cornered fight for the office of president general of the D. A. R. is being waged by the supporters of Mrs. William C. Story, Mrs. Donald McLean and the present incumbent, Mrs. Matthew Scott. The seventy thousand members of the society are being deluged with campaign literature from the three rival camps. Following the indorsement at the State D. A. R. conference at Cooperstown, N. Y., of Mrs. William C. Story, the opposing factions began to sharpen their weapons to defeat Mrs. Scott, who desires re-election. The faction, which Mrs. Donald McLean has successfully headed for some time, dubbed the rival faction to which Mrs. Story, the defeated candidate at the last election, belongs, as the insurgents. The Story faction vehemently resented this title and officially declared themselves as the conservative wing of the organization. Mrs. Donald McLean, former president general, who as Mrs. Scott's campaign manager, helped to elect her, announced Mrs. Scott's candidacy for re-election some time ago.

Mrs. E. B. Everett is planning to close her cottage on Old Fort Point, near West Manchester, about the 10th of October, when she will return to her town house at 33 Fenway.

"GOD OF CAR" CONSPIRES AGAINST CITY

Smart Set Members Now Privileged to Spend More Time in the Country.

Slowly Drifting Back to Open Their Town House for the Season.

THERE was a time, and that not far past, before automobiles were so popular, when [illegible] October found three-fourths of the fashionables settled in their city houses for the winter and the remaining fourth in process of moving.

But now the latest prophet of the time, not far distant [illegible] society, like the [illegible] will make the country place [illegible] abode, instead of devoting [illegible] to the maintenance of a town house which is occupied, on the whole, [illegible] more than three months out of [illegible] and in most instances not that.

The eight or ten weeks following the Christmas holidays are coming to be the real and only social season in town and so for that length of time the fashionables will, in the future, so the prophet says—take apartments at some hotel. Then the spring will [illegible] in Europe, the midsummer at the seashore, the Autumn in the mountains and the remainder of their time at their [illegible].

In this way the problem of paying the ever increasingly high rents and servants' wages will, to a certain extent, be solved, and the worry and care of maintaining a town house for a short period eliminated. They will all, or, rather, they have all, well appointed country places within easy reach of the city by automobile and for the few weeks in the city they will take the sort of apartment which requires fewest servants. When not entertaining at some exclusive restaurant they will be dining out and when the wife is abroad the husband will make his headquarters at his club.

Return to Town Delayed.

Although now nearly all the large houses in the fashionable Back Bay are as empty and deserted as though it were midsummer, there are a few who have already come reluctantly back to [illegible], in most cases either to prepare for weddings in the family or to [illegible] from in school.

Dr. and Mrs. Francis B. Harrington who spent the Summer at Ipswich, came back to town the past week and are at their residence on Beacon street for the Winter.

Mrs. Charles H. Dalton is also one of the earliest of the fashionables to return to town, and has closed her Beverly Farms estate and opened her house on Commonwealth avenue for the Winter.

Mrs. E. C. Swift of the North Shore has rented her Summer home "Swift Manor," Pride's Crossing, for another season, as she intends making a tour of the world. Her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Moore, who are also well known on the North Shore, will spend some time in Washington this Fall and Winter and will then go to England, where they will join Mrs. Swift.

The Alexander S. Porters, who spent the Summer at their villa at Campobello, [illegible] their town house on Brimmer street, Monday.

Remain in Country.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Thayer, their two winsome blonde daughters, the Misses Evelyn and Nora Thayer, who were presented last Winter, and Miss Natalie Thayer and John E. Thayer, Jr., who are at their country place in Lancaster, will remain there until after Thanksgiving, when they will occupy the Charles E. Mason house on Exeter street for the remainder of the season.

The Frederick Cunninghams, who have been at Newport for the season, have closed their villa there and are now at their home in Longwood.

Mrs. William G. Weld is planning to conclude her Newport season this week and come in to her town house on Commonwealth avenue.

The Preston Gibsons are planning to close their North Shore villa the middle of the month and open their house in Washington for the Winter.

Dr. and Mrs. Franklin Dexter returned from their Pride's Crossing villa Monday and are now at their town house on Marlboro street. They are planning to make frequent week-end visits to their seashore home.

Dr. and Mrs. Maurice H. Richardson have closed their season at Marion and have opened their town house on Beacon street.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel S. Simpkins will keep their North Shore villa at Beverly Farms open all Winter, as they did last year, varying their season with frequent trips to Washington.

Mrs. Sylvester Tower and her family have closed their season at Manchester and have returned to their town house on Commonwealth avenue.

Dr. and Mrs. William Appleton of Beacon street have left Newport and are at present in New London, where they will remain several weeks prior to coming into town for the Winter. While in Newport they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George B. deForest at the Tralu villa.

Miss Georgiana G. Eaton, who has only recently returned from Europe, is at the Victoria, while her home on Commonwealth avenue is being made ready for her occupancy.

Young women need not sacrifice their health. Dr. Greene's Nervura will give them strength. The beginning of womanhood is a trying time on body and nerves. Dr. Greene's Nervura supports both, it enriches the blood. You won't hear of "blood tonic" women among those who rely on this great medicine.

MISS CHARLES GRIFFITH, 293 East 104th St., New York City, says:

"I thank God for Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and what it has done for me and mine. I feel it is a duty I owe to every mother to let them know what Dr. Greene's Nervura has done for my daughter Lucretia. "A few months ago I was in a bad condition. My blood was impure and I had an awful headache. My nerves were all run down and I was a bad sufferer from nervousness. I felt tired all the time and had no appetite. I was induced to take Nervura by a friend who had used it with the most wonderful results. I felt few weeks after I began taking it that it was helping me, and before I had taken one bottle I could see a marked improvement in myself. I continued to take it and in a few weeks was entirely well, and I know it is all due to Dr. Greene's Nervura."

Why not start right. It is the most important time in your life. Mothers, take heed of your daughter's welfare. Don't let them go blindly into the mysteries of womanhood. Get Dr. Greene's advice if you are puzzled. Give them the benefit of your own experience. Strengthen them with Dr. Green's Nervura and write or call for Dr. Greene's advice at 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass. It is free.

Famous "Pint of Cough Syrup" Recipe

No Better Remedy at any Price. Fully Guaranteed.

Make a pint of cough syrup by mixing one pint of granulated sugar and ½ pint of water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of pure Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a pint bottle, and fill up with the sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint supply of the best cough syrup at a saving of $2. It never spoils. Take a teaspoonful every one, two, three hours.

The effectiveness of this simple remedy is surprising. It seems to take hold instantly, and will usually stop the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. It tones up the jaded appetite and is just laxative enough to be helpful in a cough, and has a pleasing taste. Also excellent for bronchial trouble, throat tickle, sore lungs and asthma, and an unequalled remedy for whooping cough.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) is a prime favorite in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, though never successfully. If you try it, use only genuine Pinex, which is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this recipe.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Corset Bulletin

MADE IN NEW YORK — Nemo CORSETS — HEADQUARTERS

BRANCH NEMO FACTORY STUTTGART, GERMANY FOR THE EUROPEAN CONTINENT

BRANCH NEMO FACTORY BRISTOL, ENGLAND FOR THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Vol. I NEW YORK, OCTOBER 9, 1910 No. 4

Did You Know This?

Nemo inventions constitute the ONLY real improvements in corset-making, here or abroad, during the last twenty-five years.

There are over sixty patents on Nemo Corsets—many times more than on all other makes combined.

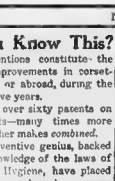
Original inventive genius, backed by expert knowledge of the Laws of Fashion and Hygiene, have placed Nemo Corsets in a class alone, secure from competition.

Ask for the Nemo.
ACCEPT NO OTHER!

For Short Stout Figures

Our New Reducing Corset

Nemo No. 522, with its wonderful Lastikops Bandlet, never had an equal as a figure-reducer, and has proved the greatest corset success of the age. But it isn't quite suitable for a short stout figure; so we have made a new model—



No. 523 at $5.00

—especially for stout women who are short-waisted. Has Nemo $5.00 the same Lastikops Bandles; NEMO REDUCING No 523 WITH LASTIKOPS BANDLET low bust, long hip; fine white coutil, sizes 20 to 36—$5.00.

No. 522 is a similar model, but for tall or medium stout figures—$5.00.

No Substitute for Nemos

Nemo Corsets are sold everywhere at fixed retail prices which give the dealer a living profit and you a great money's-worth.

If any dealer tries to sell you another make when you ask for a Nemo, it's probably because that other make gives him more profit—and you less value.

Lastikops Hose Supporters

Every Nemo Corset (except the few $2.00 models) is finished with Lastikops Hose Supporters, guaranteed to outwear any corset.

Wonderful New Results in Corset-Making

By the Use of the New "Lastikops Webbing"

"Lastikops Webbing" is our newly-invented elastic fabric, which we can make with ANY DESIRED DEGREE OF ELASTICITY, and which will wear for months without losing its elasticity.

Nemo "Lastikops" Corset, No. 330, for SLENDER women, has two broad bands of this Webbing which banish all dangers of tight lacing, prevent that perilous "bearing-down" feeling, and make a slight form really sylph-like—$3.00.

Nemo "Self-Reducing" Corsets, Nos. 522 and 523, for STOUT women, have the wonderful Lastikops Bandlet, made of the Lastikops Webbing, which produces the greatest figure-reduction ever known, with increased comfort—$5.00.

There is no reason why ANY woman should risk her health to improve her form, when a Nemo Corset will give her an ultra-fashionable figure with absolute safety and ease.

THE NEW Nemo LASTIKOPS CORSET No 330 $3.00

Favorite Nemos at $3.00

Many thousands of women who do not require extreme figure-reduction still prefer the old favorites, Self-

Reducing Corsets Nos. 318 and 320 —and no wonder, for these corsets are a great value at a popular price.

No. 320 (see cut), for tall stout women, has low bust and under arm, long skirt, Nemo Self-Reducing Straps. No. 318 is a similar model, but higher bust and under arm, for short stout figures. Both are of fine white coutil, sizes 19 to 36—$3.00.

Paris Corsetieres Copy Nemos

(Louisville Courier-Journal, Mar. 20, 1910)

The foremost French corset manufacturers who export to this country are now eagerly copying such Nemo inventions as are insufficiently protected by the rather futile French patent laws.

For Tall Stout Figures

Nemo No. 405 comes next to Nemo No. 522 in figure-reducing power. Has the famous Relief Bands, which give much support from under-neath; perfect figure-control with absolute comfort and safety. Sizes 20 to 36—$4.00.

No. 403 is a similar model, for short stout figures—$4.00.

Nemo No 405 $4.00 SELF-REDUCING RELIEF BANDS

THE LAUGHING SATYR

"The Laughing Satyr" is the story, "The Veil of Clay," which was published in the London Daily Mail, and was one of the most widely read stories in recent years in England.

By META SIMMINS,

Author of "The Angel of Trouble" and "The Bishop's Wife."

(Copyright in America by London Daily Mail, 1910)

SYNOPSIS OF THE PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

Richard Jardine, a sculptor, has his studio in Watergate street, London, and his way to it lute one might be prevented Beatrice Charters from throwing herself into the Thames. She tells him that she was driven from a good position in a private family by the son of the house, who paid unwelcome attentions to her. Jardine takes her to his studio to put her in the care of his housekeeper.

While they reach the studio Jardine finds he has a visitor and leaves Beatrice for a few minutes. When he returns he finds her over the body of a distant relative of his friend Stuvesant, who turns out to be the man Beatrice fled from. The girl has a bloody s pel in her hand and Stuvesant has been stabbed to the heart.

To save Beatrice, whom he thinks has killed Stuvesant, Jardine puts the body in the hollow of his clay statue, "The Laughing Satyr," on which he is working. An artist friend, Dominic Fleury, Stuvesant's brother and Mrs. Constance Kowles, Jardine's sister, who was engaged to marry the dead man, all call at the studio seeing news of Stuvesant. Jardine tells them all that Stuvesant had left after a short visit with him.

The Laughing Satyr" grins down on the sculptor until Jardine resolves to move the body. When he breaks the clay coating the body has disappeared. He reads in an afternoon paper that a man answering the description of the dead man had been found in the Thames. He goes to the morgue and identifies it

At the funeral of the murdered man a beautiful red-haired girl makes a scene, saying that the body was that of "her Jim," who had promised to marry her.

After the funeral Constance finds her brother in his studio holding in his hand the duplicate of a dumbbell used to weigh down the body of the murdered man in the river. She thinks he has killed Stuvesant, and goes home to write a letter to the police denouncing him.

Mrs. Stuvesant calls and gives Constance the dead man's cigarette case. She opens the case and sees the picture of the red-haired girl who appeared at the grave. Then Constance tears up the letter to the police and leaves the fragments on the parlor floor. These are gathered by Mrs. Stuvesant and placed together by her later.

At the home of Jardine's studio and they are discussing the murder, when to-day's instalment opens.

"I?" Fleury echoed. "Good heavens, no; I"—He turned abruptly to the window. "Let's drop the subject, there's a good chap. It's not wholesome."

There was something in voice and manner so chilling, so unfamiliar, almost forbidding, that Jardine's nerves got the better of him. He took a step after Fleury and gripped his arm.

"You have formed some theory," he said huskily. "Your manner shows it. What is it? Yours got to answer me, Dominic; you've got to answer me."

Fleury turned and looked at him quite tlemingly. The extraordinary heat, the almost incoherent emotion which Jardine had spoken apparently took him completely by surprise.

"What on earth d'you mean? What are you excited about?"

"I am excited," Jardine was blazed, "because by Heaven, it has to be the matter out—I believe that more than by suspect me! Why should you say it was strange he was last seen here alive?"

Then as Fleury still looked at him with that air of doubtful surprise, as if actually too taken aback even to deny a statement so monstrous, Jardine broke out again in that strained, unnatural voice that had indignation in it and something that was almost fear.

"Dominic, you must speak. You can not for a moment imagine I had anything to do with—"

"What Fleury Saw

Fleury's eyes had left Jardine's face, they were fixed with a strange, arrested intentness on the old fashioned concave mirror that hung above the mantelpiece between the windows and commanded a view of the street behind them both. When he spoke it was with a curious, hushed note of awe.

"My dear Jack, what a muddle nonsense you talk. It is almost laughable. Am I a Sherlock Holmes . . . I suddenly have answered my question."

For a moment Fleury's eyes met his with a determination so dogged as his own. Then, with a little laugh:

"Really, my dear chap, you're displaying some of the characteristics of a first-class idiot," he said. "Do you forget that I was there when Stuvesant telephoned to you from some call office?"

He gave Jardine's shoulder a little friendly pressure as he turned away. But there was a look on his face that to Jardine seemed to make that speech more bitter than even accusing silence could have been.

CHAPTER XIII.

The New Crux

"So this is the end," Richard Jardine spoke the words aloud, and the sound of his own voice breaking the awful silence of the room roused him to a sudden knowledge that the studio was very cold and dark save for the faint red glow of the fire that had burned low in a layer of embers in the old fashioned grate.

He could not have told how long he had been sitting with the palms of his hands to his head, trying to explain to Beatrice Charters the inexplicable when she asked, as inevitably she would ask, for an explanation of the body she had overheard. And this was the result of all his thought—the final effort to find a laborious plausible denouement to the end had come.

"Yes, that is the only way—but oh, my God, how ghtly!" he told himself, as he stood staring into the fire. "For any good start to build up fantastic theories as to how or where Lewis Stuvesant met his death?"

There was something in his tone that jarred on Jardine's nerves, as though this man, who had been his friend, had struck him across the face with the open hand.

"I—Dominic, you don't deny ill You do suspect me?"

His sharp entreaty broke abruptly; a sound in the room behind him had startled him to a moment's horrified silence. The sound of a woman's frightened cry that grew as he turned angrily to see it followed by the sound of a fall. Beatrice Charters, standing there in the doorway with her hands to her face and body stretched, groping hands, had fallen forward a huddled heap across the threshold of the room.

The Look of Accusation

"Miss Charters!" Fleury started forward to offe assistance of the fallen girl. But with a grip on his arm, Jardine held him back.

"Stop! You must not—you can not for a moment imagine—Am I a brute, Fleury? Do you think I killed Stuvesant?"

For now there was a new motive behind him. It was not for himself that he sought for the truth. He must know before that merciful, obliterant mercy sentence lifted from the mind of Beatrice Charters her memory of it.

With an effort Fleury shook off his detaining hand.

"It is a bloodletting sad, Jack, he said roughly. "Let Miss Charters be looked to."

TO LITERARY ASPIRANTS

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

My Dear Young Lady. You write me that you are about to enter upon a literary career, and you ask me for a offer of good advice and counsel. You thank me in advance for any suggestions I may offer which will better enable you to win the car of the public, the good favor of the critics, and the gold of the publishers. You ask me, in short, to tell you how to get the newspapers talking about you, so as introduction to the public, and by doing so to create a demand for your signed work a work which you believe will create a sensation in literary circles, and that you are fired with ambition to be the mingled storm of condemnation and praise sure to be called forth by your bold, daring, but not honest utterances.

Now it is quite necessary for you to do is to find out your own motive in choosing a literary career. If you write as the young birds sing, you need no advice from me. For the great cause is back of your thoughts, and your object, be it fame or gold, will be secondary. If you feel a call to say through rocks, and nothing can hinder you.

But I may have merely a well defined desire to write a book, and to stand well in consider this step.

Is your motive a selfish one toward humanity? The author should be alive to it, strive, entertain, guide, or amuse his fellows. Otherwise he has no right to expect their attention. Have you merely a gift for amusement, let him keep his manuscript out of the printer's hands. He who publishes a book makes a choice to be appreciated, and you had best die forever at once than write and publish a book of a paltry public over attention and attraction.

If it is your duty to write a book be sure you will you fail nor be a comfortable one. It is evident in writing life during the first ten years of literary journalism even in solitary cases of remarkable genius literature requires ten years of apprentice ship, at least, before reaching the supreme of its follower.

In regard to the practical method of getting your work before the public, let me beg of you not to go to any well known author, asking him or her to "read or criticise, correct and . . . publish."

If such a thing . . . entered your head, remember that . . . of the heads of . . . of critics . . . and the poor author is . . . well weeks . . . not one . . . which he has . . . time or inclination to read them he could not sell them. No editor will read a book by request. He will through the advice of any author however famous.

Write your MS. on one side of the paper only, and if possible have it copied by a typewriter. Talent is too plenty, and editors too busy to peruse illegible MS. though a poem written across it in search of something they may find your manuscript will receive attention far sooner if it is typewritten.

Do not imagine because you feel strongly that you can write acceptably. Mere zeal and exhortation are not talent. To be elderly it is given to few to the few to express what many feel.

Do not imagine you will have an easy entrance of success in literature if you just send begun your career twenty five years ago. The world was never so full of literary talent as to-day. Competition is fierce to a degree that makes the public be higher than ever before, and all this tends to survive more difficult for a new-comer.

Do not attempt to adopt the style of any author. I guess you can feel that you can be yourself or will not try to be self. A poor original is better than a good imitator in literature as in all other things.

Expect no aid from influential friends in any way. The more wholly you depend upon yourself the more you will succeed.

It is absolute nonsense to talk about "influence" with editors and publishers. If your work attracted a passing fame or success in literature through influence or favoritism it would not last.

As editor might be influenced to accept one article, but he would never give permanent patronage through any influence save merit.

Newspaper notoriety cannot make or unmake a reputation in literature; if it comes unsought it may and you to a certain extent, trust. But the cheap methods of personal advertising in the daily papers which many literary aspirants and parents in those days aim, you will only disgrace. It is natural that the newspapers should wish to make use of items of interest concerning successful people, but when you have to force yourself into print, for advertising purposes, you do not gain by it, as a woman and a writer.

If your story or poem makes a sensation, it may cause the papers to talk of you, and that you cannot help; but if you cause the papers to talk it will never make your story or poem a success, and can only rest a reflection on your good sense and good breeding.

Remember that literature is the most uncertain of all professions, and that one success may be followed by ten failures. The public is capricious in its tastes and the editors are obliged to cater to this capriciousness. Your articles may be in demand to-day at your own prices, and, although you may not be able to say, "why does not this author give us a little respite?" and if you write seldom the critics will declare you are "written out" and the public will forget you.

If your object is fame, and you desire to be happy as well as famous, then arm yourself in steel armor, fill your heart with lead, and avoid reading all current periodicals, that you may not feel, fear or heed the brutal assaults forever dealt to the successful. Otherwise, you will die ten thousand deaths before your hours. Let the critic write on your forehead:

Seen from a distance, fame may seem to be a thing to be desired in the abstract sense, wherein sun jongs to sell. Let fame alone, and you will find it a prairie fire, consuming, or scorching all that is near it, and leaving a desert before you high and dry. Let it alone, and you will find it a well of water, and feel great with thoughts, and your object, be it fame or gold, will seem at the last of some suffering to yourself, if you regard fame as an incident, and money an object you will be willing to wait and labor for and be content with the slow but sure reward of merit, you will find yourself a fine tree, with your own branches, your own fruit, your own shade, and your own birds singing in your leaves, and you will be glad about by those who are unable to walk in your shadow.

You will bear your most original work and your greatest, and your cleverest sense of humor published, and your latest dramatic efforts will be those who have never read what you wrote.

But all this will not discourage, though it may sadden you: if you are worthy of your calling, you will go on and find happiness in the midst of it, and you will not be hindered or delayed by the babble of the ignorant, the sneers of the jealous or the malicious.

But, my dear young lady, the work you have undertaken upon, will not create a sensation. You are an author to be sure, and now the brains of their readers, and their unlimited brains of critics, into conclusions of terror, are the authors who never popped and who will never pop.

Work which affects the world like this must have in it something of the eternal, and write on the truth and young expression, and so be proof against the critics, who have not a member that they exist. One owes it the forth your native brain to humanity.

But, be sure that you do help, and harm humanity. To the author, of all men, belongs the motto, "Noblesse oblige." The pen may be used as a weapon with which to defend the right, but it was never intended as a bludgeon with which to assault people, or wound individuals. Neither was it intended as a lancet to pierce the bodies of weaker, with which humanity may suffer for what we need not know, in effect a sore but spreads a contagion.

But, you reserve your talents for their highest and strongest uses all of . . . and being loud, you . . . your profession. . . . You . . . have the picture that comes from creative power of expression, the satisfaction of fulfilment. You . . . will be . . . a greater love . . . it is higher reward . . . than . . . But with all these joys, you must accept and endure the mortification of . . . not . . . but what will . . . you . . . to serve . . . a mistake, published . . . interests, misunderstood by the stupid and . . . appreciated by the envious. . . . But if . . . advance . . . public will . . . make your success . . . and if you submit . . . fully you will bear the coarse accusations . . . of the . . . performance leading you as a sneaker after notoriety, a . . . of . . . If . . . the contrary . . . a . . . doors . . . the . . . and power . . . its . . . you will bear yourself . . . and . . . and . . . the honors . . . forced upon you. You must . . . never . . . to . . . and . . . to those who . . . at the same time strive to imitate you, and you will be led about by those who are unable to walk in your shadow.

You will bear your most original work and your greatest, and your cleverest sense of humor published, and your latest dramatic efforts will be those who have never read what you wrote.

Little Home Helps on How to Be Beautiful

By MADAME MAREE

MAKING A MASSAGE CREAM.

A reader writes from Portland, Oregon, "The cream massage cream you recommended to Myrtle K. is the one I have used." I am exceedingly careful in advising any remedy, and in the first course to learn that these simple home remedies are helpful. While most massage creams are costly and hard to make, readers of this column will find the one I prescribe inexpensive and equal to the finest on the market. To make it, use three ounces of orris crystals from your druggist and put into a pint of water that has been brought to the boiling point; stir until dissolved and put into a glass jar. This cool orris is not greasy and will not grow hair, while it feeds the tissues, eliminates blemishes, removes wrinkles and blemishes, frees the pores from blackheads and gives the skin that soft, velvety glow of youth.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Dora: Brushing the scalp vigorously will not cure dandruff nor stop falling hair. You must wash your head shampoo every other week for a while and a tonic every day for a month, then once a week. I do not care for shampooing, as it removes dandruff and feeds the germ. For a tonic, I would suggest bay rum, which any druggist can supply. To eight ounces of grain alcohol add the same amount of water and two ounces of bay rum. A faithful use of these two will promote a luxuriant growth of hair and keep the scalp clean and healthy.

Miss B.: Nature intended women should have a plump well rounded figure, but the method you employ is ineffective, as massage will not develop it. The best way to develop the delicate tissues and muscles is by exercise. Your figure can be improved by making a simple syrup with a pint of water and a cup of sugar. Boil until you get just a thick syrup. Take a tablespoonful three times a day. This is the best and most effective remedy I know of for scrawniness and underdevelopment.

Mrs. Y.: I wouldn't advise the electric peeling, as it is too painful and costly. I have suggested the delicate treatment in many cases and it actually removes an old skin as it actually removes an old skin and does away with all superfluous hair. (2) Don't despair because of red hands and rough skin. Stop using powder and prepare the following: Get two ounces of mutton tallow from your druggist and dissolve it in a pint of hot water. Use this lotion on the face and hands and the redness and roughness soon disappear. Then you will have a pink and white complexion such as nature intended.

last," he said, as heartily as he could, as though it were the most natural thing in the world that she should visit him at such an hour. "You have no idea how I have been longing to show you my studio, and I believe it looks its very best by firelight. It was so wise of you to come if you could not sleep—but perhaps I should hardly say that," he added, hastily, "because you are an invalid still, and these stairs"——

She interrupted him with an abrupt vehemence.

"Please don't talk like that to me now," she said. "You must know why I have come stealing up here like a thief at such an hour, Mr. Jardine. To hear the truth—all the truth you have kept from me so long."

She caught at the back of the chair to steady herself. Jardine saw that she was trembling violently. The slight of her agitation seemed to serve as a control to his own.

"You must sit down," he said authoritatively. "Indeed, I cannot listen to you unless you do."

Almost to his surprise she obeyed him, sinking into the chair and looking up with dilated eyes, her hands nervously clenching and unclenching

"Do I sound ungracious—oh, I know it is out of kindness that you have deceived me—the most wonderful kindness! But why did you do it? To have known the truth at once would have been infinitely less bitter than this awful awakening."

She Believes in Him

The pain in her voice thrilled Jardine's nerves, but his tone was scarcely when he spoke, indicating only the faint surprise he might be expected to experience at her words

"I am afraid I do not quite understand you," he said gently.

Beatrice looked at him impatiently—wondering. But only his profile was turned to her, that rugged, almost ugly profile, with its attractive suggestion of strength.

"Mr. Jardine, you must know I heard what passed between you and Mr. Fleury this afternoon," she said desperately. "I was not eavesdropping—just as I entered the doorway I heard * * * the question you asked him * * * and the answer he gave."

"Well?" Jardine forced himself to turn and look at her smiling. "That is not a very dreadful confession. I hope it was not the cause of your sleeplessness—I assure you I absolve you unhesitatingly."

The girl made an impatient gesture.

"Mr. Jardine, why will you fence with me! At first I could hardly understand. Mr. Fleury's manner was so unlike his own—he seemed to hesitate.' She turned abruptly toward Jardine, and the baiting accusation ended with a little rush of nervous words. "Surely * * * it isn't possible * * * no one could be so wicked—so sad—as for a moment to imagine that you did this thing."

And then, as Jardine hesitated, she repeated her question in another form, simplifying it beyond all possibility of misconception.

"Is there conceivable that any one could suspect you of having murdered Lewis Stuvesant?"

"Miss Charters"—Jardine turned to her with a protesting note in his voice "Really, I am quite at a loss——

Better, Healthier Women

are known to exist in this country by thousands because freed from pain and suffering by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Could such a record be made without actual and superior merit? Read what this woman says, and realize that the results secured in her case could not have been made except by a very good medicine.

Lawrence, Kans. — "I was a great sufferer from a weakness, irregular periods, headaches, backaches and other female troubles, which caused me to be weak and broken-down condition of the system. My side was so sore I could not lie on it. I saw in my daily paper that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good for all female troubles and had done so much for other sufferers, so I felt sure it would help me, and it has helped me wonderfully. I got relief from the first bottle. My aches and pains all left me and as I continued taking the Compound I grew stronger. Within three months I was a perfectly well woman, and I want this letter made public to show what benefits women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Julia A. Snow, Route No. 8, Lawrence, Kans.

Science in surgery and electricity has advanced much in the past 30 years, but the treatment of disease by the old fashioned roots and herbs method has never been improved upon. The fact that this leader of them all—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—is to-day the largest seller of any similar medicine in the world, is proof positive of its value and superiority, for with all our enterprise and advertising we could not keep fooling the people for 30 years. Merit and merit alone is what has made Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the standard medicine for treating diseases peculiar to women.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

HAVE A WEEP WITH ME - - - By James J. Montague

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

LET'S enjoy ourselves, dear readers, let's forget our cares and years,
Let us spend a pleasant evening shedding cataracts of tears;
Come with me to see the drawma, where your heart will thrill and throb
And for three long hours together you can sob and sob and sob.
There is grief in many a playhouse which you really ought to see—
It will rend your very vitals—come and have a weep with me.

SEE the poor, deluded hero, whom the beautiful coquette
Has been crooly playing horse with, since last Winter, when they met.
He has saved up all his wages for the rental of the flat,
He has bought a ring—one carat—eighty bucks went into that;
He has offered her his fortune, he has offered her his life—
But (sob, sob) he now discovers she's another fellow's wife!

SEE the chee-ild—blonde haired and slender—oh, unhappy little one!
How he weeps as he informs us he's a burglar's only son!
Papa's doing time in Sing Sing; he has neither bread nor pie;
Mother's gone to the convention—he must either steal or die.
What an awful thing in Winter for a child to lack for meals;
Yet more awful is the drawma, for the chee-ild (sob, sob, sob) steals!

SEE the sad-eyed, white-faced convict, who has not a thing to wear
But a loud effect in trousers and a short effect in hair;
How could he, poor wretch, discover that to lift a watch was wrong
And that doing time in prison was a sad, but not sweet song?
He escapes! They apprehend him! He repented of his crime—
He was going to do far better—but (sob, sob) he still does time.

PAY your money, gentle reader—tears are gloriously cheap;
You can get an evening's sorrow for about one cent a weep.
Why indulge in foolish laughter, which fatigues the weary chest
When of all high-class enjoyments weeping is the very best?
All our leading drawma writers are advancing in their art,
So that seen for two more dollars they will break the hardest heart.

TWO or three years ago I was somewhat stouter than I am now, and I was annoyed to such an extent that I would step on the scales every chance I got.

One day I was standing on the scales in a railroad station. The hand of the dial had gone around a bit further than I expected, and as I gazed at the tell-tale indicator in dismay, a German woman walked up and tapped me on the shoulder with her parasol. She seemed to be looking for some one.

"I peg your pardon," she said with a broad German accent, "but are you Lena?"

"Am I leaner?" I repeated, looking again at the dial. "No! but I wish to heaven that I was."

THEY say that nobody loves a fat man.

Well, I am not so sure about it. I once knew a very fat old gentleman who became a missionary and went to Africa to convert the heathen. He never came back. I dare say the cannibals love the fat ones best.

"Of course not," replied the child; "God gave you something in front to stop it."

DURING the Hudson-Fulton celebration last Fall I was waiting for the parade to come up Fifth avenue, when I noticed a very fat man standing at the curb. Pretty soon the bands were heard in the distance and the vanguard of police came along, clearing the street before them. One policeman saw the fat man at the curb and rode over to him.

"Look here," said the officer, "I guess you had better step back three or four feet from the curb so the parade can pass by!"

WHEN President Taft was recovering from his illness in the Philippines, some years ago, the then President Roosevelt was very solicitous about his convalescence, and a good many cables were exchanged. One of those that came from Mr. Taft in reply to an inquiry from the White House about his health read as follows:

"Doing fine. Rode horseback six miles this morning."

To this Roosevelt answered:

"Good for you! How's the horse?"

I WAS in an Amsterdam avenue car one time when in came a very fat woman. There were several men standing and several men sitting down. No one offered to give the fat lady a seat. At length one of the men who was standing said:

"It's a wonder two or three of you fellows don't get up and give the lady a seat."

So three of them got up and gave her a seat!

THERE was a little boy I knew in the country who was the greatest optimist I ever saw. One day he had eaten some unripe fruit and was suffering a great deal in consequence. He was sitting on the porch with his grandfather, who weighs not less than two hundred. The little fellow was taking his punishment quite philosophically when I asked him if he had much pain.

"Oh, I've got a jolly good pain, all right," he replied. "But I was just thinking how much more pain there would be if grandpa had eaten those apples."

TALKING about fat people makes me think of a woman who was very thin. She was also very religious, and at the same time her husband was very stingy. Finally she died and her husband wanted to put something fitting on the tombstone. So he ordered this line: "Oh, God! she was thin!"

He did not want to spend much money for the tombstone, however, and decided on a very narrow one. In fact it was so narrow that the cutter could not get on all the letters, so it read like this: "Oh, God! she was thin!"

WHEN President Taft was a young man he was called one day on business to a small Ohio town. When he came to look up a train to get back to Cincinnati he found that no trains stopped at that station before the next day. He noticed, however, that an express was to pass the station within a short time, so he wired the train dispatcher of the railroad as follows:

"Will you stop No. 6 to take on a large party?"

The answer came back, "Yes," and before long the fast express slowed up and stopped at the station. The conductor was greatly incensed when no one but Mr. Taft was seen on the platform.

"We were ordered to stop and take on a large party," he said. "Where is the large party?"

"Why, I am the large party," laughed Mr. Taft, as he stepped aboard.

A FRIEND of mine—a great big fat fellow he is, too—recently visited several haberdashers in search of a collar large enough to fit his neck. He was unsuccessful in every place and at last came to a friend for advice.

"You can get a good, big collar at So-and-so's," he was told, and he made a note of the address.

Upon arriving there—and it was a long walk—he found the address was that of a harness store, and in the window was a fine display of horse collars!

A STOUT, well-fed Irishman was driving a horse that was little better than a walking skeleton. A friend who noticed the animal's emaciated condition said:

"Pat, that's the worst looking horse I ever saw. Why don't you fatten him up?"

"Fatten him up?" replied Pat. "Faith, the poor baste can hardly carry the little mate that's on him now."

BEFORE he was President, Mr. Taft used to go to a ball game every time he could spare an afternoon from his work. To be sure of having room enough to spread out his big form comfortably, he always used to buy two seats for himself.

One day he sent a new office boy to buy two seats for him. The boy got the seats all right, but when Mr. Taft reached the grounds he found they were on opposite sides of the aisle!

I HEARD two small boys discussing the relative merits of the houses where they lived.

"Our house has a fine new bay window that cost $300," proudly boasted one.

"That's nothing," replied the other. "My father's got a big bay window, and mother says if she had half the money he's put into it we could afford an automobile."

DURING a visit of Bishop L—— to one of his parishioners, who was entertaining a Sunday-school class of little boys, he inquired of them the meaning of an "episcopal visitation." After a profound silence little Johnnie at the rear of the class arose and said:

"It is an affliction sent by God."

STAUNTON had learned that mutton came from the sheep, pork from the pig and beef from the cow. One day he was busily eating hash when he startled his mother with the question:

"Mamma, what animal is hash when it's alive?"

LITTLE MARY was discussing the great hereafter with her mamma.

"Mamma, will you go to heaven when you die?"

"Yes; I hope so, child."

"Well, I hope I'll go, too, or you'll be lonesome."

"Oh, yes; and you hope your papa will go, too, don't you?"

"Oh, no; papa can't go; he can't leave the store."

MY little nephew was playing with the cat when he exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, how old is the cat?"

"One year old, sonny."

"And how old am I?"

"Four, my dear."

"Then, how is it the cat has whiskers and I haven't?"

THREE-YEAR-OLD HAROLD having learned to count up to ten on his fingers, was counting for his father, who said "eleven" when he came to the last finger. Harold looked thoughtfully at his hands, shook his head, and said:

"No, papa, I tan't say 'leven. That finger ain't on."

DOROTHY, getting up a little earlier than usual, went out in the garden and saw the grass covered with dew.

"Mamma," she asked in surprise, "is it hard work for the grass to grow at night?"

"No, my child, no harder than by day," I answered.

"It must have been last night," she persisted, "for see how it is sweating this morning."

SEVEN-YEAR-OLD WILLIE was fishing with his aunt at the Thousand Islands. Pulling up his line, he saw, to his amazement, a small perch. After looking at it a moment he threw it back and said, with disgust:

"You're too small. Go back down and tell your mother to come up."

ONE day Herbie's parents were talking about union labels. His mother said she would not buy anything without that label. A few weeks later Herbie's mother gave birth to a baby girl, and he said to her:

"Mamma, why did you buy sister without a label?"

MABEL had something she wanted very much to tell the company. But her mother was talking. Several times Mabel grew impatient and started to interrupt, but each time her mother said, "Wait, dear." Finally Mabel decided to talk anyway. Her mother stopped in surprise and said:

"Mabel, didn't I tell you to wait until I had finished?"

"Yes, mother," the little one answered, "I did wait but you didn't finish."

THE youngster peered into the contribution basket and then quietly returned his coin to his trousers pocket.

"Tom," whispered his mother, "why don't you put your money into the basket?"

"'Cause," he hissed loudly, "they've got more'n I have already."

MARY'S mother had forgotten to prick the upper crust of her pie. As she was about to put it into the oven Mary spied the piece of pastry and exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, look! You haven't made the button-holes."

FOUR-year-old Dorothy was surrounded by her twenty-six dolls, all of them partially or wholly undressed. Their clothing lay in tight little rolls in a small basket. In answer to her mother's inquiry, Dorothy, pointing to her toy irons carefully placed on a tabouret, said, "I'm ironing, mother."

"Why, Dorothy; to-day is Sunday. Mother never irons on Sunday."

A cloud passed over the little one's face momentarily, but quickly the dimples broke through as she gave her mother a knowing look and said:

"Dod knows the irons ain't hot."

MARJORIE'S mother was telling her what an awful thing it was to lie. "When you die," she said, "you have to take a pad and pencil and make a report to St. Peter of all the lies you've told during your life." The little girl thought a while and then said in a whisper:

"Don't tell papa I told you, but I saw him bring home a box of pencils and some pads and lock them up in

WHEN BILLY AND I ARE MARRIED

A New Series of Betty's Day Dreams

Drawn By NELL BRINKLEY

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

WELL, I've solved another of those problems that are sure to thrust up their ugly heads when Billy and I are married. I've already mentioned that we've decided on a snug little flat for our first home to come to after the honeymoon. And that is what made the PARTICULAR problem a bit hard to solve. It has kept me thinking and THINKING how I could occupy myself during the long, TERRIBLE hours every day when Billy's business keeps him AWAY. There isn't much for a wee WIFEY to do in a flat. And it will be so SILLY to be calling Billy up on the 'phone every few minutes.

So I've decided, SECRETLY, that the very first May Day after our marriage we will move into a charming little rose-embowered cottage somewhere in the suburbs, with a little patch of ground at the back—if no bigger than a TABLECLOTH—where I can kill a few hours every afternoon GARDENING. I won't waste ALL that precious ground on FLOWERS, either. At least half of it I shall devote to radishes, beets, carrots and GRAPE FRUIT. Billy does LOVE grape fruit salad—which reminds me that I must inquire whether you plant the seed or set out bulbs.

LESTICHY—The minute you see the duke, drop the bomb. Afterward, I will meet you somewhere.

Ravachal—But, will there be enough left of me to keep the appointment?

BETTY—We're so glad to meet you!

Herman—The pleasure is municipal.

BETTY—I understand your father reigned in Zurach for many years.

Herman—Yes, papa was a good reigner. He reigned so much everybody in the country was soaked.

CUSTOMS INSPECTOR—Are you bringing in any raw materials?

Mrs. Smith—Oh, yes. I have my husband with me.

I KNOW you girls like a romantic fellow that comes around on moonlight nights and tickles a guitar. But many a man who hasn't got a guitar has got his wages in the right pocket.

HERMAN—I hate to see a woman cry, even a child. Whenever a child cries I have to give it a slap to make it stop.

* * *

BRUCE—Did you ever fight a duel?

Herman—The question is supercilious. Don't you see I am still alive?

HERMAN—I've had a hard time since I ran away from that circus. For two nights I slept in the second story of a tree, and all I had to eat was three huckleberries—and one of them was faded.

* * *

MRS. HARVEY—If you marry for a title you get it, but if you marry for love, the Lord only knows what you get. When I married your father I got one year of happiness and twenty years of Fort Wayne.

Herman—the man who marries you will have to be a hero.

HERMAN—Will you marry me?

Betty—I can't—I love someone else.

Herman—Oh, don't mention that till after we're married.

A BALLYHOO is standing in front of a motion-picture-vaudeville theatre.

"Here you are, ladies and gentlemen; polite vaudeville and motion pictures. Complete change of programme every minute and a half."

A rube steps up to him and asks how much it costs to see the show, and on being told the price of admission is ten cents, he goes to the ticket window to purchase, laying down a dollar bill. The man inside grabs the bill and shuts down the window.

"Hey," yells the rube to the ballyhoo, "the fellow in the bill and shuts down the window."

"Oh, he's gone to lunch."

"I see. He couldn't go to lunch until I got here."

THE rube goes inside, is disgusted with the show, raises a rumpus, and is thrown out.

"What do you mean by going in there and making trouble with the audience?" demands the ballyhoo.

"Audience, bah! Send them out here, and I'll lick all three of them."

"SAY, my friend, can you help me out a little? I'm broke and haven't even got my car fare home."

"Certainly. I'm sorry for you. It must be hard not to have even your car fare. Where do you live?"

Lamb—I was going to speak to you about that, Colonel.

Wallingford—I understand what you want is about 75 per cent. on your money.

Lamb—I'd like to get all I could.

Wallingford—In other words, you'd like to get something for nothing?

Lamb—Yes; if I could.

Wallingford—Oh, how I would like to have a brother like you with such desires and ambitions! What a great helpmate he would be to me!

Peasie—And I got mine moving dishes.

MERKLE—This country thing is just what you needed. You're looking better that you ever did in your life.

Weinstein—Oh, I'm there with the fatal beauty, all right; but there ain't a skirt in this town I'd fall for. Gee, when I think of the silly gals chasin' around Forty-second street, and the careless way I used to pass them up—honest, I get remorse.

BUT Judge Gaynor's a great man for the citizens. You don't see the New York police hitting people over the heads just for fun. Nowadays, if a policeman steps on your foot, go and tell Gaynor, and he chucks him in jail. He's got half the force in jail already. Pretty soon there won't be any room for burglars.

THE MEGAPHONE MAN IN DORCHESTER

SCENE—Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, near Field's Corner.

Rubberneck wagon stuck in street rut. Passengers have alighted, the women portion sorrowing, the men sneering that "just-let-me-at-the-thing" look. Street laborers, referred to by most noted clergyman in recent sermon on the work that men do not do, approach and tender services, their foreman taking charge.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Thank you most heartily, boys. Get a couple of bars under the stern of this [illegible] and she ought to come out in a hurry.

FOREMAN—I wish we had a longer bar. Now, there is a long bar over there to Finnegan's. (Sings.)

"Ofttimes I love to leave my home
And watch that bar [illegible]
So when we get [illegible]
I hope and trust [illegible] bloke will shout."

MEGAPHONE MAN—[illegible] all right. Now [illegible] will you, old man. [illegible] be taking the [illegible] this thing going [illegible]

(Street [illegible] their hands on the side of the rubberneck wagon and appear as though they were clairvoyants intent on table raising.)

FOREMAN (rushing over in alarm)—Easy there, boys! Don't pull so hard there, Henderson. Easy, boys! Easy is the word. Hey! Hold up there! Belay!

MEGAPHONE MAN AND CHORUS (astonished)—What's the matter?

FOREMAN—I fear the boys will strain themselves.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Why, they haven't lifted an ounce—not one of 'em.

FOREMAN—Oh, they be the great lads. Strong as oxen. You can't hold 'em back. Look at the play of the muscles.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Aye, it [illegible] ceas time for them. I wish they would stop the table tipping and get to it.

FOREMAN — Tipping — tipping! Where did I hear that word before? Tip! Tip! Tipper! Tap—to advance some diminutive emolument in order that extraordinary attention may be given [illegible]

MEGAPHONE MAN—A holdup [illegible] (Goes over and speaks in undertone to beautiful [illegible] from Omaha who is [illegible] lesser beauties of his [illegible] advances and [illegible] candle power orb searchlight.)

FOREMAN (drawing [illegible] deep breath)—A lallapalooza!

[illegible] QUEEN [illegible] [illegible] have [illegible] [illegible] sake. (Gives evidence of [illegible] [illegible] treatment [illegible])

FOREMAN—Cheese it! My brother-in-law is in this gang. Hey, you good-for-nothing, onery bunch of pay check [illegible] bummers, you'll likely end your [illegible] farmers. If you don't get [illegible] ere craft off this reef within four [illegible] there will be some of you having the chance to get Fin. Com. John A. Sullivan to write an unofficial letter for you!

(Inert gang springs to life with great show of energy. "Heave ho" is heard and wagon is removed from rut in twinkling.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—Much obliged, old man!

FOREMAN—Nothing doing, eh!

MEGAPHONE MAN—Not while your gang is on a job. That block pavement will sprout if you don't hurry it down.

FOREMAN (calling his gang off)—Come on, boys. We're all ex-sheriffs.

(Sightseers mount vehicle, resume places. Chauffeur sends auto [illegible])

[illegible]APHONE MAN—That bunch [illegible] me of the couplet:

"[illegible] men walk the streets the [illegible] city, [illegible] you, sirs,' and lay their [illegible] by."

POMPOUS NEW YORKER—We have had enough of them. Now, let us know [illegible] we come across.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I couldn't [illegible] sir. Some of you look to be recent arrivals. Hope the customs crowd weren't too strict. I had a friend once who was held up [illegible] then [illegible] standing by the [illegible] when a man in a blue uniform said to him: 'Who's that woman over there?' My friend said: "You can search me," and blamed if they didn't.

POMPOUS NEW YORKER—Your chatter makes me tired. Tell us about this district, its history, industries, location, facilities—things that will make us know Dorchester.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Some people have lived here for years, and don't know it. It's the easiest place to get lost in that you ever saw. The [illegible] night I met a man leaning [illegible] a post on Columbia road. He was lost. 'When my house (hic) gits along (hic) here, tell it ter (hic) stop!' says he.

ALBANY DELEGATE—Come on with the real goods.

MEGAPHONE MAN (to chauffeur)—Draw up here, Bill. (Car stops at corner of Dorchester avenue and Adams street.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—Ladies and gentlemen, let me direct your attention to the history of this burg. Years and years ago a man named Daw arrived in Boston from Appalachicola, married a beautiful girl and made this district his country seat. Columbia road was there then, but it had not been oiled. The Codman street lodge was just where it is today, but there was more of it. Welles avenue was used for a trail by the Indian braves when they came for a pow-wow with Mr. Daw as to who should [illegible] ed by them when a new [illegible] of the tribe was to be elected. Sometimes, after the election, Daw had to get one of the braves to deny that he had promised the defeated man support and then gone out [illegible] the tomahawk to his ambitions. Daw had two sons—fine fellows, too. One was named John Daw. They [illegible] him Jack Daw for short. The other was Chester Daw. Well, Jack ran away to sea and was never heard from but Chester Daw succeeded his father, planted a colony, for the [illegible] comers all died and then reversed his name like the owner of Navill[illegible] did, dubbing the burg Dawchester. Later on they began to spell it the way that it now appears in the telephone directory.

[illegible] CULTIVATOR—How big be it?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Sir, Dorchester [illegible] that [illegible] into a telephone booth and [illegible] call up a friend in the [illegible] you have to tell the phone girl [illegible] you with long distance [illegible]. Now, [illegible] is Field's Corner. I recently heard some Field who [illegible] Little Boy Blue." Tain't true—nor for Cy Field, who laid the Atlantic cable, either.

FIRST NIGHTER—Must have been Lew Field.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, whoever named it feels cornered as to a designation.

(City fire bells sound [illegible] stroke and auto makes movement as though to skid.)

KENTUCKY COLONEL—Any feuds out this way? Looks like shooting (pointing to broken windows in store.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—You bet there are feuds, sir. The Tipcarts and the Red Devils are ever at it. Tenth Congressional District oratory shattered that glass. Diogenes went hunting an honest man and they pinched him to save the town's reputation. Hoopla, if there isn't Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell. Doesn't seem to take his defeat to heart.

CHORUS OF FEMININE VOICES—Isn't he just too handsome?

MEGAPHONE MAN—He is fine looking. He's sore on Mayor Fitzgerald. Say, the Mayor gave him the double cross in the primaries. Two years ago he beat J. Mitch Galvin by four votes. Wonderful thing that was. If Joe and his three brothers and his father—all fine types of manhood—had remained at home that election day and not voted, Joe would have been defeated. Think of that—one family electing a Congressman.

BUFFALO POL—Who won this time?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Jim Curley. He quoted Scripture about the humble man being exalted, but J. Mitch says humble Jerms can't depend upon Divine Providence or Republican votes on election day. J. Mitch is the Republican candidate again.

(Megaphone Man gazes about in search of more notables. Boy on third seat whistles, "Anybody Here Seen Kelly?")

MEGAPHONE MAN—Course they have. There's Andy coming along now. That dark complexioned fellow with the spectacles and absorbed look is the new State committeeman from this district. Andrew Kelley, ladies and gentlemen, and he defeated Charley Riordan, who has been the purse-bearer of the State Democracy. Wait till Andy gets up and says, "Mr. Chairman," and wades in. Berkshire and the Cape will have to take notice. He would make a good chairman of the executive committee. He's a Tipcarter.

WOONSOCKET BUILDER — Contractor, eh?

MEGAPHONE MAN—No. Andy is taking up machinery and promises to make good.

BROOKLYN POLICE SERGEANT—Ah, there's a police station (pointing out station 11).

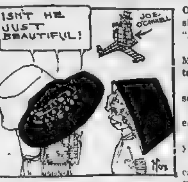
MEGAPHONE MAN—Yes, sir. Captain George A. Hall presides there and he is one of the best in the police business. It's almost an education to converse with Captain Hall, for he is one of the best read men in the department. Likes a good song, too. (To chauffeur: Hum her along, Bill.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—Ladies and gentlemen, here are the Field's Corner car barns, where the trolleys are stalled. By-and-by, perhaps, Dorchester will get a subway, but there hasn't been any particular call for one yet. The West End urges Dorchester to be patient. Beyond is the Gibson street playground, which looks as though it had been originally dredged for a reservoir. The Eddy refrigerator plant is located over yonder. A portion of it caught fire once, but the refrigerators that plant turns out were so cold that the flames froze, and the firemen had to use hot water to extinguish them.

CHICAGO PARK ENTHUSIAST—Where's Franklin Park?

MEGAPHONE MAN (to chauffeur)—Franklin Park it is, Bill. Hit her up. (Car circles various streets and brings up at park entrance.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—This is a magnificent spot. Acres upon acres of ground given over to public use. The callow youth and his girl gather here in the dusk of the evening and murmur soft nothings. The gliders glide from Schoolmaster's Hill. Over yonder is Franklin Field, where fellows hit at a marble and holler "Fore," and where Ty Cobbs and Honus Wagners are produced. (Sighs deeply.) 'Tis a tremendous job to show you the whole of Dorchester in one afternoon. 'Twould take a week to do it. Aha, I have a notion. (Produces many postcards and political cards.) This is my plan—Ho! there is "Tom" McQuade. That delightful man who knows all the pols. The one walking so briskly. That's Tom all right—all right. Presides over the cigar counter down to Thompson's Spa in the city and lives out here. Wish I could have Tom up here to make a little spiel. He could tell you more about the notables than I could.



DISSATISFIED TOURIST — Well, what's your plan?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Oh, yes. Here is a postcard showing Grove Hall. Please pass that along, sir, after you have gazed upon it. It shows Grove Hall exactly. The camera does not lie. Observe the hustling aspect of that district. Madam, here is a portrait of Michael F. Culliney, who was chairman of the Ward 20 Democratic committee a year or so ago. Daniel T. O'Connell is the head of that organization now. Mike is regarded as one of the finest looking young men in Dorchester. Please pass it right along, miss. Mayor Fitzgerald lives at No. 39 Welles avenue, out here in Dorchester. I have his portrait, too.

JUMBLE OF VOICES—Met him in Chicago. Saw him in Santa Fe. Heard him speak in Lewiston. Saw him skylarking at Squantum. Met him at the fat men's outing. Danced with him at Condit's. Swam with him at Falmouth. He's a hustler. Got 'em all faded. Little General—Honey Fitz—Sweet Adeline—br-r-r-r-r-r-r Fitz.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Glad you know him. That saves about three hours' time in telling about the things he's been into. They do say that Joe O'Connell, though, wants him to stop singing about Adeline and warble, "Are You Sincere?" instead.

SINGING INSTRUCTOR FROM MILWAUKEE—He would have to take lessons.

MEGAPHONE MAN—He take lessons. I guess not. Fitz gives lessons.

SINGING INSTRUCTOR—Cultivated voice, eh?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Ahem—er, yes.

SCHENECTADY RESIDENT—This card business isn't doing us justice. We came to be shown.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I'm afraid it's a case of shorn instead, as the chauffeur tells me that the off hind tire has just gone flat while we were discussing John F. (Passes more cards.)

WOMAN ON SECOND SEAT—Who is that police officer, pray?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Aha, madam. No wonder that you inquire. Did you ever see any police officer making a better appearance. That is "Dandy Jim" Rogers of the Morton street substation. He must be on some particular business. Is not that a fine brown mustache. Jim raised it. Observe how straight his form. He's the Beau Brummel of the police force of Boston.

WESTERN RANCHMAN—There is a big man, too.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Why, where are my eyes? That is the high man, physically and politically, in Dorchester just now. That towering frame and rotund circumference belongs to former Councilman James A. Hart. "Jim" has just been nominated for the House of Representatives in Ward 24 by the G. O. P. Ah, here is the portrait of his colleague on the ticket. (Produces card bearing half-tone of Samuel H. Mildram.) Isn't he good-looking, too? They will make a fine team, I tell you. Hart led the ticket at the primaries. We will have to take cars back to the city. The machine is on the blink. On the way I will endeavor to acquaint you with various places of interest. Now, there is another well-known fellow out this way. That man in the gray uniform is Letter Carrier Berger of the Codman square office. He is going to be a lawyer some day, for he's studying now. You can almost read law in his eyes, and look at that expanse of forehead.

Here is an inbound car, ladies and gentlemen. You can pay me after we get aboard. I'll show you what Warren street is like as we pass along, and you can get a glimpse of Blue Hill avenue. Here's a picture of "Bob" Clarkson, who lost the senatorial nomination. Too bad I couldn't take you up to Welles avenue and show you Mayor Fitzgerald's residence.

VOICE—You go to thunder.

Notables That Pass Through Courthouse Corridor

Where [illegible]
There notable [illegible]
With state [illegible]
Pass through the Court House corridor.

A H—Rufus Choate [illegible] in the mould [illegible] on his pedestal in the [illegible] of the Court House [illegible] who [illegible] on the [illegible] that [illegible] out to [illegible] may ass[illegible] bronze bas[illegible] word yet have it to any [illegible] young men starting out [illegible] the lady of legal requirements for admission to the bar and [illegible] and all say.

Since the late George B. Hyde bequeathed the sum necessary to erect Rufus in that rotunda, there hasn't been a prospective law student in the city who has not consulted him. He's more to them than John Harvard is to Memorial Hall boys.

Take Henry Flynn, assistant clerk of the Supreme Court, for instance. Before Henry went in to gain great legal knowledge he faced "Rufus of the Rotunda" and put the question as others had done.

"Great legal mind of the long ago, tell me, pray, will I make good as an attorney?"

The answer came after a little time had passed. Henry studied law, for Rufus told him to go ahead, and today he holds one of the best positions that the Suffolk County Court House can offer an enterprising young man.

Thus it is that when Rufus in bronze speaks, he knows what he is talking about in relating just what notable people pass before his pedestal. He has watched them day by day seeking to reach Pemberton square or Somerset street, as the case may be, in the short cut that the rotunda affords.

Stand before Rufus any day and look upon his countenance. The most biased individual, after one glance, would be certain to admit that he was ready to speak, bronze or no bronze.

That is why he is giving to boasting of his notables and the wide acquaintance that he holds with men prominent in affairs of to-day.

"Come close to the pedestal," says Rufus. "Snuggle up beside me and I will point them out as they appear. Here they come already. There is Deputy Neal of the State police, coming down the seventeen steps that lead from the Somerset street side. Say, the host of people passing through this rotunda wore those steps away, so that safety treads had to be put in to take the place of the marble carried off in minute particles on the shoe leather of men who have made their mark as I did when I was in the flesh.

"As you go out note the condition of the thirteen steps leading down from the Pemberton square entrance.

"Sometimes I see Sheriff Seavey coming up them and fear that they will break through under his weight they have worn so thin.

"Yes—that is Deputy Neal for certain. He has aged a good deal in the last few years, and his hair is getting pretty white. He used to be city marshal at Lynn in the long ago, and if you remember held the theory that Annie Mullins committed suicide.

"That man rushing in from Pemberton square? Why, I thought everybody knew him. The white fedora hat designates him immediately as Dr. John Duff. He is the husband of Mrs. Julia A. Duff of Charlestown, who used to be on the Boston School Board and made things interesting. Fact is, I have heard people stand right in front of me and declare that it was on her account that they changed the membership of the board from twenty-four members to five, the present number. I really think I would like to hear of her getting elected again. Dr. John would like to see that accomplished, too.

"Look at him go it. One would think that the Election Commissioners were up here and that he was rushing to get her nomination papers filed. He is noted for three things: First, for being an excellent physician; second, for being the husband of a smart woman, and third, for always being in the spectators' seats during school board meetings while she was a member, so that he might applaud her efforts. And it was right, too.

"Next—well that is J. Albert Dorsey. He's a young attorney and if I have my records right I think he is the president of the Charitable Irish Society. Just see the pretty girl stenographers that pass by here. I was told that count was kept here at one time and it was found that during a short period 100,000 persons went through this rotunda, just to save the trouble of going up around the curve at the end of the Court House. The major portion who pass through have no business with the courts whatsoever.

"There's a fine type of a man over there—the one tall and dark, who has come in with a group of young men. That is Tom Vahey, brother of James. I suppose they are talking politics and Tom is assured that they are all with Jim. Well—such is life. 'Twas even so in my time, and that was long before Gene Foss was heard of.

"Here's another jolly and getting more stout every day. Tom Grady, who used to be in the Governor's council. He is a believer in broad things. Just note that broad smile that illumines his countenance. The man following him is Thomas F. Pedrick, sergeant-at-arms at the State House. He always looks up at me, just as though he were bidding me the time of day. He is certain to hold his job as long as Captain J. G. B. Adams did—for the statesmen think the world of him, yet the years are beginning to whiten his hair and increase his girth, too. Here is every good wish for him. He succeeded David Remington, you know.

"I have seen Governor Draper go through here most every day, but he hasn't been along yet. Now there comes Joseph C. Pelletier, the District Attorney. He is the man garbed in the blue serge suit, with the brown college hat to set it off. If you were very close to him you would notice that he has on low tan shoes and that the heels are not over three-eights of an inch in height. He is turning into the corridor bearing that brown leather bag that is rolled up in his hand just as though it were empty.

"Joe is really getting to be a ponderous fellow. I wonder what he would weigh?

"By Blackstone, sir, if that isn't our old friend Nat Robinson, who used to be secretary to Mayor Josiah Quincy. I have heard some say that Nat is running a detective agency. Now just imagine Nat being a sleuth. Well, of course he always was a person of discernment and I bet the man who wants sleuthing done will be satisfied with Nathaniel.

"Dear me, I am shaking so with enthusiasm that I can barely maintain my stand here. I hope that Constable 'Billy' Powers hasn't noticed how wrought up I am. Here is John Quinn, Jr.—'Honest John'—who gave up being a Senator and a stevedore to make good as a lawyer.

"It's just like John to come along here and tell me that I am terribly sunburned. He has a way about him that wins much for his client. I understand that John can make a jury weep or melt the heart of a stone when he is in the right mood to produce the human interest vein of argument.

"'Jim' Sweeney is the name of the short, stout man in the brown suit. Notice how leisurely he goes along. 'Jim' is counsel for the Elevated Road. I wish there were elevated roads in my time. They say he was the best editor of the waste basket that the Clover Club ever had. Gracious goodness (mind you, I use language and expressions of the long ago), there is 'Joe' Lundy. Guess Joe isn't on the stump this year. He was Arthur Dehon Hill's orator, you know, and has 'em (excuse me) faded (is that the word?) when it comes to handing out the soft language that brings votes. Let's see! Didn't he manage a Judge Dewey campaign once. I never see the Judge lately.

"My, what a rush of notables. Just see who we have with us now. 'Billy' Murphy—he is the efficient and courteous private secretary of Governor Draper. William is on his way down town to lunch, no doubt. That's a pretty vivid suit he wears, but it's mighty becoming to him. He has a nice face,' Billy has—the kind that any one would take to—so open and frank, you know. The first public service he gave was as secretary of the Massachusetts committee on the Jamestown Exposition and his rise has been very rapid.

"Ernest Woodside, ex-Representative from Ward 1, is that fine looking young man, who has just come in from Pemberton square. He is an attorney. Yes—that is Arthur Dolan, the register of probate. Notice his stride. Toes away out and never hurries. There is John Kelly, who used to be in the Senate, then in the Board of Aldermen, and is now Deputy Sheriff. Seems as though all these fellows get stout after they get good Court House positions.

"In my day most of the court officials and the attorneys, too, even the statesmen, were thin men. I was a thin man myself. Now seems as though you must be a bulky fellow to make good.

"That man who walks so briskly is Charles F. Gettemy, the chief of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor. He followed Charles Felton Pidgeon, the author of 'Quincy Adams Sawyer,' to that position.

"What, ho! Wish I could reach right down from here and shake that man's remaining hand. The man in blue coming now—standing so erect, and with one sleeve empty. Congratulations! Congratulations! Congratulations! Oh, why does he not hear me? Who is he? I pity you for not knowing. That is John E. Gilman, who has just been elected commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.—a great honor indeed. He lost an arm in the second days' battle at Gettysburg. He is one of the best beloved men in this Commonwealth, and they say he can make a ringing G. A. R. speech. I'm glad they elected him.

"What next face do we view? The only one I can pick out is Frederick J. Macleod, chairman of that Democratic State Committee. I'm afraid he will have a hard time to whip Sam McCall. Here is James E. Maguire, president of the East Boston Citizens' Trade Association. He was instrumental in having that obnoxious fence removed from the Devonshire street station of the Washington street tube. Walter I. Badger—ah, I see you know him. Smart as they make them, covering ground and a hustler in his profession as an attorney. There will be something doing in this corridor when the October sessions of the Superior Court open. I wish they would shift me to one of them so I could listen.

"This young man in black setting sail for the Somerset street stairway is Judge John Meaney of Blackstone. He was on the Democratic State Committee a few years ago and is a State Senator now, but will not seek re-election as he has just been appointed to the bench by Governor Draper. I suppose he is on his way to the executive chamber at the State House now to thank the Governor for his appointment.

"The thin man, dignified and fairly brisk of step, is State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens. He lives in Somerville and had a hot fight for his place, beating out a machine candidate from Springfield. Wonder if Butler Ames can beat out one? Colonel William D. Sohier of the Highway Commission goes through here frequently, and sometimes I feel like asking him about this agitation regarding the new zone system for telephoning. I really think I would like to be the counsel for the remonstrants from the expressions I hear concerning it.

"Melvin O. Adams likes to use this route, too, for it is near his home on Mt. Vernon street, and of course former District Attorney Arthur D. Hill comes along, too. But do you know I haven't got a squint at his corn cob yet.

"Here's the janitor coming to give me my weekly touching up. It's all off for further observation, but come and stand beside me any day and I'll point you out notables using this short cut—hundreds of 'em, and, mind you, I think from the traffic the city fathers ought to light this place at night—keep it open for pedestrians—and name it Choate Esplanade. Bring it to John F.'s attention, won't you?"

When Digby Bell Slid Home

By DE WOLF HOPPER

YOU ought to have seen Digby Bell after he played a game once at the Lambs' annual wash on Lester Wallack's Island some years ago.

It was a great game. Bell was captain of one nine and I was the boss of the other. Before we played we ate clams, and they drank things. I say "they" because I don't drink anything but water. But I had eaten so many clams that I simply oozed with them. Bell was clammy with clams and other things and played in a thick haze of fizzy water and clam juice.

John T. Sullivan, the actor, was pitching. When Digby Bell came to bat Sullivan wobbled one along and Bell hit it an awful wallop. The ball started on a straight line for New York and Sullivan, moved by no knowledge of the game, but rather by instinct, put up his hand and the ball landed in it and stayed there.

Sullivan was so filled with liquids that you could hear the ball ooze into his hand.

Of course, Bell was out, but he didn't know it. So he started the most famous home run in history. He simply died at first, decomposed at second and by the time he reached third the funeral was all over, but Bell didn't know, and Bell didn't care. He was going to make a home run. All the players helped. We stopped the game and begged him to run. Players on both sides helped him. We yelled at him. We called to him.

Bell stuck to third and sat on it. We pulled him to his feet and pleaded with him to break the record. We begged him to complete his home run. At last he started again. He made the distance between third and home in about four minutes, and just before he reached his goal we yelled to him to slide.

He slid, and it was one of the best slides you ever saw. He didn't stop at the plate, but went on skimming through the tall grass. Unfortunately, all of the refuse from that clam bake had been dumped in that spot and Bell slid right through it.

I wish you could have seen him when he got up. He had clam shells in his hair, a ripe tomato nestled under one ear and he was simply covered with junk.

MRS WM B LEEDS OF CHICAGO WHO WILL LEAD IN THE NEW FALCONRY

HOODED FALCONS ON THEIR PERCH WAITING FOR THE HUNT

Society Goes a-Hawking

SOCIETY is reviving the ancient art of falconry in this country. The Fall will see scores of women of fashion riding out with their hooded birds perched upon their wrists. They will be picturesque, and the little birds and big birds of America will have still another danger to face.

Mrs. "Willie" Carter, the Philadelphia beauty, and Mrs. William B. Leeds, of Chicago, the widow of the "tin-plate king," are foremost in the new hunting fad. Mrs. Carter looks admirable upon a horse, and so does Mrs. Leeds. Both took their inspiration from England, where falconry has never quite died out. Mrs. Carter is arranging special accommodations for a score or more of highly trained falcons near Bryn Mawr, Pa. Some of the most expert trainers of England have taught her all the arts that go with the sport.

Indeed, the sport of falconry is one of the oldest on earth. It was practised in Asia so long ago that it seems impossible to trace its beginning. It appears to have been known in China 2,000 years before Christ, and in Japan the knowledge and practice of falconry was also associated with the remote period of 600 years before Christ. The sport was originally, it is presumed, Asiatic, but it found very great favor in Europe.

It was introduced into England from the Continent in the eighth cen-

Do These Make You Laugh?

How W. Heath Robinson Convulses Our British Cousins with Grotesque Sketches as Serious in Detail as Pre-Raphaelite Paintings

W. HEATH ROBINSON

IF the art works reproduced on this page impress you with a sense of hopeless mystery, and reflect upon two things—they are from the brush of W. Heath Robinson, comic cartoonist extraordinary to the British nation, and they cause our English cousins to laugh uproariously.

Don't be in a hurry—take your time. Reflect carefully, then laugh—if you can.

Ha! Ha! That's rather a clever idea, though—putting on stilts with shoes hindside before when you abduct a lady from her boarding house and fear you will be tracked. ha, ha!

But how can any one feel entirely [illegible] over the pathetic [illegible] child—whom Mother [illegible] has set forth in [illegible] to die. Bring [illegible] offspring poached! Pity [illegible]

Although Mr. Robinson denies that he makes pictures primarily for children, you note his idea of that fascinating [illegible] game of "Bouncing the Liver [illegible] wakeful and eager the prayers are, with their nets, to catch that liver pill? Did you ever see a schoolboy who wouldn't run at sight of a liver pill? Taking of nature-faking——

As for those German spies in Epping forest, is it possible that the artist refers to the absurdity of there being anything to spy upon in a forest? Oh, dear, it's very confusing.

In case of a German invasion possibly detachable cliffs might be useful, as Mr. Robinson suggest. If they were, that certainly would be funny.

The central picture, depicting Father in the light of Mother's Help, [illegible] must be condemned as far-fetched, [illegible] unreasonable and preposterous [illegible] difficult to believe that any British [illegible], however helpfully inclined, could [illegible] himself in such a position.

But let Mr. Robinson explain his theory of comic illustration like these examples, combining the absurdly grotesque in conception with Pre-Raphaelitish attention to detail in execution. This is what Mr. Robinson says about it:

"I suppose I have been what you call funny a great many years; only I made the common mistake of dosing children with humor instead of giving it to 'grown-ups.'

"You see, I hadn't then found out that children, although extremely humorous to others, have necessarily very little humor of their own. Gradually I found that what was primarily meant to interest the children interested their elders a good deal more.

"Please note that in my opinion a humorous artist may regard his work every bit as seriously as even a religious painter. I have always tried to make my drawing humorous internally, so to speak, as well as externally in its subject. I try to convey as much as possible by the drawing alone, or, where wording is necessary, to make that as succinct as I can.

"I like a series—that is a succession of adventures happening to the same person—or ramifications and applications of the same idea, because I find that this gives me the greatest chance to let myself go and bring all the drollery out of which the notion is capable."

Perhaps the foregoing will help you to laugh at Mr. Robinson's illustration of the little game of "bouncing the liver pill." Doesn't he say that he tries to make his drawings humorous "internally?" What could be more humorous internally than a liver pill? Ha, ha! Ho, ho!

Mysteries of Mind Seen in Crystals

THE different formations of substances which crystallize have long impressed scientists as mysteries of mind displayed in inorganic matter.

Perhaps the greatest marvel in the wonderful science of crystallography is the fact that each different substance assumes its own distinct and characteristic geometrical shape on crystallizing. What reason, it may be asked, is there for the fact that the elementary units of salt arrange themselves in cubes, while those of silica combine to form six-sided prisms surmounted by six-sided pyramids?

In each case the unit of matter is composed of electrons, and the unit of salt can only differ from that of silica in the number and manner of arrangement of its electrons. Looked at from this point of view any explanation of the difference in the shape of the crystals seems impossible.

Long ago the great Roman naturalist Pliny, referring to a six-sided crystal of quartz, remarked that it was difficult to understand why the particles of matter had arranged themselves in this particular shape.

The fact, however, seems to have been firmly established that crystalline form, like other properties, is a function of the atomic weight, that is to say of the number of electrons in the atom. Thus the difference in shape between the cube of rock salt and the prism of rock crystal is determined by the fact that the latter has more electrons in its molecule.

Assuming this, however, we come face to face with the difficulty that certain elements may assume more than one shape on crystallizing. Thus carbon takes two distinct forms in the diamond and graphite, while sulphur crystallizes in forms belonging to two different systems. Such varying forms of the same element are known as allotropic, and the subject has been much studied by chemists.

It is found that the general chemical and physical properties of the allotropic forms differ as well as their crystalline shapes. This is well illustrated in the difference between the diamond and graphite.

The explanation offered by chemists of allotropic modifications is illustrated by the case of oxygen and ozone. The latter is produced when an electric discharge is passed through the air, and in other ways. Chemists find an explanation of the difference between oxygen and ozone in the fact that the unit in the former case consists of two, and in the latter of three, atoms. They thus make the varying chemical and physical properties depend on the difference in the number of electrons in the unit.

In this, we may find an explanation of the difference between graphite and the diamond, and between the two forms of sulphur, in accordance with the view that the shape of the crystal is determined by the number of electrons in the unit of mass of which it is built. We have only to assume that the molecule, say of graphite, contains more or fewer electrons than that of the diamond.

But while the same substance may thus crystallize in different shapes, it is also found that a number of different substances may take the same shape. Thus common salt, fluor-spar and iron pyrites all crystallize in cubes. Now the number of electrons in the molecules or units of mass, in these compounds may be assumed to be in the ratio of 58.74:126, and thus, on the principle enunciated above, we should expect the crystalline forms to be different.

A glance at the table of the elements as arranged by the Russian chemist Mendeleeff suggests an explanation. When the elements are arranged in order of their atomic weights their properties vary systematically with the increase of the same.

At certain stages in this increase, however, properties begin to be repeated. Thus, beginning with lithium, atomic weight 7, we pass through the varying elements, boron, nitrogen, oxygen, [illegible] fluorine, with atomic weight 19. With sodium, however, atomic weight 23, we find a repetition of the properties of lithium. So, again we find that the elements potassium, rubidium and caesium, whose atomic weights are 39, 85 and 132, have similar properties.

To his recent work on "Crystalline Structure and Chemical Constitution" Dr. Tutton alludes to the immense advance made in recent years in the study of crystals. Twenty years ago, he notes out, the position of practical crystallography was "one of utter chaos." Moreover, opinion was divided among crystallographers on certain fundamental points. The Abbe Rene Just Haüy, whom Dr. Tutton designates the father of crystallography, had enunciated the great principle that "in every specific substance of definite chemical composition crystals of existing in the solid condition, there appertains a crystalline form peculiar to and characteristic of that substance."

Some twenty years later, however, Wilhardt Mitscherlich made the discovery that a number of substances containing different elements, but of similar chemical constitution, crystallize in the same form. This similarity of form was termed isomorphism, and implied identity of shape in the different compounds. It was in direct contradiction to Haüy's principle.

And one of the most important results of recent research, and more especially of Dr. Tutton's own work, is the reconciliation of these two apparently opposite views.

tury. From that time until the middle of the seventeenth century it was in great favor.

The sport has recently enjoyed a remarkable revival in England, and fashionable society in this country is following the example. It is unquestionably a very fascinating sport. R. Bowring, of Frwitedge Farm, L. I., the principal falcon expert in America, has just imported a number of birds for Paul Rainey, the well-known sportsman, and is busy supplying birds to American customers.

In game-hawking as soon as the dog stands the falcon is unhooded and thrown off. She will mount in very wide circles, varying a mile or more from her "marks." As soon as she has attained her pitch and has shown by a few short turns that she is steady the birds may be flushed.

When the birds are sprung the falcon turning on her side dips downward for a few strokes as hard as she can and then with wings closed she falls like a stone slung from a mighty catapult, at the estimated speed of 180 miles an hour, the fiercest living thing, right on to the top of the bird she has from the first selected.

As she hits her object a little cloud of feathers flies into the air and the quarry falls to the earth dead as a stone. There are no birds getting away wounded as in shooting.

"Newportitis"—How They Get It.

Explaining Why the Season Has "Knocked Out" the "Idle Rich," and Proving That It Is Easier to Be a Panama Canal Laborer than a Society Star.

By a Newport Statistician One of "Our Set."

THE Newport colony numbers thirty-five invalids for the season of 1910, and twenty near-invalids. Approximately 15 per cent of real prostrations, or one out of every seven members of Our Set; counting in the nearly fallen, the appalling percentage of 23 per cent is gained. This is based upon the census of our set at 233 1-3.

What is it that has caused in a short season of eight weeks such a horrifying record? If one out of every seven employes of any big business house or personnel of any large undertaking were to be incapacitated after two months' work, one would say that a perfectly enormous amount of energy must have been consumed; an extraordinary amount of work accomplished. Why, the percentage of prostrations among the staff and workmen on the Panama Canal is not one-tenth of this; the percentage of killed and wounded and sick of Japanese during the war against Russia was much less.

The conclusion must be, then, that our set at Newport is the hardest-worked class of Americans in America! Society idle butterflies flitting hither and yon! Our set the van of the idle rich! Lazy philanderers? Listless, unoccupied coquettes! Nothing of the sort. Instead, we are the hardest-worked, the most industrious, superlatively energetic of all the Americans. The statistics prove it.

What, then, is "Newportitis," and how do they get it?

But before I translate the terms of the energy that has put so many of us on the hospital list into comparative examples that every one can understand, let me run the roster of the most grievously afflicted:

Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt—Was wife of Alfred Vanderbilt; fell ill at Mrs. Drexel's dinner the night that rumor reported the speedy marriage of her late husband.

Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg—Was Emily Stevens. Mr. Ladenburg disappeared from a Southern steamer one night. Mrs. Ladenburg is one of the keenest horsewomen in America, and one of the keenest bridge players. She was taken ill when her debutante daughter descended upon her for the Summer.

Lovely Angelica—Girlie—Angie—Brown—Daughter of James Brown, and granddaughter of Vernon Brown. She is undoubtedly the most beautiful blonde in Newport. Great tennis player.

May Ladenburg—Daughter of Mrs. Ladenburg. Clever hunter and horsewoman. Sent to Adirondacks for her mother's health.

Mrs. Craig Biddle—Was Laura Whelen, of Philadelphia. Over-exerted herself in usual social activities and watching Mr. Biddle play tennis. Developed appendicitis. Attended Horse Show fourteen days after operation.

Edith Bacon—Daughter of Samuel Bacon, one of the directors of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Tennis champion and father's help. Nervous prostration.

Mrs. Kenneth Castleman—The new beauty of the naval set. Caught a chill while rehearsing for Troubetskoy tableaux. The stage was draughty and the costumes not voluminous. Developed pneumonia.

Mrs. Pembroke Jones—Mother of Sadie Jones, the Newport girl who wants to be an actress. She caught typhoid germs one day while drinking water at Narragansett Pier.

Mrs. Van Cutzen—Was Mamie Pomeroy, a sister of Mrs. Phil Clark. She caught cold sitting on the rocks near Hazards Beach one moonlight night with her husband. She will recover.

Mrs. Willis Carter—One of the Baltimore belles. She was Louise Polk. Ardent in the pursuit of amusement; loves polo. Had nervous breakdown in late August, when Willie wanted to play polo against the English.

Mr. Willis Carter—Is Mrs. Carter's husband. Horse Show judge and polo player at times. Had nervous collapse after keeping the score at the Narragansett Pier polo tournament.

Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt—Was Cathleen Neilson. Does play tennis, but spends time watching Reggie play. Was taken ill the day the doctor said Reggie had typhoid. Recovered in time to go to the Suffern Tailors' housewarming.

Mr. Reggie Vanderbilt—Mrs. Reggie's husband. Typhoid from over-exertion on the watertrough.

George Peabody—Edith Deacon's fiance. Overexertion on the tennis court and in playing love games. One of his activities is avoiding his first wife.

Mrs. Harry Lehr—Wife of Mr. Lehr. Nervous fever, due to too much roller skating and picture puzzling.

Mrs. Clarry Dolan—Wife of man of said name who frequents Elisha Dyer's club. Mrs. Dolan never recovered from the effects of her heroic rescue of Mrs. Clews, Sr.

Mrs. Joseph Widener—Was Miss Pancoast, of Philadelphia. Is great beauty. Is now at Hot Springs recovering from too much dining, bridge and posing for Prince Troubetskoy.

Mrs. Herbie Harriman—Was Miss May Brady Hall. Taken ill after losing a month's dress allowance at one rubber of bridge.

May Van Alen—Daughter of James Van Alen. Nervous fits, due to a fall on the Casino lawn one morning when she was practicing a hobble skirt of the most extreme sort.

Mrs. Reynolds Hitt—Daughter of Judge Clinton Gray. Was seriously ill the day after she discovered that Newport had forgotten her.

It was the poet and philosopher Lowell who refused to read stories of [illegible] in the newspapers of the day on the ground, considerations of phenomena once mastered, descriptions of its manifold repetitions, was useless and tiresome. Therefore this list as a premise for the figures and calculations to follow is sufficient.

As a sample of these interesting and carefully worked out calculations are the following:

If strong silken cords could have been attached to the ankles of the 200 women and men who danced uninterruptedly from midnight until 5 o'clock in the morning at Mrs. John R. Drexel's August ball, and the other ends of the cords had been attached to the piers and strands of the Brooklyn Bridge, the horse power equivalent to that energy consumed by the dancers would have pulled the bridge down before 8 o'clock. The resistant power of the bridge is 48,000 tons.

"Newport Has Had to Go to the Doctor. Newport, It Has Been Found, Is Overworked!"

Mrs. Jos. Widener, Who in One Day Expended Enough Energy to Paste "Votes for Women" On Every Newport Tree.

The United States has figured one man power at 1-10 a horse power. One horse will raise 33,000 pounds one foot in one minute. It would take 2,400 horses to develop sufficient power to lift 48,000 tons one foot in one minute, or 40 horses or 400 men in one hour. Two hundred men and women would require two hours to develop an equal amount of energy. As the ultimate strength of Brooklyn Bridge is 48,000 tons, it would seem that 200 men and women could easily demolish it in two hours, for they certainly dance with all their might.

Thus you will grasp the basis of my calculations: That pulling down the bridge would have been a perfectly useless sort of thing, indeed, a rather destructive achievement, does not matter—motive or object having no place in pure mathematics.

In the same way the amount of food eaten at one of New Berwind's big dinners is equivalent to the energy necessary to carry a company of American cavalry into the heart of Iceland.

The amount of refreshments at Suffern Taller's housewarming would have floated an eighty-ninth division of United States submarines.

Is it any wonder, therefore, that Newport is worn out; that complaints are heard everywhere against the hardness of the season. A typical Newport day has been like a typical day on Mars' canal, when the snow begins to melt from the polar caps.

Mr. Harry Lehr thus described it to me and complaining that Mrs. Lehr had broken down and was about to take the rest cure.

"But what can you expect! Mrs. Lehr, it seems, had had a particularly typical Newport day, the day of the married set—the day of the younger set has them beaten, as our late lamented resident says—Ha! ha! to a fr zzle! At 11 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Lehr attended the tennis tournament at the Casino, then she hurried off to Bailey's Beach for a swim, followed by a luncheon at home with six picked-up guests. Then over to Mrs. J. Widener's for Fifi's charming birthday fete. There Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs picked her up and, whiff, they were off! Mrs. Lehr loves to skate, so they motored over to the training station, four miles away, for the weekly party. Then they returned to Mrs. Oelrichs's to work out a most marvellous picture puzzle and drink tea. At 6:30 Mrs. Lehr hurried home to dress for Mrs. Ned Berwind's big dinner. After the dinner there was bridge for an hour or two, and then—whiff! they were off again for Mrs. John Drexel's dance, from which she returned at 5 o'clock in the morning! Whiff! whiff! whiff! day after day, eight weeks for a stretch. Is it any wonder she needs the rest cure?"

Oh, whiff! whiff! Oh, whiffest whiff! Indeed, is it a wonder! Whiff!

Just taking this one day of Mrs. Lehr's I figure that she expended the equivalent of 100 horse power in energy. That is just enough to make Senator Chauncey Depew tell a new funny story.

But what is the energy expended by a member of the younger set? It starts its day at 9 o'clock and closes its night usually at 5 o'clock in the morning. The girl who snatches six hours of sleep out of the twenty-four during the season is a rare bird. From 6 to 8:30 or 9 are the usual sleeping hours of a Newport belle.

And, of course, there must be men to follow. It was Edith Deacon's energy which laid low her fiance, George Lee Peabody, and which is still keeping him on the sick list. Miss Deacon played tennis for hours at a time with Mr. Peabody. He has generally been considered a strong man. But the day his first wife, Mrs. Elsie Copley Peabody, arrived in Newport Mr. Peabody collapsed on the Casino lawn. Had his energy not been misspent so upon tennis, he would have been able to have withstood the shock of Mrs. Peabody's appearance. But I cannot really figure that out in exact horse power terms. The combined energy of Miss Deacon and Mr. Peabody, if expended sensibly, would, however, I calculate, have been enough to build another Washington monument out of tennis racquets.

And as for eating! Before going into terms of energy let me go into detail. They begin at 9 o'clock in the morning with cantaloupe, eggs, chocolate and rolls. At 11 they have ice cream soda. At 12 they have another. At 2 they lunch heartily of soup, fish, meat and sweets—no quick lunches for the Newport belle. At 4:30 they eat sandwiches, salads and sweets, mixed with punch. At 6:30 they have a cup of chocolate served in their boudoirs. At 8 they dine—and how they do dine!

At luncheon they consume cocktails and flight wines. At dinner whiskeys and champagnes. Then finish dinner at 10, then they play bridge or dance. At 12:30 a buffet supper—cold birds salads, sweets are served. They dance again. At 4:30 a breakfast is served, consisting simple and hearty—fried eggs, coffee, corn pone. Is it any wonder, then, that Girlie Brown succumbed one afternoon at the Casino and was carried writhing away.

But eating alone composes not the joy of one of the younger set. After breakfast Bellevue [illegible] motor cycles and basket phaetons conveying them to the Casino. Here they play tennis, cleverly and strenuously, for two hours. Then they go to Bailey's Beach for a cool swim. Oh, three or four miles or so! Then come luncheon. If no one has a post luncheon bridge game, the girls motor out to the golf club or his themselves to Hazard's Beach, where they can smoke undetected. At the golf club they play over the eighteen holes, and help deplete the wine closets. By 4:30 they are back in town for some reception or a garden party. After dinner they go to one or sometimes two dances; perhaps they go to Freebody Park between dinner and the first dance and thrill with the aerobats and trained animals. The dances always continue until [illegible].

Some of the dances, notably those given at Sandy Point and Oakland Farms, are held nine miles from town. This means a delicious ride before beds are reached.

Sandwiched in between these daily compulsory events are rehearsals for charitable affairs, flirtations, duty calls and trips into the country.

I have estimated the energy consumed by one of the younger set in eating in political terms. If I added the energy consumed by all of them in other things to this I figure that enough power would be at hand to [illegible] Bay's normal to the Statue of Liberty and drag her to the shore of Ireland—but I cannot give you the figures.

Mrs. Pembroke Jones was taken quite seriously ill at the height of the season. Dr. Austin Flint, Jr., gave up his lucrative New York practice to take charge of her case. The Joneses had planned a wonderful season.

With Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's absence and her lovely new home, one expected to become first lady of Newport. Her plans included a series of twenty dinners, three a week, followed by a monkey show of some kind, a series of four balls and a number of luncheons for Sadie, her daughter. Aside from these, Mrs. Jones knew that she would have invitations for every day. In fact, she would be at home only when she was entertaining. For extra occasions she could give parties in Commodore Walter's big white yacht, the Varada. Just as this progress was in full swing Mrs. Jones broke down. If the energy had been expended wisely, she would have made a Himalaya out of the Bailey Beach sand hills.

Mrs. Craig Biddle, Robert Goelet's sister-in-law, was taken ill in the middle of tennis week. She was sent to the New York Hospital, and while in seclusion she counted up the pleasures she had had during the first two weeks of the season. Out of twenty-eight luncheons, she had eaten eight at home; out of twenty-eight dinners she had eaten five at home; on twenty-four nights of the twenty-eight she had danced or played bridge until daylight—the other four were Sunday nights! Twenty-one mornings had been spent on the tennis courts; twenty-five afternoons at the golf links or at one of the cottages playing bridge. Every Wednesday afternoon had been spent roller skating at the training school.

Craig is perfectly bald. Taking into consideration the difficulty of growing hair and allowing 50 per cent for it, the energy of Mrs. Biddle, devoted to promoting the growth of Mr. Biddle's hair, would have produced in a week a length of two and a half inches and a four-foot beard!

Mrs. Joe Widener has been sent to the Hot Springs to recover from the season. By actual count, more people entered her house from July 1 to September 5 than that of any other hostess. Mrs. Widener did not give any large entertainments, but she kept everlastingly at it. The energy she spent in feeding her friends and in eating feeds provided by her friends would have been sufficient to paste "Votes for Women" on every tree in Rhode Island.

If all the energy expended by Mrs. Ladenburg in keeping her daughter away from Newport, and all the energy expended by May in getting home were put into volts, there would be enough electricity to send one hundred and seven wireless messages of love between Bob Chanler and Lina Cavalieri. If the energy of May Van Alen and mental toll of keeping tabs on Jimmy were translated into volts, there would be enough to send two hundred or abrogate that marriage contract.

If all the thought and mental energy consumed by Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt in one night of bridge were transferred to seven burglars, those seven burglars could in three hours strip Newport of all its valuables.

Is it any wonder that our serious casualties number one out of seven! But enough. I have not dwelt much upon the liquid menus of Newport.

Nor have I spoken of the energy consumed in flirting. There are some totals too vast for the human mind to contemplate. All I have desired to do is to show how hard Newport works and to refute the slander that our set is idle. Work out the calculations for yourselves. Another such season and there will be no Newport.

Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt's Nerve Expenditure on Bridge Would Have Enabled Seven Burglars to Rob Newport in a Night.

Mrs. Craig Biddle's Social Activity in Terms of Horse Power Would Have Grown 2½-Inch Hair on a Bald Head.

New Creations by Lady Duff-Gordon Which Sound the Note of an Artistic Plainness

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous Lucile of London, and the foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion page for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her models in her London or New York establishments or by exclusive photographs of the Parisian modes.

This week she writes of "Simple Gowns" and describes some she made for Miss Pauline Chase, the "Pink Pajama Girl" and Miss Lillian Braithwaite, the beautiful English actress.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, N. Y. City.

"Lucile Study" in Gray Charmeuse with Embroideries of Silver and Gray Net.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

I CALL these gowns seemingly simple, because that is what they are. They look simple, have just the right touch of artistic plainness, but one of the hardest things in the world is to be artistically simple, and that is where the seemingly comes in. All the gowns on this page were made for two very charming actresses, Pauline Chase, your "Pink Pajama Girl," now with the "Our Miss Gibbs" company, and beautiful Lillian Braithwaite, in her new play at Wyndham's Theatre, in London.

The first Braithwaite dress is gray charmeuse, its softly draped folds of corsage and tunic outlined with bordering bands of gray net, on which bright silver roses are embroidered on a trellis work of dull silver thread. Just the faintest [illegible] from the softness of chiffon and in the threaded ribbons beneath [illegible] toned lace [illegible] and another [illegible] on the sleeves.

The [illegible] pale pink [illegible] the [illegible] with ivory toned [illegible] est [illegible] And last [illegible] lace, though I have no picture to prove [illegible] is a gown of vieux rose charmeuse, with just some mellow toned lace on the corsage, and folded above the waist, soft swathings of orange, mandarin yellow and a mauve, which has something of blue in its shadings.

A cloak for Miss Braithwaite is in black crepe satin, lined with china blue, and edged with a fold of satin and a narrow band of gold galon, the collar being of rose hued satin, broidered with navy blue.

And then here is a cloak made for Miss Braithwaite with all the exceeding effectiveness of a mantle of night-blue satin charmeuse whose left draping about the figure, and whose flinging of the scarf end of the great hood over one shoulder combine to reveal the presence of a lining of rose-hued crepe de Chine, there being no touch of trimming introduced to break its supreme and successful simplicity, but just one great silken tassel to finish off the aforementioned scarf and by its weight to keep it in permanent position.

Black crepe de Chine lined in the geranium pink in such a way that its burnous-like folds can be worn with either color in outward evidence may also be noted as typical of another new phase in those evening cloaks which depend chiefly for their effect on daring color contrasts and boldly simple outlines.

As to the other and more elaborate affairs—whose cost is in proportion to their beauty, I assure you—what do you say to a scheme of rose-hued charmeuse lined with chiffon of the same lovely shade and so arranged that it can be flung wide open and left to hang loosely like a court train from the shoulders, in which position I need hardly tell you that it provides a perfect background on which to silhouette a good figure and frock.

This cloak is then provided with scarfs of chiffon, which pass over the shoulders, cross the corsage and are then threaded beneath an encircling band of pink pearls, being eventually festooned to the depth of the knees so that really they form quite a trimming for the dress, which—for a theatre visit or any role—can consequently be of the plainest. Pearls are, indeed, very much in evidence in most of the trimmings and broideries and I have seen them in soft blue and gray and black, shimmering like stray moonbeams, on a wrap of night-blue satin charmeuse, lined with a pale blue, while still again, and in a more defined blue, they are studded closely on the white net borderings of a black crepe de Chine cloak.

And now I pass on to Polly Chase's dresses.

Every one who has seen "Our Miss Gibbs" has exclaimed at the beautiful Miss Pauline Chase's girlish gowns worn in the piece. They were made by Lucile. She wears a white gown, a blue robe trimmed with silver, and a white chiffon coat, each perfection in its class.

The white gown is a pretty adaptation of the extreme style, the hobble gown. It has something of a Turkish effect with the white lace ruffles gathered about her feet and extending six inches below the white chiffon that forms the gown proper. The chiffon falls in straight folds from shoulder to ankles—or would, were it not drawn in a scant inch above the waist line with a gold girdle that hangs in a long, straight, flat piece, from the waist to instep. The girdle is of wrought gold, the front woven in flat though rope-like effect that is indescribably rich.

The girlish gown is cut square and rather low in front and back, and is finished with flat gold bands at irregular intervals, the widest space, between the second and third rows, being picked out with clusters of gold knots. A tiny flat bow of gold ribbon finishes the middle of the front of the neck. The sleeves reach a point two inches above the elbow. Over the front of the bodice falls a white gauze, wrought in squares with gold thread.

With this gown Miss Chase wears a black velvet scoop hat bound round with a flat band of pink satin ribbon.

Over the right ear hangs a pink rose made of satin ribbon. The other robe is of pale blue chiffon, cut also in straight lines, and made scant. The rounding decolletage is finished with a graduated flounce of beaded chiffon. The gown is confined with a high girdle of silver, a flat band worked in conventional design, of crossed diagonal lines. The same silver trimming extends from the bust to the feet, in two lines six inches apart, and joined by pearl ornaments with small fringed pendants. At the knees a band of the silver trimming extends around the gown and from this hang long pendants of silver beads. The skirt is finished by a narrow flounce of chiffon. Like all smart frocks of the new season, the gown is made over a chiffon lining and the lining is trimmed with ribbon in folds around the figure. Both gowns are of the round length, just escaping the floor.

The coat is of draped chiffon, hanging in full, straight folds. The sleeves are large, loose and gathered. The coat is edged with white marabout around the neck hem and sides and sleeves. The lower front corners of the coat are finished with appliqued velvet flowers, red poppies that give a vivid touch to an exquisite costume. Miss Chase wears with this a folded turban of white chiffon. About the face is a ruffle of lace, and at the back and side a high white willow plume.

Several old favorites — comparatively old" that is, for brief life is the position of most of Fashion's proteges, and even close family connections!—are to keep their pride of place in spite of the change of season and style, and as their value has already been well proved, and as, moreover, they are endowed with many extra attractions, they are being welcomed with all the enthusiasm usually showered upon absolute newcomers. To begin with, there are the scarfs and the stoles, which, in one form or another, are ready to give grace and finish to almost every type of day and evening toilette. The vogue of velvet is responsible for the replacing of the erstwhile universal satin scarf with these made of velvet, black being generally used, and the satin being relegated to the merely secondary position of a lining, and being either of white, mauve or champagne tones. Such scarfs are long and wide, and are eventually drawn into the bondage of a handsome and deeply fringed ornament of silk cord and lace braid, while an even more striking novelty in velvet is permanently arranged in the form of a military scarf, being slipped over the head of the wearer and then, after crossing the right shoulder, fastening low down on the left hip.

These are both, of course, destined for daytime wear, while others can positively do duty as a wrap over the evening gowns, of such width and length is their shimmering softness of black satin set off by a lining of, say, palest pink, while set just at one side will be a bunch of roses, whose folded pleats are of shaded pink satin.

Less protective, but assuredly very pretty, are some softly colored scarfs of filmy but strongly meshed net—pale blue, green, old rose or mauve—all worked with dull silver thread in a design as fine as a cobweb, while just a few show a gossamer tracery of dull gold. These being so dainty and light, and comparatively inexpensive, too, are well suited to girlish wearers, for whom also pastel or white chiffon and heron scarfs bordered with swansdown are distinctly becoming.

But among the more elaborate affairs the great novelty is the veiling of vividly colored crepe de chine with filmy black heron, sapphire blue shadings being most favored for the lining, as indeed it is for many other purposes at the moment.

WHAT BECOMES of the GREAT TRIAL "HEROINES"

Florence Burns, in the Depths; Nan Patterson, Wholly Discredited; Mrs. Bradley, Friendless; Claudia Hains, Disgraced; Mrs. Nack, Exiled—All Gone from Bad to Worse!

WHEN, after nine years the name of Florence Burns in large headlines of criminal news suddenly again stared newspaper readers in the face, there was natural curiosity respecting whereabouts of other heroines of great murder trials.

For a few weeks, sometimes for months, they fill the public eye. They are more talked and read about than the star of the most successful play in town. One stares at their pictures every morning over one's coffee. They are in every mind. Their names are on every tongue.

The trial ends. The heroine of the trial has given her evidence as witness-in-chief, or she has been acquitted and passes from the stage. One sees her no more. One reads of her no more. The waves of a great city's changing life close over her and she is swept away among the forgotten.

But the ghost of her memory stirs. It moves persons to say: "What has become of her? Why, so we never hear of her any more! How is she getting on?"

Sometimes they remain forgotten and are glad to sink into contented oblivion. Sometimes, as in the case of Florence Burns, they rise into a new and more horrible notoriety. When, nine years ago, the beautiful Brooklyn girl was arrested, charged with the murder of the man who had betrayed and, she believed, was about to desert her, there was an undercurrent of sympathy for her. Families quarrelled at dinner about the probability of her guilt or innocence. When she was acquitted the public was of a mind with the Great Teacher, who said to a frail offender against the law of purity: "Go and sin no more."

But it seems that the girl had not used well the decade since the time when she was a heroine of one of the greatest trials ever held in New York. She married a man who said he could afford to be generous to her because he, too, had broken laws. He proposed that they should begin a new life, lending each other their new strength and determination.

But they did not tread the way long together. Mrs. Wildrick brought suit against a young business woman for alienation of her husband's affections. She changed the suit to one for divorce. A fortnight ago she and a companion were arrested for that hawklike crime on which men and women of the underworld thrive, the "badger" game. Her companion's last name was the same as that of the lover whom she had been charged with killing, though this fact is only a coincidence.

What is material is that the Burns girl, minus her youth, lacking much of the beauty that had made its appeal to every one who looked into her face during the great trial, is precisely where she was nine years ago, a prisoner in the Tombs awaiting trial. Her sullen excuse for having sunk into the depths instead of rising to the heights was: "The men all want to make love to me."

Weak willed, she had been blown by the breath of fate as an autumn leaf in the wind.

With no ballast of firm will to hold her steady, a sport of every new eddy of circumstance is Nan Patterson, charged with having killed her lover, Caesar Young, and released after a second trial in which the jury could not agree. There was hope for a new and better life for the girl when she was freed from her eleven months' imprisonment in the Tombs. Her former husband, Leon Martin, remarried her. But he went to Los Angeles to build a new home and carve a new fortune for them. And Fate began to play tricks again as Fate loves to do with the weak of will.

Puff! It whirled the pretty showgirl out of the course of her journey to Los Angeles, where her young husband lay ill and where he had sent for her, and blew her into Pittsburg, where in a short time she was the belle of a roadhouse near McKeesport.

A young millionaire was fascinated by her. They went on such rapid automobile spins that he required a new automobile every week. Eventually the police ordered her to leave Pittsburg and the young millionaire's family sent him to a sanatorium to cure the drink habit and to rebuild his shattered nerves. The girl whom it was believed no jury could ever convict of the crime of murder, went pointedly out of the little burg, not to her husband, but back to the broken old parents at Washington. But within a few months her name was connected with the mysterious attempt to shoot a young bank cashier.

The fortunes of Mrs. Annie M. Bradley, charged, as were the others with the crime of killing her lover, a former United States Senator from Utah, were followed by readers of the newspapers in every corner of the United States while her trial progressed in Washington. The jury acquitted her, but coldly blew the breath of the Nemesis of the murderess upon her. She returned to Salt Lake City to learn the bitterness of poverty and friendlessness.

She and her four children lived in a tumbledown two-room hut in the outskirts of Salt Lake City, and she tried to support herself and them by truck farming. The children picked up fuel in the neighborhood, lumps of coal thrown from passing engines, wood that had dropped from wood cutters' wagons. She tried to get work, but the prejudice against having "that Bradley woman" about which men encountered in their homes kept the forlorn heroine of the trial beyond the pale, and, what hurt her infinitely more, kept her out of work. For a long time the family subsisted on the $4 a week which Mathew, the oldest of her four children, earned in a telephone office. Finally Mrs. Bradley secured work as a bookkeeper, and one morning while walking to her work to save car fare, she fell on the sleet-covered street and broke her arm.

Fate blew with icy breath upon every endeavor of hers, until two weeks ago, Judge Powers, whose brilliant oratory saved her life, procured from the estate of the late ex-Senator Arthur Brown $21,000, to be invested in trust for their two children, Arthur Brown, Jr. and Mark Montgomery Bown.

Claudia Hains, young, beautiful, loving life, is expiating her unfaithfulness as wife and mother, in a New Hampshire village, whither the story of the murder of her lover by her husband followed her and where she suffers the severe disapproval and the cold-shouldering of that severest and coldest of judges, a New England community. Her distinguished father-in-law, General Hains, in petitioning the Governor for a pardon for his son, Peter Hains may walk the ways of most men again, but Claudia Hains will walk the path of the smaller number of women, a path paved with the burning stones of shame.

Bertha Claiche, who slew Emile Gendron, the man who lived upon the wages of her shame, and who as the white slave of that trial, was one of the best known and most pitied of the lurid gallery of trial stars, served her two years in Auburn Prison, was released, charitable women collected a fund to establish her in a dressmaking and embroidering shop, and her purposes were foiled in a strange way.

An inexplicable illness laid hold upon her. Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, the head of the Volunteers of America, placed her in a sanitarium in Pennsylvania, and there this weak leaf at the sport of the wind of fate lay trembling at the will of the unknown power so much stronger than herself.

Marie Barbieri killed a man because he had betrayed her, and a wave of pity swept her out of prison and out of the courtroom a free woman. She married and her husband went to Italy and never came back. Unequal to the struggle of caring for their four children Marie Barbieri accepted the companionship of one of her countrymen.

A disheveled, draggled figure, her early blooming beauty withered by the cold winds of circumstance, she drifted into a police court and tremblingly complained that she feared this man with the coarse voice and the heavy hand. She asked the protection of the court against the man who had offered to protect her.

Evelyn Granville, whose beauty and talent had made her a favorite actress and singer, was the heroine of the famous Webster-Granville trial. It was her testimony which saved the life of the man who had killed his friend, Goodwin had tried to steal her affections. She pretended in court an infant, and a lawyer pleaded for the murderer's life for the child's sake. Afterward Miss Granville confessed that the infant was borrowed for this dramatic purpose. Webster's life was spared, but he was sentenced to prison for nineteen years.

Recently he finished his term and came forth a broken man, the mere shell of a man. If he made any inquiries about Evelyn Granville he would have heard from a score of his old friends that she had slipped farther and farther down the descent. She had been arrested more times than she could count. She had served a term on Blackwell's Island. When Webster was released from Sing Sing Miss Granville was a prisoner in the workhouse at Pittsburg, sent there for vagrancy.

Mrs. Nack, whose lover, Martin Thorn, killed her former admirer, Guldensuppe, and helped him cut up the body and cast it into a drain, served her term at Auburn, was freed and tried to open a shop in New York. No one would patronize her. She failed, and declared she must go to Europe where the crime was unknown, to save herself from starvation.

The beautiful Italian girl, Josephine Terranova, the heroine of the trial of one of the most revolting yet piteous cases ever tried in New York, has maintained an absolute seclusion. Out from that seclusion has drifted a rumor that she has remarried and is happy. She enjoys the obscurity that is so often happiness. Nemesis has spared the child who had suffered so much.

Edna McClure, Thaw Trial Will-o'-the-Wisp," Who Almost Became a "Heroine."

Nan Patterson, of the Caesar Young Trial, Who Lost Her Second Chance to "Come Back."

Truly Shattuck, Who Still Suffers from a Trial Long Past.

"They are like rustling leaves, these women, blown helplessly hither and yon by the breath of a malignant Fate."

But it has not spared Truly Shattuck, the actress who had been characterized as "the brunette Lillian Russell." Long ago, when she was emerging from childhood, she was the unfortunate figure in a case resembling that which Stanford White expiated with his life. The crime of another has thrown its long shadow over her life. She has not enjoyed continued success nor happiness. Last month she was declared a bankrupt.

They called Edna McClure the will-o'-the-wisp of the famous Thaw trials. First she was going to testify. Then she wasn't. She said she spent a snug fortune on cab hire to and from and waiting at the District Attorney's office. It was announced again and again that she would be a witness in one of those trials, that she knew of a threat made by Thaw against White two years before the murder. Perhaps it was because she was not called as a witness that the ill health she is said to have followed those who participated in the trial, the long strain of misfortunes, beginning with the death of one of Thaw's ablest attorneys, the tragic death of the wife of another, the death of a juror's wife, a long procession not yet terminating, escaped the lovely Miss McClure.

Nemesis ceased its maleficent putting and smiled upon the fair head of the will-o'-the-wisp. Fortune then bestowed upon her a rich husband, a Western mining operator.

She is the exception. Of course she was not a real "heroine"—just threatened to be.

But for a real "heroines"—they are like rustling leaves, blown helplessly hither and yon by the breath of a malignant Fate.

Hints for the Visiting Girl

THE girl who is always welcome at her friends' houses, either for a week-end or a few weeks, is the girl who is careful to study her hostess in small things, who does not want to have the whole domestic routine upset to suit her convenience, but who thoughtfully arranges her plans so as to fit in with them, and causes her hostess as little trouble as possible.

The following rules should always be observed by the girl who visits as a guest in other people's houses:

Not to make any plans and engagements without first consulting your hostess as to whether they will cause her any inconvenience in her arrangements.

Take care to be down to breakfast unless your hostess wishes you to have it in your own room.

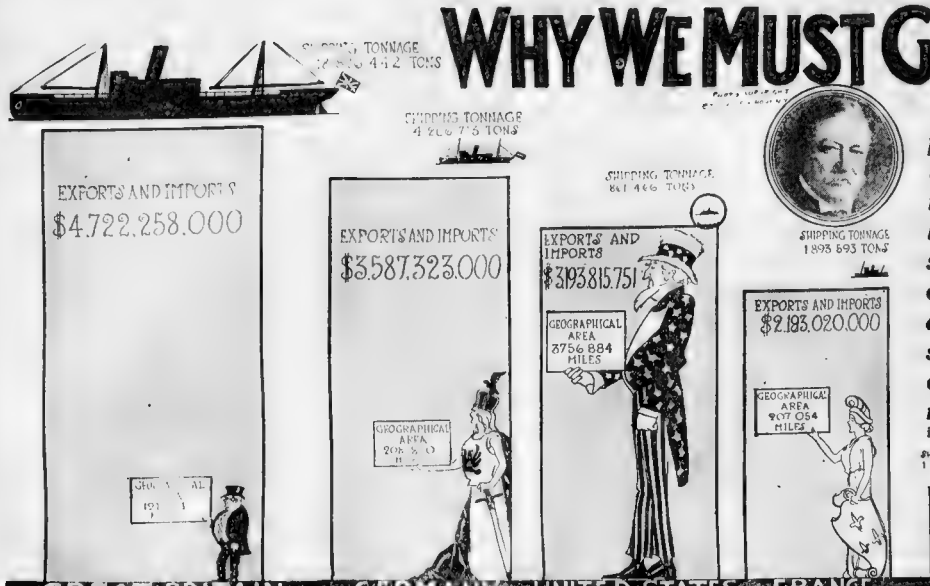
Don't write to friends and ask them to visit you until you find it ascertained whether such visitors will be welcomed by your hostess.

Do not insist upon playing the piano and singing in the evening, if your host wishes to read his evening paper in peace.

Never leave your bedroom in disordered, untidy state; devote a short time every morning to putting the room straight. This will leave less work for the maid.

Finally, never prolong your visit beyond the date fixed for your departure unless urged to do so by your hostess.

WHY WE MUST GET BACK OUR LO



A comparative diagram showing the relative sizes of each country's imports and exports, merchant marine and geographical area. The size of each figure approximately indicates territory, the square miles owned by each nation being indicated in the square held by the figures. The block in which they stand represents the comparative bulk of their annual imports and exports. The ships at the top are in accurate proportion to each country's merchant marine. The ship above Uncle Sam has been magnified 18 times, in order that it might be visible. Its true proportion is 1-18th of its size as drawn here.

How We Have Lost Our Ships, And How We Can Regain Them.

By FIELDS S. PENDLETON, Principal New York Shipbuilder.

PROTECTION on land and free trade on the seas is the real explanation for the decline of the American merchant marine Our high tariff had two important effects on this country It has increased the cost of commodities by keeping out foreign competition, and it has brought about the payment of higher wages to labor

The shipbuilder in America has not only to pay more for the materials of which he is going to build his ship, but he has to pay higher wages for his labor than any other nation It costs more to build an American ship than to build a ship of any other nation.

But that is equally true, it will be said, of every other article that is manufactured in this country, the cost of materials and labor being greater than it is in other countries. The answer to this is apparent. All our industries which require it are protected by the tariff, with the single exception of shipping

We don't allow a single ton of iron or steel to come into this country without paying a duty. But the product of iron and steel in the shape of foreign merchant ships is permitted without any tax or duty to enter our ports and capture our carrying trade from under our very noses That is what I refer to as free trade on the seas.

I do not attack the principles of protection which have brought about higher prices and higher wages here, but I deplore the fact that the same principle has not been extended to that most valuable of all national industries—the merchant marine. That this inconsistent policy is the direct cause of the humiliating position in which the United States finds itself to-day with respect to its merchant marine is confirmed by our own history.

When this country was in its infancy, as far back as 1789, the first Congress passed an act providing that tariff duties should be 10 per cent lower upon goods imported in ships built and owned by Americans In that way the principle of protection was extended to the shipping industry, and the consequence was it flourished Between 1789 and 1796 American shipbuilding and commerce grew by leaps and bounds, the merchant shipping engaged in the foreign trade increasing from 123,893 tons to 576,733 tons within the seven years. This is a practical illustration of the discriminating duties principle as Lewis Nixon calls it, or the preferential duty plan, as I prefer to call it. In 1810 90 per cent of our foreign trade was carried in American vessels and 10 per cent in foreign vessels. To-day the figures are just reversed

Although in 1815 Congress modified its protective policy in favor of shipping by removing the discriminating duties as far as British ships were concerned, and gradually, nation by nation, extended its generous policy to the ships of all nations as we were nevertheless able to maintain our stronghold on the carrying trade while ships continued to be made of wood, because of the endless resources of our forests and the skill of our woodsmen We were able not only to build our own ships, but to build ships for other countries But the time of iron vessels eventually arrived, and England, with her well-developed iron industries, had a tremendous advantage over us

To overcome this advantage, other nations started giving subsidies to their merchant ships, and England adopted the same policy and maintained her supremacy of the seas. But we could have overcome all these handicaps had we afforded our ships the same sort of protection as we granted our other industries which suffered through foreign competition This we have unfortunately neglected to do ever since the repeal of the wise acts of our early days as a nation

That is the main reason why American capital is not attracted by the shipping industry. The fact that our navigation laws have fixed a food schedule and wage scale for the sailors which are higher than those of any other nation, and consequently increase operating expenses so that it is impossible for us to compete with foreign ships is another factor.

We do not wish to reduce the wages of the American sailor, nor do we wish to reduce the standard of his food, supplies and quarters. It is not necessary to do so We could overcome the handicap which these items entail by the system of discriminating duties We could likewise accomplish the same effect by a generous policy of subsidies or subventions, only this latter plan has met with great opposition, because the average man looks upon it as a gift of public moneys to private enterprises. However this may be, no such criticism can be made of the discriminating or preferential duty proposition.

I would confine it to only what is known as the indirect trade. The direct trade is where an English ship brings goods direct from England. In such cases I would allow merchandise to come in without any additional duty. But in the indirect trade, as where an English ship brings goods from a German port, a French port or an Italian port, I would impose an additional duty, so that foreign shippers would find it profitable to ship their goods in American owned vessels. A demand being thus created for American bottoms, capital would find the shipping industry attractive, and the rehabilitation of the merchant marine would soon follow

I am now preparing a bill covering this plan. The additional duty on goods carried in foreign vessels would be raised gradually, an increase of 1 per cent being imposed for the first year, of 2 per cent for the second year, and so on until a total of 5 per cent was reached. A period of five years would by that time have elapsed, and would have given capital time to look into the proposition and to build enough new ships to avail itself of the new conditions.

Under present conditions, it is true, it is impossible to operate a ship under the American flag except at a loss, but the margin of loss is not very considerable Of course, capital is not concerned very much whether it would lose 1 per cent or 100 per cent, the mere fact that it cannot engage in a given industry except at a loss being sufficient to deflect it to other channels But the fact that the increased cost of shipbuilding and operation results in only a slight loss is important, because it means that just a little help from the Government would turn the industry from a losing proposition into a profitable one The preferential duty plan would provide just this help.

The plan of free ships—that is to say, of permitting Americans to buy foreign vessels or to build them abroad and fly them under the American flag—has a few advocates, but doesn't seem very promising When the Merchant Marine Commission was conducting its investigation into the question some years ago, an enquiry was made of prominent American capitalists who held interest in foreign shipping companies as to whether they would fly the American flag if the law permitted it, and they said, with one accord, that they would not do so The cost of operating under the American flag is so much greater than it is under the flag of other nations, whose sailors are not so well taken care of, that a loss would necessarily result. This was well illustrated in the case of the big liners, the Kroonland and the Finland, which were built by Americans in America and operated under the American flag but were shortly afterwards transferred to a foreign register.

The subsidy plan would, I have no doubt, be effective, but it has met with uniform opposition It doesn't seem possible to educate the people up to the fact that the nation owes it to its shipbuilders and ship owners to protect them the same as it protects its other industries But the preferential duty plan necessitates no appropriation, but on the contrary, like the tariff, would increase our revenues In the light of this fact, it seems to me to be the most practicable solution of the great problem.

Building the Panama Canal for Others.

In the Panama Canal the United States is building the most costly engineering work ever undertaken, for the purpose of bringing the Atlantic and Pacific coasts nearer together, but the benefit will go almost entirely to foreigners, because about 90 per cent of the ships that pass through the canal will be foreign, unless we build a merchant marine

The United States will expend about $20,000,000 a year in capital cost and $3,333,000 yearly in maintenance —$23,333,000 altogether—for the benefit of foreign shipping.

The total cost of the Panama Canal, when completed, is now estimated at $375,000,000—which includes $20,000,000 for sanitation, $7,382,000 for civil administration, and the $50,000,000 originally paid by our Government for the property and franchise. Many authorities believe that the total will exceed that. Lewis Nixon says $500,000,000.

Five years ago the Board of Consulting Engineers appointed by the President, reported that the cost of the canal would be a little less than $140,000,000 The fact that considerably more than twice that much will be spent on it is attributable partly to an enlargement of the plans.

The $375,000,000 above mentioned does not include the $14,000,000 which is now demanded by the War Department for building forts to defend the canal against a possible enemy No details in regard to the fortifications have been settled, but it is understood that there will be two first-class modern fortresses at each end of the canal, while supplementary forts will be required for the protection of the locks—these being the most vulnerable points

To date the Panama Canal has cost $215,000,000 The expense of building it comes to about $3,000,000 a month, and, at the present time, there are 37,000 men at work on it, including those engaged in the relocation and reconstruction of the Panama Railroad.

When the canal is finished a small army of men and a great number of officials will be required to maintain and operate it. The annual expenses have been estimated at $3,935,000.

Now, how does the Government of the United States propose to get back the money which it is spending on the Panama Canal—or even a reasonable interest on the investment? The answer is that it entertains no such hope

The report of the Isthmian Canal Commission for 1901 estimates the annual traffic of the canal at 7,000,000 tons, which, at $1 per ton, would produce a revenue of $7,000,000 But suppose it to run up to twice this figure It would still yield only a very small interest on the investment after the expenses of maintenance, operation and military defense were paid

It was suggested by the Commission that our Government might find it expedient to place the canal tolls at an amount which would barely cover the cost of operation and maintenance

There is no question that the canal ought to be of enormous usefulness to us for trade purposes. It would be so if we had the ships But we have no ships In this country we produce on a gigantic scale merchandise which, nearly all of it, is carried by foreign vessels flying alien flags They will find the canal a very great convenience and a great source of revenue

This wonderful engineering achievement, if proper advantage were taken of it, would give to the United States the greatest uplift of prosperity it has ever known

For one thing, we could easily have the trade of the west coast of South America, which is now mainly with Europe After the opening of the canal it will turn to us if we have the ships Considering distance alone our Atlantic ports will have an advantage of 2 000 to 3,000 miles in the journey to that part of the world, whereas to-day, when ships must go by way of Cape Horn, the distances are nearly equal, the ports of southern Europe being slightly nearer.

The canal, unquestionably will be a great thing for our Gulf ports A large part of the export and import trade of the Mississippi Valley will be drawn to those ports The canal will give the Southern States a new market on our Pacific Coast, and on the west coast of South America—particularly for raw cotton

A large part of the vast commerce that now goes via Suez will be diverted to Panama. Shipments between Atlantic and Gulf ports and Japan, the Philippines, Australia and the Continent of Asia north of Hongkong, will usually go by way of Panama. Incidentally, the manufacturing and commercial progress of New York, Boston and other North Atlantic ports will be greatly encouraged. To cite one item merely, a short water route for shipping machinery at a reasonable freight rate from New York to California, Hawaii, and the west coast of South America, will be a most important commercial advantage

Through the opening of the canal the manufactures and raw materials of the Central West will find new outlets—especially for grain, provisions, agricultural machinery, wooden ware, vehicles, tools and implements of all kinds, stoves, engines and other iron and steel products The Pacific Coast will be not less benefited California will send her wheat, barley, lumber, fruit, nuts and wine to the Atlantic States and to Europe at charges for transportation much reduced

The only drawback to all these benefits is that foreigners, who own the ships, will carry our merchandise through the canal, as they do everywhere else serious defects in our national system of defence and commerce. It means that we are paying $300,000,000 a year to foreigners that might be spent at home that we have no colliers and no supply ships flying our own flag to support our battle fleet that our fleet will be crippled for long cruises in time of war, that we have no reserve seamen for our fleet, that we are spending $400,000,000 on the Panama Canal for the benefit of foreign shipping, and that in case of war between two great maritime powers in Europe we should be half ruined through the lack of ships to carry our commerce

Not the least remarkable feature of the situation is that fifty years ago we rivalled England as the leading shipowning country of the world. We then carried 65 per cent of our own commerce. In 1860 we carried 65 per cent. We now carry only 9 per cent. Our former maritime strength has gradually dwindled away because Americans were too much occupied with internal development to discover the political and economic advantages of a great ocean-going fleet.

When our lake and domestic shipping is added to our ocean shipping, the total brings us up from the last to the second place among the great ship-owning powers. Why cannot the enterprise and seamanship which have created the lake fleet also create an ocean fleet?

To-day all Americans are awakening to the fact that we are a crippled nation as long as we have not a national mercantile marine. The only way to create this is to give public encouragement to building and sailing ships under the American flag.

We are shut out of the great world movement by lack of shipping. Our citizens miss the training in world knowledge they would obtain by going to sea. We are made insular and provincial by our exclusion from the seas.

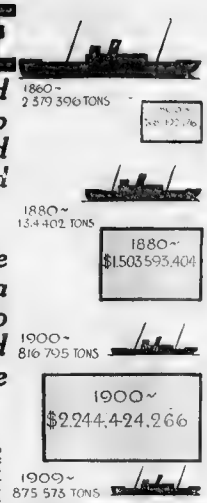
Our lack of a mercantile marine is helping the Japanese to turn the Pacific into a Japanese lake, and will enormously increase their strength in any struggle which may take place there. They are straining every nerve to increase their merchant fleet. It is an essential support of their navy. When the Panama Canal is built their ships will enjoy a greatly increased trade through it, and their naval strength will be increased at our expense through the growth of their merchant marine.

It is useless to expect that Americans can build ships in competition with the established organization, vast shipyards and cheap labor of Germany and England without national assistance, but when sufficient encouragement has been given to establish the American industry on a large scale capital will flow into it, and a splendid career for our boys will be opened.

Three different propositions have been urged. The first favors a direct subsidy, the idea being to make actual cash donations to private shipping lines to aid them in overcoming the competition of foreign lines whose ships are built and operated more cheaply than ours. The second proposition, which is urged by Lewis Nixon and Fields S. Pendleton, both experienced shipbuilders, is known as the discriminating or preferential duty plan. The principal feature of this is to levy an additional duty on imports brought into this country in foreign ships.

The third proposition is referred to as "free ships," which involves an amendment of our navigation laws so that the protection of the American flag would be extended to ships built or bought abroad but owned by Americans. Under the present law the American flag may fly only above ships built here and manned by American sailors.

Mr. Pendleton, who has built more ships flying the American flag than any man in New York, explains on this page how the preferential duty would work.



A Diagram Showing the decrease in United States Shipping Since 1860, and Import and Export Increase.

12 Facts That Shame Us

1—Fifty years ago 65 per cent of our foreign commerce was carried in American ships. To-day we carry only 9 per cent of it.

2—We are spending about $400,000,000 on the Panama Canal, but we have practically no ships to send through it.

3—We have more navigable rivers leading into the sea than any other nation, but they carry our commerce to the foreign ships in wait for it.

4—In the event of a European war, our exports of nearly $2,000,000,000 a year would rot in our ports for lack of ships to deliver them.

5—American capitalists hold over $200,000,000 worth of stock in foreign steamship companies.

6—The freight paid on our foreign commerce amounts to some $300,000,000 a year; if we had our own merchant marine this enormous sum would remain here. As it is, it goes to foreigners.

7—When our fleet went around the world, foreign colliers were hired to coal it, and our jackies never sighted an American merchant ship.

8—The foreign ships engaged in our commerce return home for repairs, and store foreign food and supplies in their home ports, so that they do not have to patronize our markets.

9—We spend $30,000,000 a year for the improvement of our harbors for the benefit of foreign ships.

10—In 1909 we imported $1,311,920,224 worth of merchandise and exported $1,663,011,104 worth, an apparent balance in our favor of $351,090,880; but this balance was practically wiped out by the enormous amount of freight we paid to foreign shipping interests.

11—In the course of one month 202 steamships passed through the Suez Canal. Of these 173 were British, 42 German, 16 French, 14 Dutch, 11 Russian, 8 Australian, 7 Italian, 6 Japanese, 6 Turkish, 4 Norwegian, 2 Spanish, 1 Egyptian, 1 Danish and 1 American.

12—The tonnage of our present merchant marine engaged in foreign trade is only 861,000 tons, while it would require 5,000,000 tons to carry merely half our own commerce.

"A Stunted Phase of Our National Development."

By Hon. E. T. CHAMBERLAIN, United States Commissioner of Navigation.

THAT the American battleship fleet, on its voyage around the globe, had to employ foreign vessels to carry its fuel supply naturally gave rise to much satirical comment, but the remarks of Admirals Evans and Sperry, referring to the utter absence of American ships in all the foreign ports they visited, bore a painful significance.

They found no ships in those ports because ships flying the American flag have almost entirely vanished from the seas. Our merchant marine, once a source of national pride, no longer exists. It passed out of existence substantially with the Civil War, and we have never thought it worth while to recreate it.

This is a pity for several important reasons, chief among which is the fact that a naval reserve, of ships and men, is an absolute necessity, and such a reserve can be furnished only by a merchant marine. The value of a strong commercial marine in time of war is hardly to be overestimated. Not only are its vessels available for use as auxiliary cruisers, supply ships, hospital ships, and colliers, but (what is of much more consequence) it can supply under such emergent circumstances large numbers of trained seamen.

These facts are recognized by all the maritime powers, which class their fast mail ships as part of their military resources. Great Britain used them in the Boer war. Japan's use of such merchant vessels in the war with Russia was the chief means of her success, inasmuch as she was thereby enabled to throw within an incredibly short time half a million men into Manchuria.

I have heard it stated, on apparently reliable authority, that Germany has arrangements for the use of her merchant marine in war so far systematized that at any time she could land within thirty days 200,000 armed men on the shores of Long Island and New Jersey. The German mail steamers on the Pacific and Indian oceans, and perhaps elsewhere, have orders as to exactly what they are to do in case of an outbreak of hostilities. Part of the crew of every one of these steamers consists of men who have had naval experience, and the ships themselves are specially fitted for quick conversion into auxiliary cruisers by the mounting of rapid-fire guns, etc.

Another reason for having a merchant marine lies in the fact that for lack of it we are obliged to depend upon foreign nations to carry our overseas mails. Certainly we ought to possess the means of transporting our own mails, under our own flag, to all parts of the world.

Again, it is to be considered that by the acquisition of Hawaii, the Philippines, Porto Rico, Guam and the Canal Zone we have become an empire. It is as necessary to bind the parts of this empire together, by lines of our own, as it was in the sixties to bind East and West together by transcontinental railroads. This is a matter of political necessity, but the incidental commercial benefit is not less obvious.

I might cite a number of other reasons why we should have an American merchant marine, but I will content myself with mention of the immense encouragement that would be given to the shipbuilding industry in the United States by the development of a wise national policy in this direction.

There is an impression in some quarters that officers of our navy are generally hostile to the development of a great American commercial marine. Nothing could be further from the truth. A naval officer of high rank only the other day said to me:

"To those of us who have been long in the service it is a painful thing when we visit Hong Kong, or some such far away port, to see not a single merchant vessel flying the Stars and Stripes there, many years ago, as youngsters, we were accustomed to find in the same harbors twenty or fifty ships, perhaps, with our national colors floating from their mastheads."

Every nation with an extended seaboard provides in some way for the promotion of shipping under its flag. The only exceptions to this rule are China, Turkey and the United States.

Our geographical position gives us better reasons than any other nation in the world for promoting a commercial marine as a sea militia, yet we have done far less in this direction than nations whose resources are scant compared with ours.

The American merchant marine to-day represents a stunted phase of our national development. How literally this is true may be judged from the fact that, whereas in 1860 we had more than 2,000,000 tons of ships engaged in foreign trade, at the present time, half a century later, we have about 800,000 tons.

If we are to recreate our merchant marine, and the American flag is again to be in the seaports of the world, our Government must lend a helping hand. It must give the same sort of help that is bestowed by the British Empire, by Germany, by France, by Japan, and by other great nations upon their own navies of peace. They do not grant "subsidies" under that name, but make what they call "reasonable payment" to their steamship lines for carrying the mails—such payment being on a liberal scale, in consideration of the fact that these vessels are obliged at all times to hold themselves in readiness to aid the Government in case of war.

"A Missing Essential for a Successful War."

By GEORGE DEWEY, Admiral United States Navy.

THE need of auxiliary vessels in time of war is felt both by the army and the navy. In case of operations of a large nature over seas, the needs of the army would be great, and the existence of a large fleet of American-owned merchant vessels, available at once for conversion into transports or supply ships, would undoubtedly be of great importance in expediting the departure of the troops and in supplying them after departure.

Vessels other than the fighting fleet which would be needed by the Navy Department in time of war, and which would largely be drawn from the merchant marine, may be classed as follows: Scouts, colliers, ammunition ships, supply and refrigerating ships, distilling ships, hospital ships, repair and torpedo depot ships, transports, dispatch vessels, tugs.

The most important service which merchant vessels can perform for the navy in time of war is as scouts. Size is an important factor in vessels of this type, as the scouts must be capable of keeping the sea and of making good speed in any weather. Approximately one vessel of this type would be needed in time of war for each battleship.

The navy would need a number of colliers with a cargo capacity of at least 5,000 tons each, and with sufficient speed and steaming radius to enable them to accompany a squadron of battleships. There should be five such colliers for each squadron of eight battleships with its attendant cruisers. A number of colliers of less speed and carrying capacity would also be needed for keeping the coal supply replenished at the various coal depots and for other purposes. The existence of a large merchant marine, from which the colliers could be drawn, especially the fast colliers would be of great advantage to the navy.

Ammunition ships of about 4,000 tons carrying capacity would be required for the purpose of replenishing the ammunition supply of the fleet with reserve ammunition in case of a contemplated action. There should be one such vessel for each squadron of eight battleships with its attendant cruisers.

A number of transports would also be needed by the Navy Department for the transportation of a force of marines for the establishment and defense of advanced naval bases. Each transport should be capable of carrying at least one battalion of marines (about 500 men), with complete outfit of field and camp equipage.

Another benefit which would accrue to the navy from a large fleet of American-owned merchant vessels would lie in the large number of experienced seagoing men, engineers and firemen accustomed to marine engines and boilers, who would form a valuable reserve from which to draw the men for manning the auxiliaries.

Football of the Past—The Old Line Smashing Play, in Which the Members of the Team Were Permitted to Push and Pull the Man Carrying the Ball Until Its Further Progress Was Stayed.

By Guy Otis Brewster

EVERY progressive change, either in work or play, requires some one who will take the initiative and stimulate the inanimative possess of his fellows by suggestion, antagonize present conditions and subject himself to ridicule, or by a combination of suggestion and comparison lead the public to formulate and accept innovations of their own volition.

Boxing (the closed fist) and tennis (the net and ball) games have been man's stand-by entertainments for centuries, and yet it has only been within a comparatively few years that they have assumed in organized form and the principles of combat been transferred from personal liability to an intermediate object of play upon which the strength and skill of the player are expended.

Archeology demonstrates fistfights and net-and-ball games centuries ago, and anthropology teaches us that the essential game principles of combat and endurance have remained the same.

The Marylebone Code marked the beginning of modern tennis, as the Marquis of Queensberry rules signified the era of Volley Smash and the Jolt.

FOOTBALL of 1910 will be an experiment, compared to the game of other years, according to the most eminent authorities. No more will the rushing backfield grind and tear its way through the opposing line, battering and jamming all opposition out of its way, to end in a cosmopolitan mass of arms and legs, which, at the call of an official, resolves itself into twenty-two human beings, their one apparent aim in life being to advance the ball or stay its progress, as the case may be.

Nor shall we see the close massed formations, in which players, more in the line of prize fighters

There are many radical changes in the game as presented to day from that of even last year. Among these is that relative to the length of the game. Different from the old method, it divides the game into four periods, instead of between each "quarter." In connection with this will skate and sway, and fight their way through seventy minutes of play on the chalk-marked gridiron, many of them eventually to be carried up in the hospital or in the grave, as has many been the way in the past.

The casual reader of the football news has been struck by one thing, the number of cripples made in the game, but according to the rules committee, which has spent much time during the last two years in improving and revising it, the play will be more open and cleaner this year than at any time in its history.

In almost every paragraph of the code may be seen the wounds left by the pruning knife of the rules committee. Revision and reform have made an entirely new game of it, and the football warrior of 1910, as well as his coaches and officials, will have to give it some mighty thought before the amazing possibilities in the new rules will make themselves fully apparent.

In the first place, where would the famous diving tackler of other seasons fit in the game as played this year, with the rules saying explicitly that a man must have one foot on the ground when tackling the opponent? And what use shall we make of the old-time straight-arm change comes the decision that a player may be substituted for another at any time. Incidentally, any player who has been removed from the game may be brought back into it at the beginning of any subsequent period.

Old football players have been astonished at this drastic change in the rules. From time immemorial it has been the custom and the rule that a player, once removed, could not again get back into that same game. What does it profit the big guard or tackle, when, after a great deal of trouble from his opposing guard or tackle, he is able in one of the line plunges or close plays, to render that opponent unfit to play, be it from accident or by design, if, after a complete rest that same troublesome opponent can come back into the game at the beginning of another period, strengthened and refreshed, and make himself more troublesome than before?

One of the great dangers in the game—that is, up to this year—has been the open field, flying tackle, caused in many cases by the forward pass and the onside kick of the old rules. While these two plays have not entirely been done away with, they have been modified to a great extent, and the old, thrilling scene of the ball the nature of an open play and giving the opposing backfield a chance to reach it not before recorded it, on account of speedy ends, who, knowing the play coming, could get down faster than the opposing line.

The triple handling of the ball necessary in former years has been done away with, making the quarterback more of a possibility than ever. In many cases the quarterback has been relegated to the position of one of the real backfield, thus adding his strength to all backfield plays. According to this section of the rules, any player except the three centre men on the line of scrimmage, may receive the ball from the snapperback and the quarterback will prove a great help in this way. It is no longer necessary for the quarterback, on what was formerly known as a quarterback run, to run five yards in either side of the line of scrimmage before advancing. The ball may be passed directly from the snapperback to the man who will carry it, and he may advance it in any way he chooses without having to circle the end to comply with the rule.

These are the greatest changes in the rules thought necessary and made by the rules committee during the past year. Of course there are several other changes of minor importance, made only because it was the desire of the officials to make the rules more uniform, but on the whole, the game will be radically different from that of other years.

Speed, throughout the team, is the idea advanced by the officials and coaches of the many big university teams, as the basis on which the game will be played this season. The new rules on the face are made for just such a purpose, and this in itself should mark the passing of the heavy mass formation, tandem plays and other bone crunching pastimes of the big men.

The abolition of the mass play, in addition to preventing many of the great accidents that have happened in the course of the game, should tend in no small degree to equalize the small and big college elevens. The bigger men, always prominent in the old game, have been in nearly every case the product of the larger universities, and the smaller colleges have had to be content with smaller teams, though in every case they have been faster and more quick-thinking than the elevens of the bigger universities.

This will be all done away with under the new rules. The primal demand under them is undoubtedly speed, and as this has always been possessed by the smaller colleges, it will come to them as no new departure. Incidentally, the smaller teams, when playing against the larger universities, will not have to guard their defenses so cautiously against the impact of the beefy forwards of their opponents. This, while reducing the danger in the game to a minimum also povides for a more equal contest, and the larger colleges are sure to find themselves more than once on the point of being beaten by the smaller ones on account of speed alone, an almost impossible thing in the old game.

There is no question in the minds of most of the authorities of the game, but that this season will be mostly experimental, as far as the new rules are concerned. So many changes during the past five years have made the game but a mere shadow of itself, as played by many of the stars whose names are tabulated high in its records, and for this reason it remains undoubted that many of the smaller colleges will make a good impression when opposing the larger universities, and this is just what the rules committee want to bring about.

It remains undoubted, though, that football of 1910, will go a long way toward being an ideal game, both for the players, where not brawn, but brains and speed should be at a premium, and for the spectators, who will in time be better able to understand its plays, and so appreciate the game the more.

section of the "full-arm swing" at head or stomach.

Stop-volleying hard drives at the net requires the same set position and precision as "blocking." Volleying has all the elements and excitement of "in-fighting" with the odds equally in favor of the hardest hitter, hitting for safety from the back court embodies the principles and headwork of sparring for an opening. Side-stepping to right and left for a fast service is identical with side-stepping a blow.

The physical strain in tennis averages greater than in boxing, as the tennis player covers a space 27x39 feet in uninterrupted play for one to two hours daily for a week, in tournament play, and often competes in ten tournaments in a season, while the boxer is engaged but three minutes and rests one, in matches usually lasting from twenty minutes to an hour, in a space from sixteen to twenty-four feet square, and he often does not engage in more than six matches in a year.

Eye strain is greater in tennis, as the object is so much smaller to see, and besides traveling at a high rate of speed, the field, for visual "accommodation," is much greater.

The leads, draws, stops, counters and tactical play for a decisive set are alike, and the damage to the spirit and endurance of a player is ultimately the same, whether the blow falls on the body from a gloved hand or on the ground by a decisively placed ball, and self-control is as necessary and difficult in one as the other and the judgment of distance, time and variation of speed are exercised equally.

Horrible Hobble Happenings

Hobble Embezzlements, Hobble Bone-Breaks, Hobble Church Exiles, Hobble Scandals and Hobble Embarrassments—The Odd Record of a Weird and Vanishing Fashion.

Showing How Mrs. Irene Templeton, Had to Go Up the Church Steps in Her Hobble Gown, Thereby Creating a Near-Scandal.

"She Had on Her Hobble Gown and Couldn't Get Up."

"Turned Loose a Succession of Tetrazzini High C's."

"She Knew That Mouse Wasn't Hobbled."

How Miss Dennett Appeared at a Lawn Party Wearing the Modest "Hobble Knicks."

"Hopelessly Hobbled, She Fell Into the Chasm."

Do you, fair reader, hobble? Are you in the fell grip of the hobble gown? Do you wear hobble garters in order to hobble more hobblefully in your enthusiastic support of this hobblesome fashion?

If so, is your case to be enumerated among these instances of horrible hobble happenings, pictured and described on this page?

If you are not already a martyr to its extraordinary fashion craze, which has swept the whole country—and is still devastating the rural districts—this page may serve the useful purpose of a timely warning.

It was nothing less than the lure of the hobble gown that caused a shortage of $1,911 85 in the accounts of Post Office Sub-Station No. 12, Richmond, Va., a few weeks ago. Postmaster Roy Childrey immediately drew his personal check for the deficiency. Later he said that Miss Rena B. Askew, who had been in charge of the sub-station for several months, had acknowledged to him that she had spent Uncle Sam's money on herself—owing to the strain of having to hand out letters and big hobble gown himself, he only sell postage stamps to so many Richmond girls wearing hobble gowns, while she was unhobbled. Miss Askew's relatives are said to have promptly reimbursed Uncle Sam, who, considering the circumstances, may let her off easy.

In Wareham, Mass., a man was the victim. Jonathan Willetts was not accustomed to hand out letters and big hobble gown himself, he only looked at one so intently as it hobbled along the street that he fell over a rock and broke his leg.

Only last week an automobile conductor in Philadelphia, Pa., considerably perturbed, returned from Pottstown, Pa., minus its license-tag. The chauffeur was sworn to secrecy, and, therefore, the identity of the girl in a hobble skirt, very much tattered about its rear elevation, remains a mystery. The cause of those tatters, however, was confessed.

The girls were tempted to stroll through a pleasant pasture in Chester County, in which some sleek cows and a truculent-looking bull were grazing. Naturally the girl in the hobble gown trailed along behind her companions and when the bull, enraged by some bright colors in her hat, made menacing demonstrations, her chances of reaching the nearest fence before the bull got her were at least 2 to 1 in favor of the bull.

Never a hobble gown hopped over the grass like that one. The unhobbled girls cleared the fence easily, many lengths ahead of the bull, but the hobbled one, alas! she reached the top rail just in time for the bull to assist her over in a manner that put one hobble gown out of commission, though the wearer escaped serious injury.

And there was Miss Alma French, who came to New York from Elmira—where the hobble gown craze still rages—and on being assured by her friends that the hobble fashion was already out of date in the metropolis, decided to give here a last "look in" on her return journey.

Via the subway she reached the Grand Central Station safely, heard the guard say, "Watch your step!" and then, being hopelessly hobbled, fell into the dangerous chasm which she could not step across. The watchful guard rescued her just as the starting train was threatening to hobble her for the rest of her life.

The most unexpected hobble happening thus far certainly is that which befell Mrs. Philander Jones, whose husband is a New Jersey commuter on the Erie Railroad. One evening Mr. Jones having been detained at his New York office did not reach his home station at Paterson, N. J., until after dark, and was, of course, late for dinner.

Hurrying homeward and turning into the quiet street on which his house stands, Mr. Jones was surprised to see, in the gloom, the figure of his wife sitting on the sidewalk before their front gate.

"Oh, Philander, why are you so late? I thought you would never come," wailed Mrs. Jones from her seat on the sidewalk.

And then Mr. Jones suddenly sat down beside his wife. He had slipped on the same banana peel. But Mr. Jones could get up, and as he did so he saw why his wife couldn't. She had on her hobble gown.

Times Square, New York, pestially is the most automobile-infested locality in America—motor cars continually dashing about in all directions at once. Habitues of the Gay White Way have become used to them; but it was different with Miss Clementine Maxwell, who had just arrived from Columbus, Ohio, in search of an engagement to sing in musical comedy.

Miss Maxwell emerged from the subway in all the glory of her hobble gown. Across the street was the office of the manager to whom she had a letter of introduction from her Columbus music teacher—and a sea of darting autos between. At length, in desperation, she made the plunge—hobbled out of the way of two machines, hopped free of three others, and then found herself menaced on all sides at once.

What Miss Maxwell did next perhaps, lest that musical comedy engagement for her. She simply turned loose a succession of Tetrazzini high C's that must have shaken the atmosphere all the way from the Battery to Grant's Tomb. The effect was magical. Not a wheel stirred again till Miss Maxwell was safe across.

Young Mrs. George W. Waterman, well known in Chicago West Side society, was the first woman in her set to declare the hobble gown out of date, and present here to the housemaid. Her husband with many chuckles has dilated the true reason therefor.

No hobble gown crazed woman ever was more thoroughly hobbled than my wife," said Mr. Waterman. "Three and three-quarter inches was the limit of her stride when trying to walk in the thing. Returning from the theatre one evening, after I had carried my wife up the front steps, while I was hanging up my hat in the hall, I heard her agonized screams issuing from the drawing room.

"Thinking of burglars, I rushed to her rescue. A mouse was scurrying across the floor and my wife lay on her stomach across the seat of a chair. She was in a dead faint. I saw it all in a flash. Seeing the mouse, and realizing how impossible it was either to raise her hobble skirt or jump on a chair, she simply fainted away. She knew that mouse wasn't hobbled!"

You might call it a near-scandal that brought about that Indianapolis, Ind., attempt to put embroidered, long pantalettes on ladies who insist on wearing hobble gown.

Young Mrs. Irene Templeton, of the neighboring City of Terre Haute, wore her hobble gown to church one Sunday morning and, in raising the garment sufficiently to enable her to negotiate the front steps showed enough of a pair of trim ankles to set fifty tongues wagging and nearly spoil the service.

Mrs. Templeton was then entertaining at her home a school friend from Indianapolis—Miss Polly Dennett, a fun-loving young woman, who promptly, on her return home, had a pair of cloth, embroidered pantalettes made and actually wore them with her hobble gown at a lawn party. As the effect—pictured on this page—was ludicrous, the merry-hearted young woman felt simply rewarded.

The appearance of the hobble gown at his services inspired the Rev. Peter Henry, pastor of the First Reformed Church of Grovville, N. J., to declare from his pulpit that women dressing in that fashion were "soulless lunatics," who, if they "must hobble," would have to do it outside the church doors.

So highly was the hobble gown at first esteemed that "hobble garters" soon appeared on the market.

Miss Alice Willett, of Syracuse, N. Y., was thus hobbled when a small mud-puddle suddenly glimmered upon her during a moonlight walk. The hobble gown might have availed in the sudden attempt to cross the puddle—but the hobble garter caused her to sit down in the middle of it.

My Secrets of Beauty

BEAUTIFYING THE EAR—

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

MME. CAVALIERI talks to-day of that much neglected part of the body, the ear. She says it is the least cared for part of the body "perhaps because the owner does not see it," but unfortunately, others do.

Mme. Cavalieri recommends the ear hood for ears that are too prominent, and rolling the ear that is not prominent enough. She describes right and wrong methods of cleansing the ear and recommends safe instruments.

Her theme next week will be: "Walking as a Beautifier." She will tell how to walk, where to walk and when to walk, to derive the greatest benefit and beauty from the exercise. She will describe the costume to be worn, and other preparations for and precautions against taking cold, after the walk.

"For ears that stand out too prominently from the head is an aid."

"Syringe the ear gently with tepid water."

"If the ear is not prominent enough it can be improved by gentle pulling."

IF EARS are of an abnormally prominent cast, as the feet were reduced in size to the Chinese standard if they are but they were much improved if shapely well set into the head using neither. The method still has friends, and it is or too prominent to be too obscure, is often employed. A poet likening the ture has done he fact in giving your ear to a "crumpled rose leaf" recommended good looking ears and you must by cited some maidens to the fatal care supplement her gifts crushed appearance of the outer ear.

You must keep the ear cleansed, of But for the ear that stands out too acute hearing and of a healthy color, prominently from the head, the ear hood and as fine texture as possible. If nature is a good and scientific and ture has not done her work you must. Made of strong tape, and fashioned with do more than just that. universe Line, is that the young simply

The The old fashioned ear muffs of velvet or plush, worn to protect the ears from the cold, are also used for the purpose of bringing the ears into closer and friendlier terms with the head. Connected by a narrow, elastic band, drawn around the back of the head, they are of some substance in the respect. But their warmth is an objection, making the ear delicate and susceptible to cold. The porous cotton substitutes for them are better.

If the ear is not prominent enough lying too close to the head, it can be much improved, especially in youth, by gentle pulling, with fingers dipped into Glycerine, 1 oz.

Iodine pink, 6 drops.

Begin at the top of the ear and pull the ear slowly upward. Repeat the same process backward. And pull the lobe downward. Place the first two fingers of the hand behind the ear, and with the thumb roll the cartilage over the two fingers, then reverse and roll it over the thumb, at the same time gently stretching it. In a few weeks this treatment will cause a decided improvement in the general appearance of the ear.

The ear is more neglected than any other part of the body. This is due perhaps to the fact that we cannot see it. It is not constantly within the range of our view, as are the hands and the feet. A hasty passage over the outer part of the ear with a sponge or damp cloth, hasty drying, and most persons think their duty to the ear is done, while the inward ear requires cleansing twice a week and the outer every day.

The ivory swabs, with a tiny spoon at one end and a small sponge at the other, are good ear cleansers if carefully used. The ear is a delicate as organ as the eye, and must be as carefully treated. Handle yours as gently as though it were a well loved babe.

The spoon end of the swab should be slowly and carefully inserted into the ear and used for removing the wax. If the wax is hard, don't risk puncturing the delicate eardrums by persisting with the ivory instrument. Turn the head well on the side and pour into it a few drops of warm, never hot, olive oil. Never use cold oil for the ear must suffer from either extreme of heat or cold. Ear picks are made in various shapes, but by some those made of bone or ivory are preferred because of their pliancy, especially such as [illegible] as that of hardened wax which may become an irritating mass if left in the ear. After the oil has been in the ear a few minutes turn the head over and allow that which has not been absorbed into the wax to run out.

Follow this step of the treatment by syringing the ear gently with tepid water. Be careful to use only slight force, for instance as much as is generally used in an ordinary perfume atomizer or small nasal douche, for the menace of bursting the ear drums is always before one, and it is an injury easily inflicted and irreparable. Let the water remain in a few minutes then, turning the head, allow it to run out. This time place a pink cloth to be used again and with success. If you fail to go at once to an ear specialist.

Occasionally there is an offensive discharge from the ear. This usually indicates disease and shows your need of the services of an ear specialist. The immediate unpleasant results can be avoided by syringing the ear carefully with an ear syringe filled with Warm water, ½ cup.

Carbolic acid, 3 drops.

For cleansing the inner ear, and even for softening the wax, the ear may be washed with Warm water, ½ cupful.

Sulphuric ether, 3 drops.

Never use a sharp instrument, as a pin, in the ear. If no ear-pick is at hand, a hairpin may be used, but only when its rounded, closed end has been wrapped round well with cotton.

Sometimes we see ears that are otherwise well kept and wholesome looking disfigured by the growth at the orifice of a few bristling, stiff hairs. These, unless very strong and stiff, may be removed by the use of tweezers, without pain, if the outer part of the ear is first prepared by an ether spray. But this, though often done, is too delicate an operation to be safely performed by one's self, in my opinion. I should advise going to a physician and paying him for his skilled touch and his knowledge of antiseptic remedies. Had I such a blemish I should consult an expert; or if, as in the Summer, this is not practicable, I would have the intruding hairs clipped, using blunt-edged scissors. Seldom can the hand of the owner perform this operation. The aid of a relative or friend should be sought if one has no maid.

The normal color of the ear is a delicate pink. When the ears are chronically red they may have been rudely handled, or there may be an irritation caused by cold. In an ordinary case this wash is effective in reducing the superfluous color:

Rosewater, 1 gill.
Pulverized borax, ½ teaspoonful.
Pulverized alum, 1 teaspoonful.
Tincture of benzoin, 1 tablespoonful.

Apply this to the ear with absorbent cotton, drying it after a few minutes.

If the ears are too white, or of a sallow tinge, gentle massage will set the blood flowing normally through them. This will be aided by the application of the following, which should be well rubbed into the skin of the outer ear for two or three minutes:

Warm water, 2 ounces.
Glycerine, 1 ounce.
Spirits of ammonia, ¼ ounce.

In the application of lotions as well as after a bath be sure to dry the ear and all the surrounding space. Deafness has been caused by letting the hair remain wet about the ear, developing neuralgia, pain in the head, and hardness or sometimes an actual absence of hearing.

Never box a child's ears, because his hearing might be impaired or lost through your violence.

Never allow amateurs to pierce your ears. Let a medical man do the work, preventing possibilities of blood poisoning or the tumors or even cancers that have, according to tradition, resulted from this work badly done.

From Bristol, Tenn., I receive a letter inquiring "what to do to make flesh."

When I want to add curves to my figure and pounds to my weight, I sleep an hour or two longer, or if I cannot make myself sleep, I lie in bed longer. I take a nap after my luncheon. I eat sweets and fat meat, and drink a great deal of milk or cream, and I drive everywhere, instead of sometimes walking.

Butter is one of the most speedy fatteners. Eat much butter on your bread and spread your potatoes thickly with it. Eat gravies. Use olive oil more than vinegar in your salad dressings. I have known women to gain flesh by taking oil internally. Physicians fatten their consumptive patients with this.

All the farinaceous foods, such as bread, cereals, rice, sago, tapioca, are fattening. So is chocolate, especially drunk with milk in the morning. Lima bean are among the fatteners. Massage the body with olive oil. Or rub into the skin this preparation, recommended by the Russian, Dr Poitkonoff:

Fresh lard, 300 grams.
Alcohol, 80 per cent., 20 grams.
Essence of rosemary, 11 drops.
Essence of bergamot, 11 drops.

This emollient is recommended by the same specialist:

Tannin, ½ gram.
Lanoline, 30 grams.
Oil of sweet almonds, 20 grams.

A Newark correspondent says:

"I read your articles first thing every Sunday morning. Won't you please write something in regard to superfluous hairs? Is the electric needle the only way to remove hairs?"

Electrolysis is the most successful method. But even in this method of treatment the hairs reappear unless the middle of each hair follicle is pierced. Hairs may be removed by steel tweezers, but pull them gently and do not break them.

Cellaline tea, strained and left to stand for twelve hours, has often been successfully applied with cloths, the compress remaining on the face after several hours, sometimes all night.

The Fight for the Vanishing Pearl.

FOR the past fifteen years, pearls have been steadily increasing in price. Diamonds have been going up, too, but not at the same rate as pearls.

The shortness of the pearl supply which is responsible for the increased prices demanded for the jewels, cannot be charged against the oyster or the pearl mussel, which are as active as ever, but against the syndicate which has gained control of the market and is hoarding the jewels to force up the prices.

Although a high degree of skill has been acquired in the making of artificial pearls, so that only an expert can distinguish the well made fake from the real, most women would rather have one well-shaped genuine pearl than a necklace of the made-by-man variety.

Unless the corner on the pearl market is broken up, however, it looks as though pearls will soon be far above the means of every one except the millionaire class.

Besides being the best beloved jewels among women, the pearl is by far the oldest of precious stones known to history. The records of the very earliest times show that the pearl was always prized above other jewels. It delighted the eyes of the woman of the ancients, and was offered as a sacrifice in the temples of their gods.

According to tradition pearls are the symbol of tears. This idea is not merely poetical, but is based on the process by which they are made.

A small parasite finds its way into an oyster or pearl-mussel and the creature moans. These tears are composed largely of lime, which envelopes the parasite and eventually forms a pearl. Sometimes the parasite is able to soften the casing and escape, and the rudimentary pearl is crushed and ruined.

If, however, the living organism dies, the calcifying process continues and the pearl continues to grow in size as long as the mussel lives. A medium-sized pearl takes six or seven years to "grow" in this fashion, but by the end of that period it is a comparatively valuable commercial article.

It is commonly supposed that pearls originate in a grain of sand that finds its way into the oyster, but scientific research has recently discovered that but a very small percentage of the jewels originate in that way, the parasite serving as the core in the vast majority of cases. Out of several hundred pearls declassified with intent to ascertain their origin, not more than three or four revealed any other core than the remains of parasites.

Nevertheless, it is quite true that almost any small article or foreign materials which is inserted in an oyster may be made the nucleus for a pearl, and the Chinese have availed themselves of this fact for centuries.

They put small balls or matrices of leaden idols between the shell and the outer coat, and within two years these receive a thick coat of pearl substance. In this way, well-fashioned idols of real pearl are constructed and the Chinese value them very highly.

The art of pearl-marking in this fashion has greatly improved in recent years. Experiment has shown that the nature of the foreign body introduced into the oyster is of the greatest importance, not all calcific being suitable for the purpose. Little balls of mother-of-pearl work admirably.

Probably the most interesting phase of the pearl industry, however, is the pearl-fishing stations. Pearls are found both in sea water and in rivers, those found in the sea being far more valuable than the fresh water variety. In the Persian Gulf the business has assumed tremendous proportions. The fishing privileges belong to the Government, which derives a net revenue of at least two million dollars a year from the fishing operations. In former years, this sum is believed to have been much larger. Another famous pearl-fishing region is on the west coast of Ceylon, near Aripo.

During the fishing season the beach assumes a lively appearance. Thousands of fishermen, jewelry dealers and tradesmen of every description flock to the burning sands for the sake of gain. The mussels caught are the property of the British Government. After they have been caught they are taken ashore, divided into small piles, and then, without having been opened, they are sold at auction.

Fishing for pearls is by no means an easy task. Those who make a livelihood out of it have to endure all sorts of privations and meet all kinds of dangers. From the earliest childhood the natives are taught diving, and their efforts are often stimulated with the whip.

No diving apparatus is used by the natives in this work. A large stone is tied to the diver's feet and the stone is hung up alongside the boat. At a given signal the stone is let down and with it the diver disappears beneath the water. Arrived at the pearl-mussel reefs, he catches as much as he can and is immediately pulled up again. Well-trained divers are capable of remaining one minute below the surface in a depth of twenty-five to fifty feet.

The pearl mussel is seldom found in greater depths than that.

The river pearl is produced in the same way as the sea pearl. They are found in every continent, but are never as large as the Oriental variety, and are worth about a third as much. Small pills wetted with camphor and smooth and round pieces of mother-of-pearl are used as cores and more or less beautiful pearls are thus produced. About five thousand families make a living out of this industry in Tschangtschi and Siao-Tschangpan, two Chinese villages, and in various other villages pearl making in this way is the principal industry.

The artificial pearl is a different proposition entirely. The best workmen are in France, although Germany is now producing a very fine grade of artificial pearls. Small hollow glass balls are blown and the clever workman can give them the regular shape of natural pearls. Into these balls is inserted a mixture known as "essence a perles," which is made of scales of white fishes mixed with salt, water and ammonia. This forms a liquid pap closely resembling in appearance the real pearl.

No less than 50,000 whitefish are required to obtain a little over two pounds of pearl essence. With the pap, a waxlike material is put into the glass ball by means of a tube, so as to make the pap adhere to the ball. Wax was often used for this purpose, but it was found that pure wax melted too readily, and the compound now used was invented.

The outer covering of these pearls has a faint opalescence, and the sparkling surface of the pearl enables it to produce a real pearl-like effect.

In view of the [illegible] now demanded for real pearls, the artificial variety [illegible] seems, even among the richest, to afford the genuine article.

"This Is So Sudden" Statistics.

A GERMAN statistician has calculated that in the case of proposals of marriage 80 per cent of the suitors press the hand of their beloved, 24 per cent conclude their speech with an embrace, 4 per cent kiss the hair, 2 per cent kiss the hand, 2 per cent fall on their knees, 1 per cent swallow nervously before they declare their passion.

Ten per cent open and close their mouth without being able to utter a single word, and 2 per cent make their proposal while standing on one foot.

With regard to the women, on the other hand, 60 per cent sink helpless into the nearest easy arms, for whose proposal they have been waiting, 20 per cent quickly hide their faces, 1 per cent swoons away, 4 per cent are genuinely amazed, 14 per cent gaze silently into the suitor's eyes, and 1 per cent runs away to tell a girl friend.

Where Children Are Fed With Oatmeal

Among the homes of the educated—on the boulevards, in the higher-class sections and university districts—an actual canvass shows that seven in eight regularly serve oatmeal.

The Ignorant Do Not

Among the less intelligent, where pure air and cleanliness are also rare, oatmeal is hardly known. A canvass of New York and Chicago tenement districts shows that not one home in twelve serves oats

But where people know best what brains and bodies require—where science directs the proper food for a child—nearly every home with children in it is an oatmeal home

The use of oatmeal is not dependent on money, for oats form a most economical food. Quaker Oats—the finest oats produced—costs but one-half cent per dish

It depends on one's knowledge of food values, and of children's needs. It depends on one's hygienic care.

Some Human Statistics

We find that two-thirds of the wayward boys—detained in prison schools—never ate oatmeal at home. With very few indeed was it a regular dish

By a canvass of 30 poorhouses we find that but one in each thirteen of the inmates came from an oatmeal home

In four State Penitentiaries we find that not two per cent of the prisoners had oatmeal as a childhood food.

Among men and women in the lowliest vocations we find very few who were brought up on oatmeal But among the highly successful—among senators, governors and financiers—the larger percentage came from oatmeal homes President Taft is among them.

Out of fifty of the highest ranking professors in a great university, only two do not eat oatmeal Four-fifths of all college students came from oatmeal homes.

Inquiries addressed to 12,000 physicians show that four in five serve oatmeal on their tables The four finest hotels in New York serve an average of one pound of oatmeal daily to each 19 guests.

We submit these facts without comment Each may judge for himself if they confirm scientific opinion that the caliber of a child is largely affected by food Each can see for himself how generally oatmeal has become the food of the intelligent.

Oats—The Premier Food

A great English educator says that 90 per cent of a child's fitness is fixed before it enters a school. And that fitness depends largely on food

The first place as a food for the years of growth is given to oats They are richer than all other cereals in proteids, organic phosphorus and lecithin.

Proteids are the body-builders, the tissue repairers, the energy-givers Phosphorus is the most important food for the brain, and lecithin for the nerves and nerve centers

No other food is so well-balanced as oats. None so well meets the vital requirements of childhood and adolescence. And no other food, as a racial food, has bred a people so hardy as the Scotch.

And oatmeal, with all its wealth of nutriment, is among the cheapest, most delicious foods

Quaker Oats

The Finest Oats, Made Extremely Enticing

In the finest oats we can buy, we find only ten pounds per bushel good enough for Quaker Oats. We sift the oats 62 times to sort out only the richest, plumpest grains.

When these selected grains are prepared by our process they form the very utmost in oat food Children delight in it—nobody ever grows tired of it

Quaker Oats—the queen of the oat foods—now commands by far the largest sale in the world, because of its choiceness, its tempting deliciousness It will pay you well to insist on it

INSTANT RELIEF FROM SORE THROAT.

Murray's Lotion is supreme in all forms of sore throat. Whether the disorder is due to cold or other cause. Murray's Lotion takes instant hold upon the disease, removes all dry, itching, hacking sensations, reduces the inflammation and restores the mucous membrane to normal, healthy condition. Tonsils, swollen and inflamed, yield quickly to its soothing action, forestalling that dreaded disease, tonsilitis. The dangers of pneumonia, bronchitis, catarrh and all obstinate diseases of the mucous membrane are easily prevented by the timely use of this valuable home remedy.

The Murray Chemical Co.

Gentlemen—My sixteen-year-old son, Eugene, had an ulcerated sore throat for ten days, which greatly frightened us. We tried peroxide and four other supposed "cures," which did not help him. A friend, who had used Murray's Lotion, told me about it, and I bought a bottle. Eugene used it as a gargle, and in one day his throat was almost clear. In 24 hours he was practically well. Thankfully yours

Why We Use 3-Ply Yarn

We use a yarn in Holeproof Hosiery that costs an average of 70 cents per pound.

The cotton from which it is made comes from the Sea Islands and from Egypt.

There are no better yarns to be had. They are 3-ply, soft and fine.

We could buy common 2-ply yarn for almost half what we pay for 3, but the 3-ply is stronger The hose can thus be made thinner

Nobody wants hosiery any lighter than we can weave with this soft 3-ply yarn.

Nobody demands a more stylish hosiery, for "Holeproof" is the very height of perfect style.

$33,000 a Year for Inspection

We have had 38 years of experience. For the past 12 years we have been able to make a hosiery so good that we could guarantee six pairs six months.

We spend $33,000 a year merely to see that each pair we send out is perfection. You never buy "Holeproof" and find a defect in them. We could be less careful if we sold our hose without our name on them.

Outlasts the Guarantee

"Holeproof" are so soft, stylish and comfortable that they are to-day the most popular hose in the world.

Only a very small percentage comes back for replacement.

Yet "Holeproof" costs no more than scores of heavy and coarse imitations.

"Holeproof" are the original guaranteed hose, with years of successful experience back of them.

No amateur brand can be half as good. It is worth while to insist on the genuine.

The way to know them is to look for the name "Holeproof" on the toe. If it's "Wearlong" or "Wear-forever" or some other such word, you haven't the genuine Holeproof Hose. See that the name is "Holeproof."

must be decorated frequently because of hard usage and the constant change of tenants. Rarely do you find two tenants with the same ideas of office or apartment wall decorations. It is vitally important that you please the incoming tenant. In the past it was the custom to "slap on" the never-satisfactory wall paper or kalsomine, because it was cheap, and for the moment would partially satisfy the tenant. With the discovery of this condition is changing. The tenant wants Alabastine because it will carry out his ideas of color harmony at a price which is satisfactory to the landlord. The wise landlord wants Alabastine because it pleases the tenant, is more beautiful than kalsomine or wall paper and lasts longer. More important still, Alabastine does not furnish breeding places for the insect pests which infest the larger apartment buildings where cheap kalsomine and wall papers are used. Alabastine will not only produce any color effect desired, but also acts as a perfect germicide. This quality alone makes the Alabastined wall a necessity in the modern apartment or office building.

Alabastine, where used, can be applied coat over coat. You need not move the furniture if careful workmen are employed. It's natural cementing qualities make it a part of the wall. On the other hand, kalsomine is applied to the walls with animal glue, which decays, and when kalsomine colors fade, as they invariably do, the walls must be scraped in order to retint. Dirt and annoyance result.

Wall paper is out of place on the walls of office and apartment buildings. Kalsomine is unsatisfactory. Alabastine is absolutely the most beautiful, the most artistic, the most sanitary, the most economical, the only perfect material for decorating walls.

Tenants should insist that Alabastine be used in decorating the walls of their apartments and offices. The landlord will give you the best—which is plainly Alabastine, and particularly so when he sees that it is not only satisfactory to you, but the best and most economical wall treatment for him to use.

Insist on receiving it in original package and have the Alabastine mixed on the job. Do not accept inferior substitutes. You will be disappointed. Library slips in every package. If not found out name in red from package.
